STANDARD SPECIFICATIONS FOR STEEL BUILDING WORK

Will Be Drafted By a Committee of Engineers--Decision of the Canadian Engineering Standards Association.

OTTAWA, Nov. 6—(By Canadian Press).—The formation of a committee to draft standard specifications for steel structures for buildings was approved at the tenth meeting of the main committee of the Canadian Engineering Standards Association held here yesterday. This work is to be carried on in co-operation with a similar committee in the United States.

In the preliminary stages of this work, assistance will be given by the Engineering Institute of Canada the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, leading firms engaged in the fabrication of steel structures and well-known engineers engaged in this branch of work.

A report of a conference on the proposed Canadian Electrical Code was presented for consideration. This conference was held last May on the invitation of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, and was attended by representatives nominated by a number of the provincial governments. The report recommended that a Canadian Engineering Standards Association committee be formed to deal with the question by endeavoring to obtain agreement between the various provincial authorities as to the rules and regulations to be enforced regarding the testing, approval and installation of electrical fittings and appliances. The report was approved and it was decided to follow its recommendations, the proposed committee including in its membership representatives nominated by the provincal authorities, as well as other local and municipal authorities concerned. with the co-operation of members nominated by the manufacturers interested.

A scheme of reclassification of the committees of the association dealing with various branches of industry conforming with that adopted in other countries, was approved in principle. A special financial committee to take necessary measures for obtaining additional financial assistance, was formed and a letter was read from the Japanese Engineering Standards Committee announcing the complete destruction of their office and office records at Tokio in the recent earthquake. The secretary was directed to express the sympathy of the Canadian association in their loss.

DOCTORS TESTIFY IN NARCOTIC CASE.

Support Ottawa Doctor's Ambulatory Method of Treating Addict.

OTTAWA, Nov. 6.—The charge of furnishing drugs to persons other than those requiring drugs in medical treatment preferred against Dr. Gordon E. Booth, by officers of the R. C.M.P. has resolved itself to a duel of expert evidence. Dr. Booth, although acquitted and fined $200 on the first charge, which dealt with a specific sale of drugs on Sept. 17, was again on trial yesterday for a specific sale of drugs on Sept. 22. Counsel for the defence to-day called five local doctors who all supported, in substance, Dr. Booth's method of treating a special agent of the R.C.M.P., supposed to be an addict, by the ambulatory method, which means the giving of supplies of drugs to the addict for self administration. The case is proceeding.

The Crown is prepared to assume the expense of calling all defence witnesses the Rev. J. Adelard Delorme may require in his trial on the charge of having killed his half brother Raoul, with the exception of expert witnesses who may testify as to bullets, blood, or handwriting.

EUROPE DRIFTING OVER A PRECIPICE

Speaker Not Very Optimistic of the Outlook

TORONTO, Nov. 6.— (Canadian Press.)—That there was an increasing greyness in life of Europe, despite superficial gayety in some directions, was the statement of Prof. A. T. De Lury, Dean of University College, in an address to the Young Men's Canadian Club at the regular meeting last night on "Impressions of a Visit to England, Ireland and France." The speaker was not optimistic about the present conditions, and said that the world seemed to be drifting to business and political chaos which only right thinking would arrest.

"Water tanks, furnaces and pipes for hot air, water or steam should be adequately insulated. In many of the recent houses, especially those 'built to sell' the construction is so defective that a reasonably tight room cannot be secured. Fuel savings of 15 to 25 per cent. are easily possible by making the house tight.

"Most houses are kept too warm. About 25 per cent. of the house fuel is used in raising the room temperature from 60 per cent. to 70 per cent. Houses can be kept 5 degrees to 10 degrees lower than is customary — that is, kept at 62 degrees to 68 degrees—without any discomfort or any danger to health. Keeping the house temperature lower is the easiest way to save fuel.

The Proper Humidity.

"In most houses—especially when hot-air furnaces are used—the room air is too dry for health and comfort. That is the 'moisture content' called humidity is too low. A room with proper humidity of air — not less than 30 per cent.—will be more comfortable and healthful at a low temperature, than one where the moisture content is too low. Therefore, with proper humidity, lower temperatures may be comfortably maintained and less fuel used.

"The humidifying equipment usually available is grossly inadequate. For instance, with zero temperature of intake air, to maintain 40 per cent. of relative humidity, with the room temperature of 70 degrees F., for 9,000 cubic feet of air per hour—which would be proper for an average size house with a family of 5—it would be necessary to evaporate about one-half gallon of water per hour.

"Most hot air furnaces take their cold air only from the outside. This is wrong. When the basement is clean, by merely taking the air out of the basement—at least in severe and windy weather—a saving of 20 per cent. to 30 per cent. in the fuel required to heat the house can be made and the house kept more comfortable.

"The public has been erroneously taught to believe that only the so-called 'domestic sizes' of anthracite could be used in the home. The small 'steam sizes' represent 29 per cent. of the total anthracite mined. As the public—through lack of understanding of the facts—has been unwilling to use these they become mere by-products and are sold below cost of production at whatever they will bring and used in competition with bituminous coal without regard to their intrinsic value. For instance, when the f.o.b. mine price on 'stove size' was $8.10 the 'steam size' brought as low as $1.50 per ton. The loss on the 'steam sizes' must be made up on the 'domestic sizes.' Yet with proper utilization methods these steam sizes can be successfully used in the home.

"Trade customs and improper utilization methods have resulted in an unnecessary number of sizes. These all add to the ultimate cost. From the public's viewpoint it would be very desirable to arrange for an immediate reclassification and the adaptation of domestic appliances to the use of the smaller sizes, that, under existing market conditions, are sold in competition with bituminous coal.

"Natural gas is on the decline and the demand is greater than the available supply and should be used with care as manufactured gas must be used. It is worth twice any manufactured gas that can be made; therefore, two cubic feet of manufactured gas will be required to replace one cubic foot of natural gas. Candle power standards for manufactured gas are obsolete, of no value to the public and should be abandoned. Due to crude fuel and operating conditions, manufactured gas must rapidly go to a lower heating value standard so as to permit the use of fuels and processes not now available. In Pennsylvania the beehive coke oven gas wasted four and one-half times the total amount of manufactured gas sold in the State.

"Oil is desirable for cooking and incidental house heating when gas is not available, but, because of operating limitations and inevitable future price conditions, will not come into general use for house heating.

"Electricity for cooking and heating cannot solve the home fuel problem. It would take about six times as much coal to generate electric energy for house heating as would be required to use the coal direct in the home. If the forty-six million horsepower of undeveloped water powers in the United States were fully developed, and this without regard to whether it was good business to do so, this total hydro-electric energy could heat less than 4 per cent. of our homes. The home heating problem must be solved by proper use of available fuels."

TO INSURE PARCELS FOR GREAT BRITAIN

The local postmaster, Mr. John Corkery, has been advised by the Post Office Department that parcel post packages addressed to Great Britain, may on and after the 15th of November, 1923, be accepted for insurance under the same terms and conditions as apply to parcels posted for delivery within Canada, with the exception that the 3c and 6c fees are cancelled for Great Britain, so that the scale of Insurance fees for Great Britain will be as follows:

A MAN AND WOMAN SEEM COMPANIONS

It is Woman's Fault that They Have Been Considered Rivals.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 6.—It has been woman's fault that they've been considered rivals, rather than companions, of men in business.

It is to woman's credit, however, that this spirit of rivalry is gradually waning and a harmonious accord, just as among men alone, is revealing itself.

Thus summarizes Miss Adelia Prichard, this city's leading business woman, the social position of women in business. "In the beginning of a time, she predicts, when women will be working with men, just as men do with men, when the business man or worker will not look askance at the woman by his side.

Miss Prichard is manager of the women's department of the Broadway Bank, here. Lately, she has been elected president of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs of America.

Self-Made

Born in the bleak mining settlement of Baker, Ore., this business woman has depended largely on her own resourcefulness all her life. Now she feels equal to any man in business.

"There is no real antagonism between man and woman," she contends. "That which exists is superficial. Broad-minded persons have never denied woman her right to pursue her inclinations."

But men need have no fear of their numerical supremacy in business, she adds.

Room For All

"There will probably never be any usurpation of men's positions, because not nearly all women will wish to work or take up pursuits. But for those who do wish to enter the many fields open for them places will be found.

"A new era of understanding is approaching. Women and men will co-operate in business and in all fields of endeavor. Each will learn from the other and progress will be on a higher plane, more substantial and beneficial than it has ever been.

"And through it all, woman will always be woman, losing none of her feminine appeal, but gaining much in wisdom."

DEAD MAN FOUND IN THICK MARSH

Yes There Is a Lot of Crime in the Wake of Prohibition,

At Windsor where a lot of liquor is smuggled across the river into Detroit and onto other cities, the police find a dead man wrapped in a blanket and buried in a marsh.

"Another victim of the rum-runners," the police say. Quite a common thing to find mysteriously murdered victims around Windsor.

That's to be expected. The worst element of the underworld co-operates with the bootlegging traffic. Its big profits lure crooks who otherwise would be blowing safes or holding men up with pistols.

Yes, there's a lot of crime in the wake of prohibition. Murder, burglary, forgery, counterfeiting. Due to prohibition? Many think so. But—

The crime that trails prohibition is small compared with the crime that was hatched in the old-time saloon days.

All very well to be alarmed about crime accompanying prohibition. But let's not lose sight of the crime that accompanied the wide-open bar.

John Barleycorn always was a bad citizen. He was the king of the underworld. Driven to cover, he naturally continues his operations to as great an extent as possible.

People have become so intensely interested in discussing prohibition that they are inclined to overlook the fact that the real problem is just what it was originally—the havoc of liquor.

It took generations of education and publicity to arouse people to the evils of King Alcohol. The injuriousness of liquor—to the health, to the home and to the nation—should be remembered indelibly. The details of prohibitoin enforcement are secondary.

A WHITE TRADER MURDERED ESKIMO IN THE FAR NORTH

Eskimo Woman Slain Because She Preferred the Affections of an Eskimo Man.

In the Far North a jealous white fur trader killed an Eskimo woman who preferred the affections of an Eskimo man of her tribe. This Eskimo man shifted his love to a married Eskimo woman and killed her husband with his spear so he could marry the widow.

This started a blood feud. The final reckoning showed seven killings—the white trader, a Royal Mounted corporal, three Eskimo men, an Eskimo woman and an Eskimo child.

The whole affair was the most blood curdling, melodramatic crime wave in Arctic history.

In out-movied the movies, the "color" including a band of stranglers led by an Indian sorceress. Truth is stranger than the movies.

This Eskimo crime wave was staged beyond the outskirts of civilization. But murder is murder in the jurisdiction of the Royal Mounted, whose numbers are indifferent to distance or time.

The surviving murderers were rounded up in a log jail.

By radio, word was flashed southward to Edmonton, Canada.

Judge Dubuc, of the Alberta courts, made a 3500-mile round trip into the Far North, presided over the trials, passed sentences. In making the trip, his conveyances included train, motorboat, steamboat, scow and canoe. At one point in the journey, machinery eclipsed romance while his boat was portaged 10 miles by auto tractor.

When the long arm of the law reaches out, grabs criminals and sends a judge 3500 miles to try them in court, we realize how small the world has become for the individual criminal. The law now blankets nearly every part of the earth—as far as the individual lawbreaker is concerned.

A long way to go before law-breaking nations will be held to accounting with similar unrelenting severity. But it'll come, in time.

Rum-Runners More Active on Border.

BUFFALO, N.Y., November 6. — (United Press.) — The Niagara frontier rum runners are to-day more active than at any time since prohibition came into force, and the Federal authorities seem to be unable to cope with the situation.

According to collector of Customs Fred Bradley, three groups of rum smugglers are now operating between Canada and American points on the Niagara River, Lake Ontario and Lake Erie. A fourth group that claims it will make daily shipments to Buffalo via Grand Island in the Niagara River, is soon to start business, it is stated.

The collector has asked for two speedy motor boats for use in running down the smugglers. The rum ships are painted a navy grey and and cannot be easily discerned at night.

One line operates from Port Colborne, Ont., on Lake Erie, to Buffalo. Another runs from Belleville, Ont., on Lake Ontario, to Olcott, N. Y. The third runs from Port Stanley or Port Dover, Ont., to points near Buffalo on Lake Erie or the Niagara River.

The new smuggling ring that promises to start operations soon comes from Windsor, Ont., where it is now smuggling liquor to Detroit. It also operates fast boats to Erie, Pa., and Cleveland, Ohio.

Customs inspectors have watched many nights recently in the hope of catching smugglers as they attempted to unload their cargoes, but of no avail. The smugglers maintain a careful watch on shore as well as on the water.

The Sixth Reel

by Jack Lait

EDITH was a film-raised girl, having graduated from pigtailhood to adolescence when the movies attained their high peak of popularity as fare for young and old. In place of reading "Waverley" and Elsie books and "He Loved Her Madly," as did our mothers at her age, she had gone almost nightly to see the Hypersuper-Ultim-extra special first-runs. Therefore she had a scenario mind and a celluloid imagination.

"Life," as she had learned it from the parlor comedies, the underworld shockers, the Western melos and the triangle treatises, entered about "love," which same was a spontaneous combustion generated in the hearts of two young people of opposite sexes thrown into contact by fortuitous circumstances, which ceased immediately thereafter to be fortuitous. Followed then "complications," engendering suspense, sympathy, hardships, obstacles, hurdles, chasms, conspiracies and labyrinthian difficulties, until——

Ah, the fade-out. The always-welcome, never-daunted happy ending. After which what? After which the cracked slide saying "Good-Night!" No! After which, presumably, wedding bells, happiness.

The end of the fifth reel always saw the two worried, abused lovers in one another's clutching and hungry arms, and that seemed to be the end of their woes, and the beginning of their serene, uncomplicated, suspenseless and symphonic chapter, which would run on and on and on until death did them part.

Now, Edith had met Hector through a fortuitous circumstance—she answered an ad for a competent bill clerk, was accepted, though she knew in her heart that she was neither competent nor a bill clerk, and Hector, the assistant chief auditor of the biscuit factory, had engaged her—on sight. Then had begun her complications. In a week she had everything in the place complicated, nothing as much so as Hector, who was cuckoo.

There were no rivers to swim or mountain trails to ride in the dead of night after Uncle Sam's brave cavalry, but the head of the department certainly did let out a fierce squawk. And, as though that weren't enough, Edith's father, a salesman in a cigar shop, took one slant at Hector the first time he called, and audibly remarked to Edith's mother that Hector looked like a cake-eater.

That wasn't by any means the end. Where was the suspense? Ah!—Hector was half-way engaged to a stenographer in the sales-manager's office, a bobbed-haired bob-cat, who, when she caught Hector cooing and billing with the new biller in office hours, actually raised her voice and spread the dirt all over the building. That made "the other woman."

Oh, it was a perfect movie plot, all right. When his mother, on hearing that he was "going with" a strange girl, said, indeed, she wouldn't let her son marry some idle, extravagant, useless jane she knew nothing about—that he was far too young, anyway, and ought to wait until some heiress came along, because he was handsome and would never get more than $11 saved up any other way—that made it all the cat's kittens.

Edith was ecstatically unhappy. Things were shaping themselves just as destiny should unreel them. There could be only one finale, anyway—there was no other kind. And she was right. Noble Hector weathered all the twists and complexities; his mother was led to understand that Hector was no longer a pup; her father decided that it would be a good thing to bridge Edith over to some other chump to support; the sales-manager's stenographer eloped with a traveling man; the head of the department was delighted to hear she was leaving and forgave the happy young pair anything and everything——

SUB-TITLE: And so they were married!

At last—here was to be the tranquil sea; here was to blow the zephyr that only caressed and never ruffled; here was to be the gradual and even twosome along the nickle-plated path between rose-hedges, tapering gently to the final easy grade into mellow middle age, white-haired and beaming grandparenthood; to the quiet rest for eternity, fitting and welcome "Good-Night" through the reels to follow; a hectic, Hectorful romance to be cherished and to endure as a thrilling memory over the after-years of beatific wifehood.

It must be so. If there were any more to it than that, surely the movies would have shown it. Of course, they had unhappy marriages, but they were always between artist husbands who monkeyed with models, millionaires who fell for brash gold-diggers, pin-headed wives whose busy husbands couldn't entertain them, chorus girls who wouldn't be true to even a movie idol.

But her Hector was no artist, no millionaire; he wouldn't be busy nights—she knew the office hours in that plant too well—and she had never even really tried to be a chorus girl, though she had at times wistfully and guiltily sighed over it. So this marriage looked insured against all the natural hazards.

The honeymoon proved that it was so. Except that Hector did forget to hold her hand under the table once in the diner on the return trip, it was one hundred per cent.

One Landlord Had Called Them a Couple of Fresh Pikers.

They hadn't made extensive preparations for light housekeeping. The plan was to put up at her mother's for a while—indefinite—until Hector got his expected advance in salary and could incubate their microscopic embryo of a nest-egg which they hoped to hatch into a fund for home-building.

Edith's father was the first to throw a left-handed monkey-wrench into the projection machine. He had nursed a fond dream that when he got Edith good and married he would be able to have a room to himself for tinkering, and be in financial position to have his shirts sent out and ironed right. Instead, he woke up to realize that he had less room in the crowded flat than ever before, and had a hungry boarder to feed, besides. Hector paid board, but Edith's mother had shaved it as closely as she did her potato chips, because she wanted to see the children thrive and lay up enough to make a home.

The "raise" was delayed month after month. Out of his lean earnings Hector had to apply a weekly bit toward his mother's keep. He had to dress in accord with his station as first assistant to the auditor. One of Edith's classmates in business college had married a bootlegger and had a sedan, a new fur and a baby, which filled even the gentle soul of Edith with a gnawing envy and sense of being in the power of an unjust, fatalistic discrimination.

It was grand to be married, no doubt. But why didn't the sixth reel run on in smooth progression, dealing out happiness by the foot?

Hector assured her that he was going along as most ambitious young men did. He named her international financiers who hadn't been as far toward the goal as he was when they were at his age. He coaxed her not to be impatient. This was life—and life was a stubborn, conservative old thing, that crawled and crept before it began to leap and bound.

So—this was life? Edith wouldn't have believed it. The movies certainly had elided or overlooked or entirely missed some very essential and pronounced elements of it. In the screen-stories things operated so quickly. One little subtitle spanned the canyon of days, months, years. The movies never bothered waiting for a few dollars more in the envelope of an assistant auditor—if the author thought the hero merited an advance, he gave him one—and a regular one, too.

Fathers were always delighted with their sons-in-law, unless they were foreign fortune-hunters who turned out to be frauds and counterfeits. How to sleep four adults in one bed, a cot and a sofa that opened peevishly, was never discussed. And the laundry wasn't even mentioned.

Yet these irritating, mulish circumstances were embittering the "best years of her life," and she and Hector and her whole family seemed dumbly helpless to solve them—to buck through or run around such unforeseen, pusillanimous details.

When October 1 came, the usual period of salary-increase in the biscuit works, and Hector, trying to smile but heartsick and grayish under it, confessed he had been skipped on the schedule, Edith cried for an hour. Her father swore for a week. His mother threw a dish at the dog. Edith, next day, came to the overwhelming, stunning understanding that she must disillusion herself from the estate of the exuberant bride—even from the status of the contented young helpmeet, primping all day to prepare for the high-spot of greeting Him at the door with a cheery, pretty, puckered kiss when he came home tired after toiling and slaving for her.

Something—a lot of things—had gone cross-eyed. She must join the ranks of those who were a help to their husbands—no longer a deluded drone living in a house of cards, a fool's paradise. To put it in United States, translated from the movie lingo which was beginning to lose some of its punch, she must go back to work.

She proposed it dramatically, almost tragically, yet gamely, to Hector. He paled. Edith had anticipated that he would. His wife—his bride—suggesting that she return to the billing machine, proclaiming him a failure, sounding the clarion to the world—the world of the neighborhood, the "younger set" of the church, the tabbies and the "I-told-you-sos" of the cookie plant—that Hector was a flop, a bust, a false alarm, a four-flush, a cracked cracker to be tossed aside by the container inspectors.

All that tortured through Edith's hot though benumbed mind, as she saw the suffering on her Hector's pale, twisting face. He was silent a long time; then he said:

"Good Lord, Edith, don't——"

She had anticipated that he, brave boy, would protest.

"——don't, please don't, come back to work in the auditing department. The chief is crankier than ever, and I'm afraid he'd give me the gate entirely if THAT happened!"

Edith bowed her head. If kismet was to hound her she would not complain. Was she not to be a "brave little woman?" She would answer other ads. An expert biller could always——

Hector turned away his head. Edith curled up on his lap; poor boy, he must have suffered keenly, and she was his helpmeet, not only to bear with him, but to assuage and lead-water his hurts, for that was woman's mission, that was a wife's duty-call.

The whole family, both factions, lauded Edith's worthy and estimable resolve. Within a week she had a job, in a slaughter house, bringing almost as much as Hector's high-sounding position in the tony biscuit-baking institute, and the nest-egg began to puff out at the rate of five and ten dollars a treatment.

Edith's growling father began to see the light of laundry and feel the resiliency of bedsprings in the offing. And no fanciful dreamer was he, for it was openly proclaimed at the Friday night supper table that Edith and Hec were going flat hunting the very next afternoon.

They had spent hours in designing just what they wanted, and had agreed, after many affectionate but worrisome differences, on just what their first home was to be. They knew from the pictures and from many other reliable sources that young married folks must have their own home; it was almost axiomatic. Therefore they had mapped out that little home, which was to house the real sixth reel of their romance, to the minutest detail.

There were to be three rooms—a living room, a bedroom and a kitchenette. It was to be modern, sanitary, homey, comfy and plainly but completely furnished; they had no furniture, and to buy enough to equip their love-nest would have set them back a year. It must be furnished. It must have a pretty outlook, on a park preferred, yet not be too far from either mother's place. The bedroom must be in light blue; Edith had always pictured her first owney-own bedroom in light blue.

They started forth, giggling happily. It was a lark, this house-hunting, all by themselves, all for themselves. What though the first year hadn't turned out just as they, foolish kids, had anticipated? What though Edith had to work in a slaughter house, and Hector had to put up with his petulant chief and hold his breath until the following October for his advance?

Happiness still beckoned. It was playing peek-a-boo somewhere in a three-room furnished apartment with a light blue bedroom. They cackled joyfully—it would be such sport hunting it, such a delight finding it, and then—oh, and then, moving into it, the settling down in it, the evenings and the Saturday afternoons and the Sundays; the puttering and the sense of proprietorship, and the putting out the milk bottles and taking in the morning paper!

Yes, their true honeymoon had been delayed, but it was paging them now.

Not empty-handed did these babes in the burg go forth to seek their light blue bird. In Edith's bag were clippings from the real estate columns of the classified-ad pages, with several prospects that read enticingly. And in Hector's wallet was a twenty-dollar bill to be put down as a deposit against rent when the choice had been made, after which they would go to the savings bank at the luncheon hour on Monday and draw out the rest—the other $55. Oh, yes—they had come to the mutual conclusion that $75 a month was all they could spend, all they could afford for rent.

It was after nightfall when two tired, crest-fallen, dispirited young mates dragged themselves back into the home of Edith's mother. Hector threw his hat, usually punctiliously creased and handled like cloisonne but now rumpled, and flung it into a corner. His stick with the curved handle, Edith's secret pride, went bouncing after it. His belted coat, which had made such a sensational hit in the cracker factory, was tossed after the other treasures. Edith wilted into a chair without even skinning off her freshly gasolined white gloves, now sooty and moist, her home-made bonnet or her almost-fur neckpiece.

Her father worked late on Saturdays, but her gentle mother wanted to learn the worst. And this was what she learned:

The furnished flat, the light blue bedroom, the autumn evenings at home, with Edith contentedly embroidering while Hector loafed in the rocker; the view of the park—all were mirages that had been dissipated at the mention of the $75 a month they were willing and able to pay.

One landlord had called them a couple of fresh pikers, and told them that for $75 a month they could pitch a tent in a vacant lot and furnish it with a soap box and an installment radio. Others had turned up their noses. Some had snickered, and one had asked them where they were brung up. There had been just a single possibility, a rear three-roomer with the bedroom in dark green, for $100, that they might have cut down to $95, but it was awful and the price was prohibitive. Edith earned $80 a month. Was she to work her hands off and not make enough for the rent alone?

When Edith's mother started to volubly sympathize, that burst the dam and the young wife had hysterics. Hector clenched his hands, paced up and down, kicked himself; but what could he do?

When her father came home he revived it all over again, rubbed all the sore spots, pricked all the exposed nerves, and finally declared himself—he was going to sleep in the bed! He had been a slave to his family all his life, he had waited and longed and dreamed. At last he had been led to believe that he should achieve laundered shirts and a bed. He was willing to waive the shirt question, but the bed—no longer. His limbs were stiff and his neck had a crick and his back was lame from that confounded cot, and he would be everlastingly whangfoozled if he'd stand for it any longer. That was that.

Edith rose tragically. What did they want of her? Did they want her to sleep in the gutter, just because she had fallen in love with a poor boy? Was this the answer to the promise of the fade-out on the eve of marriage? If it was—if it was——

Well, what if it was?

She would give herself to a bored millionaire. It would hurt, it would be sinful, but——

Her father gave her the horse-laugh. What millionaire, already bored, would let her give herself to him? Hector sprang forward and cried that only over his dead body—and he wished he had one—would she make such a sacrifice. Her mother sobbed, "Oh, my Edie—how can you even say such wicked things, even though you don't mean a word of it?"

The family pow-wow lasted until well after midnight. Edith's father was unanimously outvoted and sent, growling and threatening, back to his cot.

SUB-TITLE: When the fateful night had passed.

Sunday loomed murky and drizzly. All hands remained in all day. Much was argued, many topics were chewed over, a few names were called, and some unpleasant truths were bandied. The conference resulted in the decision that things would go on as they had been until Hector got his raise or rents came down or Edith found that bored old millionaire to give herself to—or something.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

HOT CEREALS

There is no breakfast dish that "sticks to the ribs" quite like a good hot cereal with cream.

The ready-to-eat cereals are all very well with fruit and sugar and cream on a warm summer morning, but when there's a nip in the air a dish of steaming oatmeal porridge or mush is needed to make a hearty breakfast.

There is no more nourishing, muscle building food at so reasonable a price possible to serve. The grains themselves are composed chiefly of starch and carbohydrates with some water and mineral content. Wheat and oats contain some protein. The cream or milk furnishes fat and protein, making the whole dish a nearly perfect food.

There are one or two points worth remembering when cooking cereals.

First, always cook them in boiling water. This means rapidly bubbling water, not just steaming or bubbling on the bottom of the pan.

Second, add salt to the water before adding the cereal.

Third, all raw cereals must be well cooked. An hour or longer is required no matter what the direction on the box suggest. Only by the long slow cooking of grains is their sweetness and digestibility fully developed. A double boiler is excellent for this purpose.

Sift the cereal to be cooked into three times its bulk of boiling water. Allow one teaspoon salt to three cups of water. Cook directly over the heat, stirring to prevent lumping for 10 or 15 minutes. Then put into boiling water in the bottom of the boiler and cook for half an hour or longer.

The cereal should be covered tightly. Fill up water pan with boiling water and let stand over night. In the morning reheat and serve. The heat of the cereal and the boiling water continue the cooking process after the fire is extinguished.

Any left-over cereal can be used in puddings or cut in thin slices and fried.

If you have no double boiler or fireless cooker try baking the oatmeal the night before.

Baked Oatmeal.

One cup coarse oatmeal (not rolled oats), 4 cups rapidly boiling water, 1 teaspoon salt.

Slowly stir the cereal into the salted water. Cook 15 minutes. Turn into a buttered pudding dish and bake in a moderate oven for two hours. In the morning put the dish in a large pan of warm water, bring to the boiling point and keep simmering until thoroughly hot. The length of time required will, of course, depend on the shape and size of the dish.

Old-fashioned oatmeal requires more water than rolled oats.

Do you ever add raisins or dates to the breakfast cereal? They contribute both to the nourishment and palatableness of the dish.

Oatmeal porridge is a change and is specially good for children.

Oatmeal Porridge.

One cup rolled oats, 3 cups boiling water, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup milk, ¼ cup stoned and chopped dates or raisins.

Cook oats as suggested in double boiler. Rub through a sieve. In the morning add milk heated to the boiling point. Do not allow milk to boil. Cook over boiling water, stirring vigorously until perfectly blended. Add chopped fruit and serve with thin cream.

The long cooking of the oats brings out their natural sweetness and the addition of the sweet fruit makes added sugar unnecessary.

BILLION A YEAR SAVING CLAIMED FOR NEW MOTOR

By HERBERT LITTLE

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 6 (United Press).—A billion dollars spent every year in purchase and upkeep of oversize electric motors, built to develop 30 per cent. more current thna their maximum load, will be saved, it is claimed, by the use of a new type of alternating current motor developed here after ten years' research by the Wagner Electric Corporation.

The motor is the invention of V. A. Flynn, well known electrical engineer, and was destined by Hans Welchsel. It is to be known as the Flynn-Weichsel motor, according to W. A. Layman, president of the Wagner company.

Electrical experts explain the situation non-technically by comparing present electric systems to an old-fashioned wooden well-pump—the well representing the dynamo that generates the electricity, the pipe representing the electric motor. The pump must be primed by pouring water into it until the suction gets the water to flowing. In the ordinary electric motor this "priming process," consisting of 30 per cent. extra current, must be kept up continually.

Our new motor is what may be called, largely 'self-priming,' and the motor therefore draws on the generator only for that part of the current that is used in doing real work," the Wagner experts explain.

Eliminating Waste

The problem of eliminating this idle current is solved by the new motors as follows: The motor starts a three-phase induction motor, but a t a proper speed it automatically shifts over to becoming a synchronous motor, by an electromotive change. The stationary part of the motor, or field, is wound in the ordinary way for induction motors, but instead of having the feed wires leading into it, they are attached to three-slip-ring connections on the armature, thus reversing the ordinary position. The wires leading to the rheostat that control the motor, which ordinarily are attached to the slip-rings, are attached to the field instead.

Next to the slip-rings and their one or two brushes, depending on the voltage of the system, is the commutator, which has only two brushes, always in contact. Synchronous motors usually jam and stop under an overload, but undre this arrangement the motor changes back to an induction motor and continues to run. Such motors with "over-excited fields," that is, with provisions made for "priming," heretofore have been supplied with an extra electric current supply from an extraneous source, but have been too bulky and complicated to be efficient. The new motor, however, will have no more parts than an ordinary electric motor has now.

Use All Current

Electrical experts have worked since Edison first created the electrical central station system by the invention of dynamos and a system of transmission of electrical energy by direct current over transmission lines for a distance of a few miles. The first problem, that of transmitting electricity over long distances, was solved thirty-five years ago by Nicola Tesla, in collaboration with George Westinghouse and William Stanley, in the alternating current system. Tesla then developed an alternating current motor that would run, but experts for thirty-five years have been unable, until now, to build a motor that would utilize all the current carried over the wires.

Users of the motor should be able to secure a lower power rate, company officials claim. In addition, it is estimated the owner of the motor will save 10 per cent. on the amount of current used, as well as adding greatly to the current-carrying power of present transmission lines.

READING

The right kind of habits in reading must be formed by school pupils in order that eye strain and fatigue on the circular muscles may not produce disturbed vision and other eye troubles This may mean glasses and eye troubles throughout later life.

The position and careful adjustment to light conditions when reading cannot be too strongly emphasized. Do not try to read with poor light, during the day time or at night Whenever possible the light should be nearly on a level with the top of your head or just above it and should illuminate over the left shoulder.

See that your book is held at the proper angle of about 18 or 20 degrees and in such a position that the top and bottom of your book page will be equidistant from the eyes. Otherwise much eye strain and muscular accommodation will severely tax the eyes and produce drowsiness and dim vision.

The proper distance for normal reading is about 14 inches from the eyes Usual book type is clearly legible to the normal pupil's eyes at a distance of 20 inches. Clear type at more than this distance may indicate the beginning of hyperopia (farsightedness.

Beware of reading in bed, in a recumbent position and with poor light. In this position there is a strong pull or strain on the eye muscles of downward rotation, while the head is usually bent so that it encourages ocular congestion.

Hold the head erect at all times when reading, with the book on the level with the eyes. This will insure relief from oscular congestion It will also be a sure prevention from a tendency to round shoulders and a contracted chest.

WHOLESALE GODFATHER .... IMMIGRANT CHILDREN O N A SASKATCHEWAN FARM.

(By George Britt.)

OTTAWA, Ont., November 6. — "Godfather to Thousands" is the unofficial title of James A. Robb, Minister of Immigration and Colonisation in the Canadian Government.

ROBB.

His foster children are British war orphans and homeless little ones from city streets brought overseas to take a new start. Since the beginning of this century, 78,000 boys and girls from Great Britain have been received, their ages ranging from 3 to 18.

Each immigrant youngster is directly a ward of the Government, and under the supervision of Minister Robb's department. They are selected by philanthropic organisations, and upon their arrival are placed in the homes of substantial farmers. Already, many of the earlier juvenile immigrants have become influential citizens. At the close of last fiscal year, 2,638 boys and 975 girls were sharing the Minister's godfathership.

"British children on Canadian farms" is the slogan under which we are working, says Robb.

"No better outlet can be found for the overflowing population in the British Isles, and Canada can obtain no better material for citizenship than these children of kindred blood, brought up from their early youth as Canadian citizens."

Although the children when received are on an apprentice status, many are adopted into families and rapidly assimilated in the new community. The Canadian child immigration plan is without parallel in United States practice.

NEWS OF WORLD IN BRIEF FORM

Germany in a State of Chaos--Prohibition Question Again — What's Owing By France.

(By CHARLES P. STEWART)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Diplomacy is too tricky to justify very bright hopes concerning the latest plan for settling Europe's troubles.

London asked Washington if the latter would join in an inquiry by financial experts from all the leading countries to decide how much Germany could pay.

Secretary Hughes answered—yes.

In fact, such an inquiry was what Hughes proposed some time ago, though the scheme he outlined was not quite the same as the one suggested now.

What France Owes

But the secretary of state, in telling England "yes," made it plain that what France owes to the United States mustn't be brought into any discussion of the amount Germany's able to pay to France. In other words, the United States wants her money from France anyway.

Some Fine Points

France agrees, after a fashion, and yet not wholly. That is to say, Premier Poincare declares France will oppose any reduction in the German indemnity unless France's debts are correspondingly reduced. It's France's old attempt to get out of paying her debt to the United States, put in a new way.

The French insist also that the Reparations Commission shall appoint the financial experts and that the commission shall have the right to turn down the experts' report. This means that the experts may be all hand-picked by France. Furthermore, their work may go for nothing after it's done.

As to the Senate

Then again, the Reparations Commission was created by the Treaty of Versailles. Placing the proposed inquiry primarily in the commission's hands means this treaty's recognition. Will the United States Senate stand for that? And if not, can the president place the United States in the position of aiding the inquiry, regardless of the Senate? It's impossible to answer either of these questions offhand.

Too Many Jokers

Germany's understood to be favorable to the inquiry, though none too hopeful of its success. Belgium and Italy are friendly to the plan, too. That a settlement is even being talked about is a good thing, but there are too many "jokers" in the proposition to promise well.

Chaos in Germany

The German republic continues to tremble on the verge of breaking up. Separation and sub-separation movements are rife everywhere. Food riots are raging throughout the country. The central government in Berlin holds on by its eyelids, nothing more.

Walton Is Impeached

The Oklahoma House of Representatives has impeached Governor Walton. An impeachment is an accusation, something like a grand jury indictment. Walton is charged with corruption as well as unconstitutional acts. It is the Senate which will try these charges. Already it has suspended Walton from office until the trial ends. If acquitted he will be restored; if convicted, permanently removed.

Wets and Drys

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment announces a convention to be held in January on "American principles."

Leaders say this gathering is delayed to give the drys time to see what they can do toward enforcing Volsteadism, following their recent meetings in Washington.

The estimate is made that the dry program will involve additional coastguard expenditures of $20,000,000 and another $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 for attempts at land enforcement. This is in addition to what the federal government is spending on the work now and has nothing to do with state costs.

Goldfish Need Shade and Air

If you are keeping goldfish, learn these two important facts:

1—The fish must live in the shade.

2—They require frequent changes of fresh water.

The reason for the first fact is that goldfish have no eyelids and therefore cannot keep light from blinding them. That is why you see them frisking about in the globe, if you set them in the sunlight. They're only trying, in their frenzied way, to find a shady spot.

Stones and small plants can be put into the bowl to afford shade, but the best method is to keep the whole globe in the shade.

Fresh aerated water is necessary for these fish, as for any others living in natural waters. Fish live on air in the water. Still water in the globe is free from air.

If you see the fish swimming about with gaping mouths, they are actually smothering for want of air.

Change the water.

ODDITIES IN NEWS

MAGIC

More magical discoveries are made by scientists. In England they cut off the heads of two beetles, a male and female, then sew the male's head on the female's body and vice versa. Both beetles go on living as before.

Dr. Wood of Johns Hopkins University wonders whether this could also be done with people. He says: "The head of a famous scientist about to die could be grafted to the body of a convict about to be executed. In this way the brain of the genius would never be lost to mankind."

That gives us the shivers. But it'd end one of the greatest tragedies, which is that great men when they die take with them most of what they have learned.

LIFE

Three vivid pictures showing the versatility of the phenomenon of life in America:

Westinghouse scientists demonstrate that, by artificial light, they make flowers sleep and rest, waken and grow. Florists say this may end flower shortages due to cloudy weather.

Picture Two—American Express Co. will open a branch office near King Tut's tomb, expecting big business from tourists.

Picture Three—A New York violinist with high ideals commits suicide by gas when forced to earn living by playing jazz in cabarets.

BETTING

Here is something new under the sun—interesting statistics: Lloyds, London insurance people, say the odds are 100 to 9 against Henry Ford being the next president. Lloyds have written a $400,000 policy, on these odds, for a New York firm.

MORTGAGED

In the last four years nearly 16 billion dollars worth of new securities have been issued in our country.

America is heading swiftly toward the point where the entire national wealth will be blanketed dollar-for-dollar by stocks and bonds. Life is certainly getting complex and systematized to the last detail.

POLITE?

People when they travel are not as polite as they were 15 years ago observes Joseph Lepore. He has been a "news butcher" on trains for 20 years, selling papers, magazines, candy and fruit.

Joe also reports that "people ask hundreds of foolish questions and scarcely listen to the answers."

Many others have noticed this is the national attitude in politics and economics.

SALESMAN

Joe Lepore, veteran train boy, says selling magazines, fruit and candy to the traveling public is an exact science requiring psychology.

Joe says the train boy works hardest to land a customer at the front of the car, keeping an eye on him while calling out what's for sale. If the man up front buys, others also buy, copying his example unconsciously. If the front-of-the-car patron refuses, says Joe, you are apt to go right through the car without a customer.

With even the train boys studying psychology, it's no wonder we find it so hard to hang onto money.

GIRL SCALPED BY AVALANCHE

California Grows Other Things Besides Sunshine, Figs and Oversized Lemons.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—California grows other things beside sunshine, figs and oversize lemons.

Pretty girls, for instance, who—reversing the old order of things in this Amazonian age—are as "brave as they are fair."

One of the bravest as well as the prettiest of these is Miss Betty Short, of New York and San Francisco, who has just startled her native state by falling off a mountain.

Miss Short, who has just landed in the United States after a particularly eventful vacation tour in the Swiss Alps, further shocked a state full of Californians by announcing that next summer she will return and finish the climb.

Miss Short, with a party of friends, attempted the ascent of the Jungfrau, and when very near the top was horrified to see an avalanche descending upon her. Other members of the party jumped to safety, but the rocks struck Miss Short, hurling her a distance of 100 feet, where she was later picked up, unconscious, and carried down to the first post from which a doctor could be summoned.

It was found she had suffered a fractured skull and an 8-inch gash in her scalp, from which it was doubtful whether she would recover. Her hair was shaved off during the six weeks' treatment that followed, in Zurich, and she will be required to wear a wig for several years.

The avalanche was dislodged by a party of climbers ahead of Miss Short's party, she declared.

"It was purely an accident," she told reporters smilingly. "Of course, I mean to go back and finish the ascent. What kind of a mountain-climber would I be if I didn't?"

RUBBER ROADS LATEST WAY TO STOP NOISE

BRADFORD, England, Nov. 6 (United Press).—Rubber roads, constructed of worn-out automobile tires, will be laid in this city as soon as the remainder of a large stock of used casings can be compressed into paving blocks.

The city engineer has been collecting old tires for many months and the process of converting them into blocks is nearly complete.

The scrap rubber was obtained at little cost and it is estimated that the rubber pavement can be laid at a cost of $9 a square yard on the 1,500 square yards of roadway which will be rubberized as an experiment.

For larger areas this cost can be lowered to $3.55 per square yard.

Bradford was originally paved with material suitable to horse traffic. Automobiles have superceded the horse and rendered the noisy, rough old roadways unnecessary.

Cork paving blocks, blocks of waste glass compressed to shape and combinations of iron and concrete have been considered, but the elimination of noise is expected to be best attained by means of rubber.

In London the work of surrounding the Cenotaph, in memory of the Empire's war dead, with rubber paving is almost complete.

The two experiments are being closely watched by European road builders, anxious to alter their trade to suit the changed conditions of motor traffic.

RICKARD ARRANGING MATCH FOR RENAULT

Tommy Gibbons or Harry Wills Will Likely Meet Canadian Heavyweight Around Christmas.

CHARITY AFFAIR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(Canadian Press)—Tex Rickard yesterday began negotiations to match Jack Renault, Canadian heavyweight who knocked out Floyd Johnson last Friday night, with either Tom Gibbons, St. Paul light heavyweight, or Harry Wills, negro title contender.

Rickard has undertaken the negotiations in the interests of a New York newspaper's Christmas Fund. If arranged, the promoter plans to stage the match around holiday time, possibly December 21, at Madison Square Garden.

Paddy Mullin, manager of Wills, has had some difference with Rickard and announced he would not sign for any match with the Garden promoter, but it is believed he might alter his attitude as the bout would be a charity affair. Should efforts to sign the negro be unavailing, however, Gibbons probably will be selected. The St. Paul battler, who went the limit with Jack Dempsey last July 4, has been asked to name his terms.

Renault's manager, Leo Flynn, has discussed the proposal with Rickard, and although he has not definitely accepted, no difficulty is expected in bringing about an agreement so far as the Canadian is concerned.

P.C.I. WELL DRILLED SAYS LINDSAY POST

Showed Result of Good Coaching in Saturday's Game.

Lindsay Collegiate Institute rugby team played their second engagement with the Peterboro L.C.I. team on Saturday afternoon at Riverside Park, in the Electric City, and met with overwhelming defeat—45 to 0. There is not a shadow of doubt but that the best team won, the result never being questioned. It was a case of a superior team running up a score on a much less experienced team and the wonder is that the Lindsay pig skin chasers kept the score down, for be it known rugby score mount up fast in some games. Every touch counts for five points and a convert counts one extra point. The P.C.I. kids, for they are but youngsters despite their weight, played a clever game and showed the result of good coaching. Their punting, their speedy runs, their clean get-aways, their scrimmage, interference, etc., placed them on a higher plane than the Lindsay team. After all seventy-five per cent of the game of rugby and the result depends on good coaching. This, Peterboro has demonstrated. Carl Brown of the P.C.I. staff deserves credit for the manner in which his team follows instructions. Lindsay has a number of good players ready for the game next year, but they must be trained and coached. Their big weak point a week ago was lack of proper tackling, but their weakest point in Saturday's game was lack of interference. Invariably the Petes got clean away and once in possession of the ball they were hard to check. The L.C.I. did not cover their men sufficiently well.

MONTREAL MAY HAVE INTERNATIONAL TEAM

MONTREAL, Nov. 6.—A definite attempt will be made this week, to see whether or not it will be advisabe to again put an International League team into Montreal.

The Syracuse franchise is available, and the owners of the St. Louis National League Club are prepared to back Phil Bartelme, president of the Syracuse Club, if it is found advisable to bring Montreal in again.

The survey as it might be called, will be made next week, when Sam Breaden, president of the St. Louis National League Club and Branch Rickey, the noted manager, together with Mr. Bartelme, who is of French birth, will visit Montreal Wednesday.

They want to know three things: How the public will look upon the plan — — — What terms they can make with Joe Page, president of the Eastern Canada Baseball League, who controls the territory — — Where there is a space of ground not too far removed from the centre of the city that could be used for week-days and week-end games both?

BATTLE PROMISED IN SENIOR RACE

Entrants in This Event Must Have Amateur Cards

All senior runners in next Monday's race are required to have their amateur cards. Entrants should not neglect this condition, but should apply through Mr. Loomis at the Y.M.C.A. at once. It is understood that the entry list has been closed, but if for special reasons an application is submitted late it will hardly be refused by the committee during the next day or two. This is not an official statement, but Charlie Thorpe and Doug Loomis are so eager in their boosting of the running game that they will give the tardy one the benefit of a doubt.

The names of the prospective starters will be pubished in a day or two, and advance notices promises a real battle in the senior event.

PORCELAIN PLAYED QUAKERS TIE GAME.

Engineers Trimmed the Teachers in Snappy Game

Games in the Industrial Section of the Soft Ball League held sway at the Armouries last evening, and two games of smart ball were played.

The Teachers dropped the first game to the Engineers after a hard, and close, battle. A long clout into right field by McCarney in the second which sent across two runs, and a hit off the wall by Walter Jackson, in the seventh, cost the Teachers the game.

The Teachers have a smart fielding team, getting a quartette of fast double plays to their credit in the game, but they appeared weak with the willow. Dearborn at second did the fielding stunt of the game when he speared a hot one one-handed just when things had taken on a dangerous aspect for the chalk-slingers.

A crowd of young fans lined the diamond to give the Teachers the benefit of their advice.

The game was the fastest witnessed on any night yet, the nine innings being completed in 41 minutes, a record that the club teams have never yet reached.

The teams lined up as follows:

Engineers — McCarney rf. Burgess rss; Cruthers lf; Munro c; Langley p; W. Jackson 1b; Metherall 2b; B. Jackson ss; Patterson 1b.

Teachers — Langford c; Deyell p; Copp 1b, Dearborne 2b; Bolton 3b; Starr ss, Kerr ss; Park lf; Frost rf.

Score by innings:

Engineers .. ..031000400—8 10 3
Teachers .. ..020001001—4 4 3

Second Game a Tie.

The Porcelain and Quakers game, after nine fast innings, ended in a 7 to 7 tie. The game was close all the way, neither team ever being more than two runs in the lead. Nicholls pitched a nice steady game for the Porcelains, while F. Dyer starred out in right field, gathering all the many hits which came his way without a slip.

The line-ups were:

Porcelain — R. Dyer c; O'Dette 3b; Murphy 1b; Richmond ss; Elliott 2b; F. Dyer rf; Meagher ss; Paquette lf; Nicholls p.

Quakers — Kearns ss; Pillon lf; Guerin b; Kirn 3b. Collins r ss; Turner c; Carruthers p; Cunningham 2b; Graham rf.

Score by innings:

Porcelain .. ..010303000—7
Quakers .. ..100132000—7

Woollens Default.

The Woollens defaulted their game to the Brass Moulders by not having a team on hand when play was called at nine o'clock.

NOT AN ISSUE FOR LANDIS.

So Says Ban Johnson Regarding Shocker's Appeal to Commissioner.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 6.—Ban Johnson, President of the American League, who was in St. Louis yesterday, expressed the opinion that the difference between Urban Shocker, the star pitcher, and officials of the American League Club here was a matter between club and player, explaining that he did not believe it was an issue that called for adjudication by Commissioner Landis.

Shocker has appealed to Landis to declare him a free agent as a result of his suspension for violating a club regulation.

It was stated that Manager George Sisler probably would play next year, as his defect in vision was improving rapidly.

Leonard | CHALLENGERS FADE ALL GO IN BUNCH NO STARS REMAIN MORAN NEXT BEST | Alone!

JACKSON WELLING

KANSAS
MITCHELL
WHITE

By JOE WILLIAMS.

Things are not breaking so well for Benjamin Leinert, the well-dressed man of Harlem, who is known to the cauliflower trade as Benny Leonard. A year ago he had all kinds of business and most of it was good. The Queensberry timberlands were replete with challengers, acceptable if not exactly worthy, and the champion had visions of a highly profitable fall and winter season.

The challenging list included such noble artists as Lew Tendler, Charley White, Rocky Kansas, Richie Mitchell, Willie Jackson and Joe Welling. Tendler and White were rated as particularly formidable young gents. The others would do in a tight spot. Mr. Rickard could take them and paint them in ferocious hues. The cash customers, simple souls, would fall as usual.

But something has happened. The lightweight champion's meal tickets have suddenly gone sour and where he had abundant opposition a few months back he hasn't a single, first-class nose to swat today. Never before in the history of pugilism has an entire division of fighters crumbled so unanimously with such widespread thoroughness. Not one of the punchers who were listed as a Leonard challenger a year ago remains in that class now.

Welling, Mitchell and Jackson headed the debacle. They were the first to pass out of the picture. Welling and Mitchell are third-rater snow, and Jackson, hardest-punching lightweight of recent years, is absolutely through. Leonard ruined Tendler completely late in the summer. A third meeting between the two wouldn't draw an anemic, underfed dime.

Kansas, caveman from Buffalo, always dangerous, listened to the exit march when Jack Bernstein, a New York junior lightweight ,slapped him simple in a recent bout. That is as convincing a tipoff as if Kansas had written out his own resignation. Bernstein is a nice lad and poses impressively, but is nothing to be afraid of in the gathering twilight.

The more recent passing of Charles White was a mortal blow to the Leonard bankroll. Because he could hit with the best of them, White was always a profitable investment at the turnstiles. A return bout between the Chicago left-hooker and the champion was to have been the outstanding lightweight attraction of the winter season. And then Pal Moran of New Orleans came along and stopped White cold.

Now Moran steps in as the foremost Leonard challenger for the moment. The southerner is no tender stripling of a youth. It is not likely that he will get any better as he goes along. Already he has met Leonard twice in no-decision bouts. On neither occasion were the developments very fireworksy. Moran is not a great hitter and for that reason is not likely to worry the champion.

Aside from Moran, the challenging field is rather barren. Of course, Johnny Dundee is still in the game, and Leonard, you recall, always has to step to win decisively from the Scotch wop. Baltimore offers George (Knockout) Chaney, but Chaney is undersized and strictly a one-handed fighter. Charley O'Connell of Cleveland is coming along. He stopped a good man in Tim Droney. Kid Watson of Philadelphia is not without vociferous supporters.

These names however, just about close the records. The Whites, Mitchells, Jacksons and Tendlers, contenders of class, have passed on.

Triple Plays Jinx Cleveland Club Indians Figured in Four Killings

When it comes to figuring in triple plays, the Cleveland club of the American League is entitled to the original brown derby. Triple plays and the Cleveland club are synonymous.

Last season five triple plays were made in the American League, four of these were pulled at the expense of the Cleveland club. Since Cleveland was nosed out of second place by a mere half game, some blame can be attched the Indians' habit of hitting into triple plays.

Two unassisted triple plays were made in the majors last season. Both of these plays were made by Boston clubs, the Red Sox putting one over on the Indians while the Braves turned the trick against Philadelphia.

In all nine triple plays were made in the majors, five in the American and four in the National.

In pulling unassisted triple plays, George Burns of the Red Sox and Ernest Padgett of the Braves won undying fame. The baseball records show that on only three other occasions has a player been able to retire the side unassisted.

TRIPLE PLAYS IN MAJORS DURING 1923 CAMPAIGN.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

June 1—Holloway, Rigney and Blue of Detroit against Cleveland.
Aug. 4—Galloway, Scheer and Hauser of Philadelphia against Detroit.
Aug. 22—Judge and Peckinpaugh of Washington against Cleveland.
Sept. 3.—Schliebner and Gerber of St. Louis against Cleveland.
Sept. 14—George Burns of Boston unassisted against Cleveland.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

May 16—Friegau, Bottomley and Stock of St. Louis against Boston.
July 6—Mokan, Henline and Sand of Philadelphia against Pittsburg.
July 19—Traynor, S. Adams and Grimm of Pittsburg against Boston.
Oct. 6—Ernest Padgett of Boston unassisted against Philadelphia.

Back in 1878 Paul Hines performed the feat in the National. It is a rather interesting fact that in the American League two Cleveland players pulled the stunt. Neal Ball, playing short for Cleveland in 1909, turned the trick against Boston. Second Baseman Bill Wambganns won fame and glory in the 1920 world series with Brooklyn.

All of which merely proves that when it comes to figuring in triple killings the Cleveland club is away out in front.

DID HE HIT YOU, TOO, MR. DOOLEY?

Big Jim Coffey, the Roscommon giant, was an Irish heavyweight of fair skill, who flourished in the big rings of fistiana for some several years.

One of his notable engagements was with Frank Moran in the east. Coffey was extravagantly heralded as the finest piece of fighting material that had ever come over from the Emerald Isle.

"The greatest Irish heavyweight the world has ever seen," was the modest manner in which the imported puncher was billed.

His fight with Moran was to serve as a stepping stone to a battle with the champion. It was smoked up in an elaborate style and the bugs were properly excited. A vast outpouring of Irish enthusiasts swarmed into the choice seats. Many of the giant's personal friends filled the ringside chairs. They accorded him a stirring ovation as he climbed through the ropes in a bathrobe of resplendent green.

It was a fair sort of a fight while it lasted. The giant carried a devastating punch, but his control was wilder than an irate father-in-law. Moran knew too much for him.

Watching for an opening, the blond Pittsburger saw his chance and whizzed over his celebrated Mary Ann. It landed on the giant's protuding chin with all the force of a well-placed mule's kick.

Coffey dropped in a heap and stayed there until the referee had finished counting the customary mathematics.

Meantime, a big red-faced Irishman, sitting at the ringside, had burst into tears and was sobbing piteously. Coffey came out of his stupor, propped his throbbing head up with his left hand and gazed about the ring with blinking eyes.

Finally his gaze rested upon his grief-stricken compatriot. He recognized him and evidencing genuine concern called out: "Say, O'Dooley, what are you crying for? Did he hit you, too?"

PLAYING MANAGERS ARE COMING BACK

Speaker and Cobb Have Proved Their Qualifications — Collins and Sisler Next?

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(United Press).—Not so long ago the Cleveland Indians were considered exceptional, in that they were led by Tris Speaker, a playing manager.

Immediately preceding the appointment of Speaker, which was considered a sort of experiment by the Indians, the bench manager had been the vogue through the theory that the responsibilities of management were too much to impose upon a player, who, in the modern game, has much to do to handle his own fielding job.

Speaker proved to the satisfaction that a good player can remain a good player and manage a club as well, providing that the player has the same qualifications to manage a team as he has to play.

Detroit tried the experiment with success when Ty Cobb was appointed to manage the Tigers. Cobb has not succeeded in winning a pennant, but he did as well as any bench manager could in landing the Tigers in the first division last year.

With two such examples to disprove the former theory that double duties were too heavy for a player, and with the obvious savings on the payroll that would result from a player-manager, other major league clubs may go back to the custom that prevailed when bench managers were the big exception.

With Kid Gleason retired as the manager of the Chicago White Sox, Eddie Collins, no doubt, will be placed at the head of the club, and Collins ought to make good as as a manager. He has been one of the game's greatest players and one of the smartest players and he has the qualifications of a leader. Collins wants to take a whirl at handling a club and it is only natural that he should, if he wants to remain in baseball after his active days have passed.

Last winter he was considered as a future manager of the New York Yankees. At that time, although he had been assured of his job, there was some talk that Miller Huggins was going to retire from the Yanks. The talk of a trade with the White Sox for Collins was later dropped.

George Burns is being rumored as the successor of Fred Mitchell as manager of the Boston Braves and the acqusition of the Cincinnati outfield would bring another player manager. Burns also should make a good manager. although some good baseball judges believe that he is too quiet and modest to become a successful leader. Burns knows baseball from long association with McGraw and from his experiences under Pat Moran. He is popular with the player and a great player himself.

When Burns was with the Giants he was called "Pious George," because of his quiet, unassuming ways on the field However, it does not follow that he woud not be a good manager because he is such a thorough gentleman.

Connie Mack has never been a fire-spouter, and McGraw, the personification of the driver, is the only manager in the game who has been more successful than McGraw.

The McGraw type of manager is passing out as the game advances. Rather, it might be said, that the type of manager McGraw once was, is no more. McGraw still rules his players with an iron hand, but he does not tear and charge about the field as he did once, when the Giants were in their prime.

Miller Huggins, Bill Killifer, Wilbert Robinson, Lee Fohl, Branch Rickey and Pat Moran are the newer type managers who lead with their men and not back of them.

George Sisler is another of the quiet, easy-going type and, for the above reasons, it does not stand that he will not be a successful manager with the St. Louis Browns just because he has not a pugnacious disposition.

If Sisler's eve trouble has been cured there is no doubt that he will pay first base again for the Browns and, although he is the youngest manager in the major leagues, he should be able to carry the burden of both jobs.

Old managers point out that it is a great handicap for a player to manage his own club and handle the players with whom he once associated on an equal plane. In some cases there is no doubt that a player, who had shown little inclination to discipline, could expect players to respect him when he tried to make them behave.

Speaker and Cobb succeeded, however, and Sisler should have no trouble in getting his teammates to work for him.

Sisler, like George Burns, was another very quiet and modest player on the field, but he also was perhaps the greatest of his day and his players surely will respect his judgment.

It is a well-proved fact that no general theories can be applied to many individual cases. Success under various conditions depends almost entirely upon the temperament and ability of the one trying to succeed. Because Speaker has been successful it does not mean that Collins and Sisler will have the same results as managers.

BLACK CAT OF PUGDOM STARTS ON LAST TRIP

Mr. Charles Anchowitz, Better Known as White, Greatest Runner - Up in Lightweight History, Finally Passes Into Well-Known Discard.

By JOE WILLIAMS

The black cat of the prize ring is through.

Mr. Charles Anchowitz, professionally known as Charles White, has been tossed into the mill pond of oblivion with a brickbat attached to his neck more times than nimble-witted statisticians can figure.

In the past, Mr. Anchowitz always managed to shake himself loose from the impediment, swim to the bank and return to the Queensberry doorstep somewhat wet but meowing triumphantly.

This time Mr. Anchowitz is not likely to return. He appears to have gone down for the thirty-third and last time. Pal Moran of New Orleans, in no sense a great fighter, though a good one, stopped him. Mr. Anchowitz, now in cloistered seclusion, is reported to be utterly broken up, not to say chagrined.

One thing, Mr. Anchowitz cannot complain that he didn't have a chance in the world. The fact is, he had more chances to win titles than any other fighter in the history of the sport. A dozen or so, all told. Mr. Anchowitz should have been a champion. He could fight. He was a great hitter. No lightweight could ever hit as hard with a left hook.

Mr. Anchowitz's trouble was mainly one of brains. As a thinker he was not quick on the trigger. He would consistently do the wrong thing in the right place, and as a consequence he lost several sweet opportunities to climb into the big-money class.

Mr. Anchowitz was also a rank in-and-outer, and no one could tell in advance just how good or how bad he would be—unless one played safe and predicted he would be terrible.

Our hero was a great fighter as early as 1912. An unknown, he went to New York and trimmed Young Shugrue, a near champion. Matched with Jack Britton on the strength of this win, he disclosed his inconsistency for the first time and was knocked out. Britton was never a knocker-out and was even less of one when he stopped Mr. Anchowitz. Hence the astonishment.

Subsequently, Mr. Anchowitz, scoring a series of flashy knockouts with his terrific left, won his way back into popular favor and was matched with Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion. Mr. Anchowitz was a better fighter in many respects but he was slow to take advantage of his openings and was beaten. Later he got a crack at Freddie Welsh, who succeeded Wolgast to the throne, and again fought a disappointing fight. By then the fans decided he was through and turned their attentions elsewhere.

Mr. Anchowitz fooled 'em. He launched out on a spectacular knockout spurt. Against five tough battlers, Eddie Murphy, Hal Stewart, Fred Yelle, Charley Thomas and Young Brown, the Chicagoan scored five consecutive and conclusive knockouts and again became the foremost contender.

Mr. Anchowitz was re-matched with Welsh, and this time was the favorite in the betting. But why go on? The left-hooker never looked worse, and Welsh, with his light taps and feeble jabs, won again.

Mr. Anchowitz got still another crack at Welsh, who by now was dying on the vine. Welsh had his own referee in the ring and Mr. Anchowitz, although he fought well, had no chance.

In due time Benny Leonard came along and smacked Welsh on the whiskers and became the champ. Of course, Leonard obliged Mr. Anchowitz with a match, by way of respecting an ancient tradition, and the latter was beaten as usual, but not without a fight. At one stage he left-hooked Leonard clear out of the ring but immediately his dumbness came on to win by a knockout in nine rounds.

Mr. Anchowitz retires with the distinction of being the greatest runner-up in the history of pugilism.

LONG ROLL-UP PUTT HARDEST SHOT TO MAKE

So Says Max Marston, New Amateur Champion, But Other Experts Disagree — Short Pitch to Tricky Green.

BY JOE WILLIAMS.

What is the hardest shot in golf?

To many this is equivalent to asking what is the most delightful poison known to chemistry.

Your average golfer finds that a shot is either hard or harder.

Play with the irons is popularly supposed to involve fewer complexities than play with the woods. The swing in most instances is shorter and, therefore, easier to control.

Players who drive off the tee with irons instead of woods are numerous. Usually, too, they are deficient. However, Jerry Travers frequently used an iron off the tee and Travers won the national amateur championship four times and the national open once.

As a general proposition, however, few players have trouble with their tee shots. Where the main consideration is sheer distance there is not much to excite your nerves.

Tournament golfers list these as the hardest shots in golf:

1—The long brassie second that calls for direction and distance to a well trapped green.

2—The short pitch shot from 60 to 80 yards with a trap or bunker to carry.

3—The long approach putt 40 to 60 feet from the cup, that must be left dead to the hole.

The Experts Debate It

At Flossmoor, where the national amateur was decided this year, the matter of the "hardest shot" was subjected to debate. A giddy diversity of opinion resulted and when the last faint murmur of the conversational tumult had died the three shots mentioned above led the field.

You will note that none of the three is related or similar in character. The long brassie is a power shot, a full swing in which a distance runs a dead heat with direction. The short pitch is a forearm and wrist manoeuvre, involving an entirely different technique. The approach putt is simply a putt that demands a "hit" rather than a "tap."

Which of these would you name as the hardest to play?

Max Marston, new amateur champion, says the approach putt is the hardest.

Approach Putt Hardest?

"It is no easy matter to roll a 60-foot putt up dead to the hole, and do it consistently," says Marston. "I think it is the most delicate of all strokes in golf, for there must be perfect control, perfect timing, and perfect judgment of distance. Otherwise the ball will not get up to the hole, or hold the line. Under any circumstances the long approach putt is beset with unusual difficulties, and where the green dips and swells it is positively terrifying."

Bill Fownes, veteran Pittsburger, and former national champion, did not agree with Marston. Fownes voted the short pitch the hardest shot in golf.

"This type of shot is more difficult than the longer iron approach, or any other shot, I think, because it calls for great delicacy in stroking, a keen touch and flawless control. It is, in fact, the approach putt carried out a higher dimension. If you get perfect results you may be in position to get down in one putt. If you don't you may need three."

SMITHS TO REUNION.

GREENVILLE, N. C., (United Press).—The "Smith Association" will hold a reunion and convention at a country church near this town Thanksgiving Day. More than a thousand will probably attend. Near the church is the home of the late Henry and Celia Smith, founders of a prominent branch of the family. The population of this section is nearly 100 per cent native born, and the Smiths in the territory are relatively as numerous as anywhere in the world. In one county there is a township populated exclusively by Smiths. That is Smith township.

ONE OF GREATEST BILLIARD MATCHES

NEW YORK, November 6. Canadian Press. — William F. Hoppe, the world's champion 18.2 balk line billiardist, defeated Jacob Schaeffer last night in one of the greatest matches in the history of the game, 500 points to 447 and will meet Welker Cochran of Los Angeles in Chicago, at a date yet to be announced, in a play off for the title for which they are now tied.

Hope won the bank, chose the white ball and counted three, missing a difficult kiss shot across the table with his cue ball frozen to the rail. Schaeffer had balls together in four shots. He lost them at ten but gathered them again with a daring three railer on his 14th shot. They were wide open again at 30, but Schaeffer drove them well, and continued to count.

LIQUOR VOTE OF NO EFFECT HERE

But Referendum Like That of Alberta Will Be Allowed in Ontario if Demanded.

TORONTO, Nov. 6. — The Alberta liquor vote will not influence the prohibition in Ontario, says Attorney-General W. F. Nickle to-day. The Attorney-General will grant a referendum if there is sufficient demand for it.

In by far the largest vote ever polled in Alberta on the liquor question, prohibition yesterday was beaten decisively.

Seven years ago the province gave a dry majority of twenty thousand in a total vote of ninety-five thousand on the abolition of the retail sale of liquor.

In 1920, the matter of importation came up, and with total vote of 106,000, there was a majority against importation of 18,596.

Yesterday's vote will go close to 150,000, and the majority against prohibition, standing at the moment at about 24,000, probably will approach 30,000 when the returns are complete.

There are 52 provincial constituencies and on incomplete returns there appears to have been a majority for government control in 36 of them, including cities of Calgary, Edmonton, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat. In some rural constituencies figures are so close that later returns will involve some shifting from one column to another.

But Little Confusion.

There was little confusion in the use of the foru clause preferential ballot, and there appears to have been comparatively few spoiled batlots.

The contest, as the returns quickly showed, resolved itself into a practically straight fight between prohibition and government control, A and D, with B and C, as representing beer advocates, having no chance of achieving success.

On the present showing, clause D has such a decisive majority over all other clauses that it will not b neother clauses that it will not be necchoices.

Clause D means "Sale of all liquors by or through government vendors, beer to be consumed on licensed premises and in private residences; wine and spirits to be purchased in limited quantities under permit issued by the government, under government control and legislation."

The Calgary Albertan, which supported prohibition, says to-day:

"The people are tired of prohibition. They have lost patience with it. The reaction has come, and for another period at least, we must return to the liquor traffic."

The Lethbridge Herald says:

"The moderationists have won a signal victory, and it will be their duty above all others to see that the law is respected."

RANJI AND FRY CRICKET STARS PEACE WRITERS

On one of the boog pages of the London Spectator appears an advertisement for a volume called "Key-Book of the League of Nations, by C. B. Fry, With a Chapter on Disarmament by H. H. Prince of Ranjutsinhji, Maharaja Jam Saheb of Nawanagar."

To an American the announcement means nothing, but to a Britisher it carries something new. Britain's defenders were developed on her cricket fields. Two of her greatest cricketers were C. B. Fry and "Ranji." They were contemporaries. Fry was the greatest cricketer in his day, and by making 13 centuries in one year set a world record. Ranking second to Fry was "Ranji," and now these two stars of cricket collaborate on a book for disarmament and are doing their share to create lasting peace. The cricket fields of England are producing men of peace now where formerly they bred sons of Mars.

Some information on the subject is furnished by Cyril Arthur Player: "First-class cricketers are divided into GENTLEMEN and PLAYERS. Usually the championship in country cricket is won by the team using (and therefore able to afford) the most players, or professionals. The gentlemen, or amateurs, enter the field from the main steps of the pavilion, while the players, or pros. enter it from a gate at the side of the pavilion. They do not mingle with the pavilion guests.

"The origin of the county cricket (which is the first-class cricket in England) was on the estates where two neighbors, possibly old University athletes, would challenge each other .Each would muster the available "team" from among his help. Thus it came about that when one of these enthusiasts hired a gardener he would try to get one who was a good cricketer. The traditions remain, more or less; for example, the captain of the team must be an amateur, or gentleman.

"The strict professional line was modified for needy gentlemen who were good cricketers. For example, by making one secretary of the club, for which he would draw a salary and still remain an unsalaried amateur in the playing field, Others, like C. B .Fry, made money bp writing sports articles and capitalizing their publicity, but remained amateurs in the cricket field.

"C. B. Fry and 'Ranji' (who then had not come into his Indian principality) were the outstanding batsmen around 1900. Both were "amateurs," playing on the Sussex County team, and together they made many a picturesque batting stand. Next to "W. G." (Grace), the traditional cricketer of England, none equalled then, or since, this pair. In 1901 C. B. Fry made 13 centuries (all of course in first-class championship games.) I saw two of them made. Five years later Tom Hayward, the Surrey professional, made an equal record of 13 centuries.

"Fry (Charles Burgess) aws a fine scholar and took an honor degree at Oxford. His record there in scholarship was unusual. Also he captained the University cricket team and was president of the University Athletic Club, and also captain of the Oxford University Association Foot Ball. When a man represents 'Oxf' or 'Camb' in the inter-varsity matches, he gets his 'Blue' as an American gets his 'Letter.' Thus Fry was a Triple Blue; a most unusual performance.

"He later represented England in both cricket and association football, thus becoming a double international.

"Latterly he interested himself in nautical training for boys, and by reason of his active work in that direction is an Honorary Commander of the Royal Naval Reserve.

"He has written and edited books on cricket, soccer ,running, hunting, motoring. He is around 50.

Kumar Shri Ranjitsinghi ("Ranji"), Maharaja Jam Saheb of Nawanagar, was a remarkble Indin. Almost the same age to a day as Fry. Born at Sarodar, in Province of Kathiawar, India. Nephew of a preceding Jam, who adopted him. Went to school in India first and then to Cambridge University. Got his 'Blue' there. Met Fry in the Sussex cricket team. The first year he played for Sussex (1895) he headed the batting averages for his team, and thereafter without break up to and including 1902. In 1896 and in 1900 he was champion batsman of All England, scoring 2,780 runs, with an average of 59.91. He represented England on a team sent to Australia. Served in the war. Authority on pig-sticking, angling, tennis, racquets, cycling and skating."

SOMEWHERE IN FLORIDA

To be somewhere in Florida, where the sun is always shining, where the golden oranges hang in clusters on the trees, the palms stir gently to the warm balmy breezes and "Where the sweet Magnolia blooms" is the thought in the minds of hundreds of Canadians every winter.

This year there will be the usual exodus of Canadians to the south. When the Canadians at home are skating and skiing, those in the south will be sun-bathing, sun-bathing on the warm sands, deep-sea fishing, golfing, etc.

When making arrangements for the trip consult any agent of the Canadian National Railways for particulars of service. Winter tourist fares are now in effect, valid to return up to May 31st, and good for stopover at all important points.

MANY HUNTERS ARE UP NORTH

One Man Sold 250 Licenses to Peterborough Hunters.

Upwards of 400 hunters purchased licenses in Peterborough, 250 of these being obtained from the Secretary of the Fish and Game Protective Association, C. G. Graham. Most of the hunters are going to the country north of Buckhorn and Bobcaygeon, and some will remain the two weeks of the deer season.

Visited yesterday in their camps 25 miles north of Bobcaygeon, hunters said the bad weather has interfered with their sport. Deer tracks are plentiful, but had up to last night evaded several camps. One deer was shot early in the morning by a local resident, and partridge were plentiful. Provincial Constable H. Storey, of Lindsay, brought down one of the birds.

The Howell camp, north of Bobcaygeon, has eight or ten members, all old hands at the game. They reported the opening day most discouraging, but planned an early start to-day.

12 BODIES TAKEN FROM MINE SHAFTS

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 6. —(Canadian Press).—Twelve bodies have been taken from the shaft of the Raleigh-Wyoming Coal Company's mine at Glen Rogers, Wyoming County, in which an explosion occurred this morning, and little hope is entertained for thirty men still within the workings, the State Department of Mines reported today.

Sixty-five men were in the mine at the time of the explosion, and 23 were brought out uninjured, in addition to twelve bodies found by the rescue squads, officials said. Their report, they declared, came from the company's office at the mine.

WELLAND, Nov. 6.—(Canadian Press)—Herschel Stewart was this morning placed on trial at the assizes on the charge of murdering his wife Elsie in Thorold on June 12, last. Stewart has been in Welland Hospital recovering from self-inflicted wounds when he is alleged to have turned the shotgun on himself.

True bills were also returned against Sam Marabito for attempted rape, and John Raback for robbery with violence. The charge of attempted murder against Edward Miller of Humberstone was reduced by the Grand Jury to one of wounding and doing grievious bodily harm.

MINISTER ENDORSES SCREEN OVER PULPIT.

While it is no new thing for an author to endorse the picturized version of his story, it is rather exceptional when an author who is at the same time a minister of the Gospel, declares that the screen is an infinitely better medium for reaching the public than is the pulpit.

Yet that, according to Henry Alexander MacRae, the well-known director, is exactly what Ralph Connor has said. Ralph Connor, which is the pen name of the Reverend Dr. C. W. Gordon—wrote a very large number of novels, prominent among them "The Sky Pilot," "Black Rock," "The Prospector," "Corporal Cameron" and "The Foreigner." "Corporal Cameron" was made into a picture by Director MacRae and under its new title — "Cameron of the Royal Mounted" —will be shown to-night at the Regent Theatre. It is a Hodkinson release and the cast includes Gaston Glass, Vivienne Osborne, Irving Cummings, George Clark and William Colvin.

AT THE ROYAL.

FAMOUS RACING CLASSIC, "KENTUCKY DERBY," AT ROYAL THURSDAY, REGINALD DENNY FEATURED

It is not often that a director follows one superior production with another of the same or even better calibre, but in "Human Hearts" and its successor, "The Kentucky Derby," King Baggot is believed to have done this. "Human Hearts" is the Universal-Jewel production which has been sweeping the world in a spectacular success. "The Kentucky Derby" is the Universal-Jewel racing melodrama of the screen which comes to the Royal Theatre next Thursday.

Baggot is one of Universal's featured directors and the critics have held out for him hopes of more than the average success. When "Human Hearts" came these expectations were lived up to in a generous degree.

In "The Kentucky Derby" Baggot again has used a cast of players with excellent reputations.

Reginald Denny has achieved many fine screen successes since he came to America. Before that he was an actor of note on the London stage and in English cinemas. Lillian Rich, star of London musical comedies at one time but known to America as the leading woman of such Universal-Jewel specials as "Man to Man," is the leading woman opposite Denny. Other supporting players are Lionel Belmore, Gertrude Astor, Walter McGrail, Wilfred Lucas, Kingsley Benedict, Bert Tracy, Bert Woodruff, Emmett King, Harry Carter, Pat Harmon, Anna Hernandez and Verne Winter.

The race tracks and estates of Kentucky actually were filmed in the making of "The Kentucky Derby." Real pictures of the Kentucky Derby, the most famous sporting event in America, form a thrilling part of the picture.

FAMOUS ENGLISH COMEDY "MORD EM'LY" PACKS THE ROYAL LAST NIGHT

It is the rule rather than the exception to see crowded houses at the Royal since the management changed and last night was no exception to the rule. Betty Balfour in "Mord Em'ly" a recent English importation, is mighty fine entertainment, clean and it leaves a nice taste in your mouth. There is lots of laughs and times when you need your handkerchief and it's so human!

Mord Em'ly's mother tries her best to make her daughter behave like a respectable young woman. Mord Em'ly leaves her Coster friends to work for three straight-laced spinsters. The scenes in their home are remarkably well handled. But she soon makes her way back for an evening with the gang. So Mord Em'ly ends up in a reformatory. For the first time in the history of the films, a reformatory is presented as a place where some human beings have charge of the unfortunates who are locked up there, and where good is occasionally accomplished.

When Mord Em'ly gets out she is subdued, but still able to take care of herself. She finds that her best girl chum has "gone barmy on religion" and joined the Salvation Army, and that the boy of whom she had thought most was a famous boxer. Mord Em'ly feels that she has been branded for life. Her friends are all respectable, but she is the daughter of a convict and herself a girl from a reformatory. She tries to hide herself, but eventually marries the boxer.

This story has been told without exaggeration and with a genuine touch of humor. The balance and proportions of this comedy-drama are excellent. It is well acted, and "Mord Em'ly" ought to be a popular movie. To my way of thinking, it is the best of the recent English pictures.

A comedy "This Way Out," showing the troubles of a movie manager, is original and filled with genuine laughs. The half-hour western featurette, "The Man from the West," is a good picture of its type. The whole program is chosen with care for the family trade that the Royal is catering to and evidently satisfying.

AT THE GRAND.

"THE MAID OF THE MOUNTAINS"

There are a few really wonderful musical comedies on the stage today, and foremost among them stands "The Maid of the Mountains." The name stands for more than ordinary musical comedy. It stands for and means everything in musical comedy to those who know this beautiful musical play and there are very few in Canada who do not know it. How can we help but know it when the biggest asset of this attraction is the everlasting boosting of every returned Canadian soldier. All our overseas boys saw this production in London, Engand where it ran for five years during and after the war at Daly's Theatre and where it created the world's record prolonged run. When this attraction played a coast to coast tour of Canada three years ago thousands were unable to secure seats and even with that the "Maid" broke all Canadian theatrical records. It is at the urgent request of theatre managers of Canada that this delightful musical comedy is being brought back to us.

Mr. Stanley T. Vermilyea, the well-known composer and producer is securing an exceptionally high class cast of forty well-known artists and from all signs new Canadian records will be made again.

"The Maid of the Mountains", comes to the Grand Opera House Thanksgiving Day for one evening and one matinee performance on November -, with a company and production that we have not had in Peterboro for many years. Our advice is not to miss this possibly last chance to see this "The World's Greatest Musical Comedy."

AT THE CAPITOL.

With such stars as Elaine Hammerstein, Bert Lytell, Claire Windsor and Lew Cody, with an atmosphere of old-world romance, and a plot that twines its way about a story of love and romance and adventure, "Rupert of Hentzau," the sequel to the popular "Prisoner of Zenda," holds sway at the Capitol Theatre for the first half of this week.

It is a romance of the old type, with a queen and a gallant cavalier as the central figures, against a background of palace life, in a little European kingdom where the pot of intrigue boils constantly, bubbling over occasionally into miniature revolutions and minor wars. Here is a beautiful queen, with a weak king and a dashing prince and a knave, like the picture figures in a pack of cards. Spies and courtiers and dashing gallants crowd the foreground, and moil and broil about the secret love of the queen and her childhood knight. Far away from the boredom of modern romances, they occupy their own little colorful world, in a swift-moving story of love and passion and fiery hearts.

The duel scene between the hero and the knave makes the outstanding episode of the picture a thrilly interlude of skilful clashing of swift rapiers, with the audience holding its breath in sympathy for the gallant chevalier.

Those who enjoyed in their heyday the robust romances of Anthony Hope, who answer to the appeal of youth and romantic fire, who care for the love stories of another more colorful age, will like "Rupert of Hentzau," the picture crowded with romance and action.

GAVE ADDRESS TO THE WAR VETERANS

Judge Huycke said Veterans Should Take More Active Interest In Affairs

A rousing meeting of the local branch of the G.W.V.A. was held in the hall last evening when the nomination for officers for the year 1924 was held, when Dr. Sutton was unanimously acclaimed as president for the forthcoming year.

Comrade R. E. Layfield and J. Winterbottom were also nominated to the positions of 1st Vice and 2nd Vice-Presidents without opposition, and acclaimed elected.

The following were also nominated for the executive committee to be voted upon at the next regular meeting in December.

Comrades W. Stanley, R. Long, C. Wiggins, W. G. Nicholls, P. C. Bonner, O. Kellor, C. R. Coleman, F. A. Dainton, J. Milby and W. F. Huycke Sergt.-at-arms — Comrades F. Fry, V. Stewart and B. Sloan.

An application was received from the P.A.A.A. asking permission to use the top floor of the G.W.V.A. for boxing purposes. This was referred to a committee of three, consisting of Comrades R. E. Layfield, T. Williams and W. Stanley, to interview the representatives of the P.A.A.A. and report back their findings at the next meeting.

Final arrangements for Poppy Day on Saturday next was completed, a number of those present volunteering their services for the occasion. Poppies will be sold throughout the city, and the members will also be assisted by several of the Ladies' Auxiliary who have kindly offered their services.

On Sunday a memorial service will be held at the Grand Opera House in the afternoon, when the Hon. Dr. Beland, Minister of the D.S.C.R., and who was a prisoner of war in Germany for three years, will give an address. Other speakers will include the Rev. J. Rollins, His Honor Judge Huycke and G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P.

All members of the G.W.V.A. and returned men in the district are earnestly requested to parade at the G.W.V.A. hall at 2 p.m. sharp in uniform and a special invitation is accorded to the officers and members of the various militia units to take part in this ceremony, their will be a short service at the Cenotaph after which all parties will march to the Opera House, where the main service will be held. Everybody is cordially invited to this service. Mr. R. J. Devey and Lieut W. Peryer, will have charge of the musical arrangements.

After the business of the evening was concluded, a musical programme was carried through, under the direction of Honorary Comrade R. J. Devey, after which a splendid address was delivered by Honorary Comrade Judge Huycke. His Honour declared that the Veterans should take a more active part in municipal, provincial and national affairs, that they should see to it that all things being equal that a returned man, and a returned man only, should get the preference, whether it was a municipal, provincial, or Federal election, or some position that came under those headings, commending to them the idea of service. He then concluded his address by impressing upon the Veterans that it was their duty to unite together to see that these things were done, and to help to make Peterborough a better city and Canada the greatest in the British Empire. At the conclusion of the address, His Honour was accorded a splendid ovation, and was heartily thanked for his address.

This concluded the business of the evening.

Society

The regular monthly meeting of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association was held last evening, with the president, Mrs. S. F. M. Touchburn, in the chair. The routine business session was followed by an interesting talk, delivered in the speaker's own inimitable manner, by Mr. F. H. Dobbin, on "The Human Side of the Mother's Allowance Commission." Mr. Dobbin's talk, which told of the benefits accruing from the Mothers' Allowance legislation, and related some of the humorous and pathetic angles of the work, was greatly enjoyed by his audience. An evening for parents, to increase interest in school matters between teachers, scholars and parents, will be held on the 16th of November.

Mr. H. G. Bigwood left this morning for Niagara Falls to attend the funeral of his mother, which takes place on Wednesday.

Mrs. W. Yale and children, of 223 Princess Street, have returned from visiting friends in Chatham, Ont., and Paris, Ont.

He is actively participating in the Anglican Diocesan Mission and will conduct services at Cookstown, St. Saviour's church, East Toronto, and in St. John's Garrison church, Toronto.

Mrs. T. S. McKay, of Truro, N.S., accompanied by her two children, is visiting her father, Mr. J. W. Carey, 187 Antrim street, with whom she will spend the winter. Mrs. McKay will be remembered by many residents as a former member of Peterborough's teaching staff in the Central school for nine years.

The Misses Nora Gray and Nora Forster of Bridlington, England, are visiting in the city for a few days.

Miss Babe Martyn of Providence Hospital, Detroit, Michigan, is progressing favorably after an operation for appendicitis.

DELORME TRIAL WAS POSTPONED TILL NEXT YEAR

Declaring Insidious Side Issues Injected In to Case Accused's Counsel Withdraws from Defence

NEARLY A SENSATION

MONTREAL, Nov. 7. Canadian Press. — By order of Chief Justice Martin, presiding in the Court of King's Bench, the Delorme trial was this morning postponed until next sitting of this court due March, 1924

This decision followed a near sensation caused when C. H. Cahan, K. C., associate counsel for Delorme in June, and appearing to-day in the absence of Alleyn Taschereau, K.C., senior Delorme counsel, announced his withdrawal from the case, and gave as a principal reason the allegation that "certain insidious side issues were injected into the case at the end of the trial last June. He declared "I feel that I, born and bred an English speaking Protestant could not efficiently defend accused when such side issues are injected."

Imputations Regretted.

R. L. Calder, K. C., Crown Prosecutor, responded that the accused was treated exactly on the same basis as any other accused, and not one one fact, thought, suggestion, word or inuendo was made outside of absolute revelancy to the case. "I am sorry," he said, "that the pleasant relations which existed during the trial should be clouded by imputations of this kind."

C. H. Cahan, K.C., upon being asked what was the reason why counsel for defense were so unprepared that they now desired postponement of second trial of Abbe Delorme, replied that the counsel for defense were embarrassed by expenses and liabilities which they had personally incurred on behalf of the accused at the first trial and that they have not a dollar available for preparation of defense of accused at second trial. He added personally I am fully convinced that Abbe Delorme is entirely innocent of the crime of which he is charged. I am convinced that Raoul Delorme was not killed in house at No. 190 St. Hubert street; that his dead body was never carried in the Abbe's automobile; that the handwriting on box containing the watch was never written by the Abbe, nor with his connivance nor with his knowledge; that the Abbe's pistol was not used to kill Raoul Delorme; but that Raoul Delorme was killed by at least two men, and probably in the presence of a third on the outskirts of the city and that his body was not left near Snowdon Junction until about daybreak on morning when it was discovered there.

"Under these circumstances, it seems to me a horrible calamity that in Christian Community such as this an innocent man should be condemned to death by reason of prejudice or suspicion, merely because sufficient funds are not available to defray the necessary and legitimate expenses of his proper and efficient defense.

"I believe that if people of this province knew all the available facts and realized the peril in which the accused is placed, they would contribute generously in aid of his defense."

Leader of Bandits Plays Hide and Seek With Toronto Police

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—(Canadian Press). — Norman "Red" Ryan, leader of the Bank bandit gang who held up the Toronto Branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, is playing hide and seek with the authorities.

It is rumored that he was in Toronto last week, and has been at the Roller Rink in company with his sweetheart, woman well-known to the police. She has been under suspicion and shadowed by the police ever since Ryan made his escape from Penitentiary at Portsmouth. She has been quizzed several times by the police.

It was a telephone conversation over-heard by another woman that gave Hamilton and Toronto police the tip that Ryan and his gang were visiting a road house at Van Wagner's Beach and resulted in the recent daylight raid on the resort.

RIFLE PRACTICE NOT PERMITTED

Board of Education Lacked Sympathy in Proposal for Rifle Ranges in Three Schools.

The Board of Education, in majority, were not sympathetic toward a proposition from Cadet Inspector Captain Heron, submitted by School Inspector A. Mowat, last night, that firing ranges be fitted up in the basements of Prince of Wales, Queen Mary and King Edward schools and on motion, in amendment, by Messrs. Denne and Braund the request was turned down, an original motion by Dr. Neal and McKone that the proposal be allowed failing to carry.

In support of his resolution, Mr. Denne pointed out that the firing practices would take place between 3.30 and 4 p.m.—school hours—any any child might run in front of the targets and suffer serious injury. He held that the board had no right to assume responsibility in a matter like this, entailing more or less danger to the children.

Inspector Mowat explained that target practice is part of the cadets' education; the department supplies the rifles and ammunition. Belleville and other cities permit firing ranges in their schools, he said, and there is no danger when properly supervised.

Mr. Richardson replied that rifle practice is an education Public school children can get along very well without, and Mr. Braund thought it time enough to acquire such training when the children entered the Collegiate Institute.

New Cadet Corps.

A suggestion also by Cadet Inspector Captain Heron that cadet corps be formed in Queen Alexandria and King George schools was adopted on motion of Mrs. Morris and Dr. Neal.

Inspector Mowat's request that the government's grant of $50 to each of the cadet corps be applied to physical culture equipment found favor with the board. This was fathered by Mr. Denne and Mr. McKone, the resolution stipulating that the school principals render an account in detail of how the money is spent.

But Identity of Woman Victim With Skull Crushed in Baffles the Reading Police.

SKELETON EXAMINED

READING, Nov. 7. — Detectives have reached an impasse in the Neversink Mountain murder mystery despite the numerous clues for its solution. They declare, however, that this is only temporary and that an excellent chance remains for a successful termination of the case.

For the moment they are back where they started. Such clues as they have run out have ended in nothing. The identity of the young woman whose skeleton, with its skull crushed in, was found in a hidden grave on the lonely mountain summit, is still unknown.

No murder mystery in this section of Pennsylvania during the present generation has evoked so much interest as this one. The police are deluged with suggestions and theories. They are sifting all angles energetically in an effort to establish a record in the baffling case.

Dr. John H. Rorke, Coroner of Berks., has announced that no inquest will be held at present, as the authorities should have ample time to work out the mystery. So many persons have sought to view the skeleton that the Coroner has ordered that no one but detectives and officials working on the case be permitted to do so.

Five Names Eliminated.

Originally the police believed that the body might be that of any one of five missing women whose names had been brought into the case. Now they are reasonably certain that the skeleton is not that of any of the five, although the possibilities that the murdered woman was Mrs. Grace McBride, of Pittsburgh, or Miss Violet May Starry, of Utica, N.Y., are not entirely eliminated. They are hoping for full aid from the police of those cities on this angle.

The principal clues are the articles of jewellery found on or near the skeleton, the woman's suede slippers marked with the name of a Pittsburg paper five months old, found nearby, and the spade, of army trench type, with which the hurried grave was dug. The initials in two rings belonging to the woman are regarded by the police as one of the main features which may lead to solution.

The initials are "S. L. L. N." on an eighteen-karat white gold wedding ring and "W. C. X." on a black onyx ring set with a diamond. Without the initials the rings virtually would be valueless as clues because both are of a design of which thousands are sold.

All local clues having proved fruitless, the police are turning again to their original surmise that the victim was from some distant city, that she may have been slain far from Reading and the body brought to Neversink Mountain for hiding. The spot for the grave was chosen with care and, but for the ferreting of a hunter's dog, might never have been found.

Examine Hair and Teeth.

The police concentrated vigorously on processes of identification. Strands of the woman's hair found on a barrette with red stones inset were placed under a microscope and the hair found to be a dark chestnut color. Careful examination of the skeleton by Coroner's physicians determined that the woman had been dead for about two months. Scrutiny of the victim's teeth showed that they were of a peculiar overlapping type. Reading dentists have been asked to search their records for patients with teeth of that sort.

Such portions of the clothing as were left intact by the elements were re-examined. Among these were the suede slippers, which were found to be of size three. On the inside soles is stamped "Made expressly for Pollock's."

May Have Been Utica Girl.

The lead in the direction of Miss Starry, of Utica, is supported still by the girl's sudden disappearance from Reading, where she is said to have come to purchase real estate, and the fact that a business card with identifiable pencil notations, which was given to Miss Starry by a local real estate firm, was found near the skeleton. The color of the victim's hair also corresponds to that of Miss Starry.

A friend of Miss Starry, from Utica, is coming to examine the jewellery and fragments of clothing.

The possibilities that the victim may have been Mrs. Anna Stevens or Mrs. Nelms Miller, both of Reading, have been eliminated definitely. It was found on further investigation that the jewellery and slippers did not correspond with those worn by Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Miller is said by a sister to be alive and well in California.

MANY MISCONCEPTIONS REGARDING THOSE WHO SERVE IN A PUBLIC WAY

It is Easier for Central to Give Correct Number Than Say Line is Busy — At the License Bureau.

STREET CAR MAN

It is easier for Central to give a caller the correct number than it is for her to say "line busy," contrary to the opinion of the much abused business man who becomes exasperated by frequent delays. Some men have been heard to express the opinion that the young lady at exchange reports the line busy from a spirit of malice or to save herself the trouble of making the connection.

This is not so. J. M. McHardy, local manager says. The young lady can make the connection in a fraction of the exertion and she is too busily occupied to pick out an individual on whom to vent a grouch, if she has one. Telephone Exchange operators are wonderfully good-natured, especially considering the trials attending their business.

Here is a typical case. During the rush hour central plugs in, in answer to a call. She says "number please." The caller, brooking no interruption says something like this: "I want Mrs. William Henry MacDuff, 3456 Salem street, Toronto. Her number is Kenwood 9876." Central getting an inning when the caller has finished the monologue, says "You must get long distance," The caller is offended.

Central has a busy and exacting task, and she makes it as pleasant for herself as she can by giving the best service contrary to popular conceptions.

Are Not Nervous

Another much maligned person is the would-be bridegroom who approaches the License Clerk in search of permission to assume the bonds of matrimony. Popular fancy has pictured him as a nervous wreck, stammering incoherent answers to dozens of questions; unable to recall the name of his bride-to-be and same times even without information as to where he intends having the ceremony performed.

This S. R. Armsrong, City Clerk says is bosh. Men who apply to him for marriage licenses are in full possession of their faculties and seem in no danger of attacks of nervousness. An occasional applicant, he admits cannot tell whether his fiancee has one given name or two, and many of them do not know the exact age of their future partners. These, however, are not lapses caused by the nature of the business on which they are engaged but merely show the spirit of taking for granted minor details in connection with the future partner of those concerned. The theory of the half-witedness of the applicant for a mariage license is exploded.

Vaudeville To Blame.

Popular misconception exists as to the efforts of a street car conductor in calling the names of the streets. A conductor of many years' experience says it is much easier for him to say the name distinctly than to call it in a befuddled manner, "as if I was drunk," he said. Vaudeville artists are much to blame for foisting the indistinct street car and railway conductor or the public. Much amusement has been given many audiences but the result has been the branding of all ticket-punchers as equally indistinct in their announcing of stations. It appears certain at any rate, the conductors do not take a course in indistinct announcing of stations and streets, nor do they make earnest efforts to outdo each other in thickness of enunciation.

Barbers are in another class regarding which a libellous misconception exists. That they talk in a boring manner to their patrons has been accepted as truth by generations and has formed a topic of conversation in men's clubs since the days when Cromwell's roundheads first had their heads shaven. The truth is that barbers are unusually well posted on public affairs, listening as they do to the prattling of their customers who represent all degrees and divisions of society. THE FALL SHRINE CEREMONIAL HELD HAMILTON TUESDAY

The Shrine Band and Arab Patrol Headed the Parade.

Assistant Rabban G. L. Hay attended the Fall Shrine Ceremonial of Rameses' Temple on Tuesday, held in Hamilton this year in honor of Potentate Frank Walker, whose home is there. The scene of the Ceremonial was the Grand Opera House and with about 700 Nobles in attendance it was carried out very smoothly and successfully.

On the arrival of the special train from Toronto, the Shrine band, the Arab Patrol in charge of Past Potentate Hermiston and Captain Luttrell, and the Nobles marched from the station to the Royal Connaught. Here the Patrol gave a splendid exhibition of their drills before a very large gathering of citizens, who evidenced their appreciation by bursts of hearty applause. All street traffic was halted for about half an hour during the exhibition.

After the ceremonial in the Opera House the Nobles adjourned to the Royal Connaught where a splendid banquet was served to over 600 Nobles. There was an entertainment given by professionals on the dining room stage.

The Potentate is deserving of great credit for having put on so successful a ceremonial outside of the City of Toronto where it is usually held. Preparations entail a vast amount of work, and the outstanding success of yesterday's Ceremonial in Hamilton indicates that Potentate Walker displayed both initiative and hard work in his preparations, and that he was ably supported by the assisting Nobles.

OSHAWA TO PLAY HERE SATURDAY

Peterboro Rugby fans will have a chance on Saturday afternoon of seeing an exciting battle when Oshawa High School will meet the Peterboro Collegiate in the first of a home and home series in the Inter-Scholastic O. R. T. U. race. The game will be played at Riverside Park with the return game to be played in Oshawa on Thanksgiving Day, points to count. The winner will meet Kingston Collegiate on the following Saturday to decide the Eastern Ontario honours.

Saturday's game should be a good exhibition of fast rugby. The Oshawa team has a bigger percentage of veterans on its line up and will have the advantage in weight over the Peterboro students but the latter hope by speed and inside stuff to more than make up for the superior bulk of the visitors. The conditions are such as to suggest a struggle all the way and there should be the best crowd of the season out to see the fast collegiate crews in action.

FRENCH IVORY SALE, BOND'S DRUG STORE.

POINCARE SENDS A NEW NOTE TO GREAT BRITAIN

French Premier Will Not Budge One Single Inch from Restriction He Has Imposed.

BRITISH PATIENT

LONDON, November 7 (United Press). — Again Premier Poincare has reaffirmed the restriction which he imposed on the expert investigation of the German reparations situation.

In a new note to Great Britain, received here on Tuesday, the French Premier declines to make a single concession. Whether he will depart from this attitude when the Hughes-Jusserand conversations have been considered in Paris, is a matter for speculation.

So far his attitude toward the British Government is concerned, Poincare has not changed.

Make Another Attempt.

Britain in the meantime has decided to make one more attempt to bring France into line, and will address another note to Paris.

This Government at present is banking almost entirely on American efforts to establish a common ground with Ambassador Jusserand. There is also some hope that the solidarity of the other Allies in favouring a A reparations inquiry of broad scope may have some weight on the French opinion. The latest French communication explains in detail the reasons for limiting the investigation to Germany's "present capacity."

It is pointed out in British circles that Poincare, despite his repeated insistence on the strict observance of the Treaty of Versailles, is in reality opposed to that document, when he prohibits a full examination into the reparations situation.

The British take the stand that the Treaty authorised the reparations situation.

The British also take the stand that the Treaty authorised the Reparations Commission to re-assess Germany's capacity; in fact, provided for re-assessment of the reparations figures, as conditions demanded.

Drafting a Programme.

Premier Poincare has sent a note to Britain saying French experts are drafting a programme for the proposed conference to discuss Germany's capacity to pay reparations, it was reported in well-informed circles in Paris to-day.

The French programme will be submitted to Britain for approval before being sent to Washington as an invitation for the United States to participate in the conference, according to the report.

It was reported to-day that Premier Poincare's fresh instructions to Ambassador Jusserand in Washington explains that the proposed conferences of experts may examine the questions of the Ruhr and German's resources, but cannot pass judgment on French action in occupying the additional German territory.

France also will refuse to allow discussion of the contracts recently made between herself and German interests, and will not consider the discussion of Germany's capacity to pay until a time when she feels that it is possible to valuate this capacity with a fair degree of accuracy.

Signs of Opposition.

General Maginot, Minister of War, departed to-day for Dusseldorf, presumably in connection with Poincare's new demand that Germany permit the Inter-Allied Military Control Commission to resume its work, including the determination of whether or not Germany has more than the 100,000 armed men allowed by the Treaty of Versailles

The Berlin correspondent of Le Journal telegraphed to-day that it was thought that the German Government will reject the demand as outlined in the note which Poincare despatched yesterday in the name of the Council of Ambassadors.

Meantime, there were renewed signs of internal opposition to the Premier's programme, and Deputy Magallon announced he would interpellate Poincare regarding his policy in the Rhineland as soon as Parliament is convened

Bold Robbers Make Big Jewelry Haul in Broad Daylight

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(Canadian Press).— While hundreds were passing the busy corner at Broadway and 47th Street here this morning, three well dressed men entered the Jewellery Store or Julius Howard, forced the proprietor and his clerk, Murray Kanter into a near room and rifled show cases of jewellery valued at $75,000.

CHEESE BOARD SEASON ENDED

Last Meeting of Year Held This Morning When 894 Boxes Sold at 19 1-16 cents.

Peterborough Cheese Board met to-day for the last session of the year, disposing of 894 cheese at 19 1/16 cents. Following the boarding of the cheese a resolution was put through by Messrs. Cook and Robinson that the Board adjourn until May 21 next or whenever called by the President and Secretary.

Bidding was started this morning by J. S. Cooke, buying for W. S. Cooke and Son, at 17 1-2 cents and rose through ten offers to the closing price, at which Mr. Cooke took the Lakefield car of 329 boxes. On second selection G. A. Gillespie took 435 boxes at the same price. Other buyers were W. E. Fanning, for the Canadian Packing Co. and G. Thompson for the A. A. Ayer Co., Montreal.

Factories boarding cheese were: Young's Point, 95; North Dummer, 54; Dunsford, 50; Warminster, 60; Warsaw, 130; Oakdale 110; East Emily 70; Cedardale, 50; Star, 45; Buckhorn, 50; South Burleigh, 20; Killarney 160.

To-day's price represented a drop of 1/16 cent from last Board and a drop of 4 5/8 cents from the season's high price. A few factories will continue making cheese through November, but the buyers do not consider the quantity justifies their making the trip.

PRIZE-WINNERS IN LOCAL COMPETITION

Closest Estimators in Porter S. White Co's Annual Sale Event.

The interest in Porter S. White Company's estimating contest, during their annual sale, which closed on Saturday night was much greater than usual and the estimates, while the majority were not far from the mark, ranged from impossibly small figures into equally impossible millions. The winner had to estimate how many parcels were delivered by the company's delivery rigs and did not include orders that were carried home, or loaded into the rigs of out of town buyers. Mrs. Cottingham's estimate of 4851 was the exact number of parcels handled by the Porter S. White Company's delivery in the ten days, and her correct figures entitle her to the first prize of 50 lbs of sugar. Second prize of 25 lbs of sugar went to A. H. Cameron of 521 Hunter street, whose estimate was 4864. A pound of best tea was awarded to the next nearest six, as follows:

J. A. Robinson 505 King street, 4865.
Mrs. Laing, 629 Rubidge street, 4867.
Mrs. Tremain 360 Smith street 4830.
Mrs. Bolam, 565 Gilmour street, 4879.
Mrs. Cottingham, 430 Donegal street, 4823.

SHALL SCHOOL KIDDIES PLAY VICTORIA PARK

Education Board's Supervision Com. Will Take Matter Up With Council's Parks Com.

GYMNASIUM PLAN

The Board of Education decided last evening, in regular session, that their Supervision Committee and Inspector A. Mowat shall take up with the City Council's Parks Committee the latter body's request that Central School children be restricted from using Victoria Park as a playground excepting when the park has donned its winter mantle of snow and ice. This was the motion of Mr. Denne and Mrs. Morris, and is the outcome of a complaint laid before Council's Parks Committee at its last meeting by Parsk Caretaker David Hayward that he is somewhat handicapped in giving the grounds his best care by some 400 or more school children making a popular playground of the park.

Mr. Denne appreciated that the children should not run over the grass during wet weather, and Mr. E. B. Fowler thought they should be permitted use of the park when the sod is dry. But it was here pointed out that the communication from City Clerk Armstrong drew attention to the evident desire of Council's Parks Committee that playing in Victoria Park be restricted to the winter months.

Inspector Mowat said heretofore the senior ones had always enjoyed the privilege of playing in the eastern portion of Victoria Park.

School Physician's Report.

School Physician Dr. A. W. McPherson reported that he had made 663 examinations of children during October and issued 324 defect slips for the following ailments: Enlarged tonsils, defective teeth, defective vision, enlarged thyroid, and including 10 cases of malnutrition. This resulted in 52 defect slips being returned, 10 children receiving medical attention, 15 securing dental treatment and 18 going under the care of a physician.

Examinations made by the school nurse for the month numbered 209.

Dr. McPherson also drew attention to precaution against diphtheria found in toxin anti-toxin, which produces lasting immunity by inoculating the child with a small amount on three occasions at week intervals. And with the Board's permission he proposed to offer parents that their children be tested to see if they are susceptible to diphtheria, and, if so, to inoculate them, beginning at the Prince of Wales' School in two weeks' time. The medicine would, he added, be supplied by the Provincial Board of Health.

The Board approved of the plan outlined above, but distinctly stipulated that parents who can afford to pay for their children's treatment shall do so.

The report as a whole was adopted on motion by Dr. Neal and Mrs. Morris.

Dental Officer Reports.

Dental Officer Dr. J. C. Green reported work done at the school clinic during September and October as follows: Extractions, 94; filling, silver 115, copper amalgam 11, porcelain 3.

Attendance Officer's Report.

Attendance Officer J. Abraham reported 23 children at home sick during October, most of whom have now returned to school. There were two cases of scarlet fever, three truants, seven irregulars, three with no boots (which have since been provided), and one removal from the city.

Report of Supervision.

For this committee Chairman J. A. McKone reported as follows:

Your Supervision Committee begs to report and recommend that the arrangement made with the Y. M. C. A. last year for the use of the gymnasium and the service of the physical instructor be continued for the present term of five months from the 1st November at $700, payable monthly, in the usual way.

Your committee also recommend that the arrangement made last year with the Y.W.C.A. for the use of their gymnasium for the Collegiate Institute girls for the sum of $30 for the season, October to May, be continued this year.

This report was adopted without amendment.

There were present: Chairman A. A. Fowler, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Roland Denne, E. B. Fowler, J. M. Greene, J. A. McKone, J. T. Braund, W. A. Richardson and Dr. F. C. Neal.

LIFE MEMBERSHIP TO MRS. JOHN HOPE

Interesting Event Took Place at the Westwood Church.

WESTWOOD, Nov. 7. — At the October meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Westwood Presbyterian Church a full attendance of members was present. A most pleasing feature of the meeting was the presentation of a life membership certificate to Mrs. John Hope by the Auxiliary, who for the past 30 years has been a very energetic and faithful president. The Y. W. A., who were guests of the meeting, presented her with a life membership pin. The address was read by Mrs. Thos. Shearer, and the presentations made by Mrs. Thos. Davidson and Miss Helen Carter.

Although taken completely by surprise, Mrs. Hope, in a few well-chosen words, thanked the members for their kindness and expressed the desire to be long spared to carry on her interest in the W. M. S. work. After the close of the meeting lunch was served and a most enjoyable social time spent by all present.

THOUSAND STORES IN BERLIN PILLAGED BY ANTI-SEMITIC GANGS

More Than a Hundred Persons Sabred and One Died of Bullet Wound—Looting Continues.

JAILS SHELTER JEWS.

BERLIN, Nov. .6—In the food riots in several sections of Berlin more than a thousand shops have been wrecked and pillaged and more than a hundred persons injured by sabre cuts. One man died of a shot wound. Owing to the anti-semitic character of the riots the police forbade a proposed meeting of Anti- Jewish organizations to-night.

The activity of the police to-day prevented the excesses attaining the scale of yesterday's, and many shops remained closed. This evening again however, the city was given over to unruly elements, the looting of shops proceeding in all parts of Berlin, without serious clashes with the police.

BERLIN POLICE DENY MALTREATING JEWS

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—Charges that the Jewish prisoners taken into custody by the police yesterday, ostensibly to protect them during the anti semitic disorders were being maltreated by the police, appeared today in the Vossische Zeitung. Police Chief Kaupisch, however, denied that his men had been guilty of brutality or partiality and issued an order directing the police to protect the lives and property of citizens, regardless of religious differences.

The disorders yesterday marked the culmination of the agitation carried on against the Jews by the German nationalists. A mob of 30,000 invaded the Jewish sections of the city and no Jew was safe on the streets. Passersby were stopped at every turn and were searched, maltreated robbed of their possessions and in some cases stripped of their clothes. Jewish homes were searched for food and money, and the owners offering the least resistance were severely beaten.

Shops owned by Jews were plundered of their contents which were hurled through the windows, smashed by the rowdies in order to gain entrance. Jewish tenement dwellers were dragged from their beds and driven to the streets in their night clothes.

The newspapers this morning ascribe the responsibility for the rioting to the determined propaganda carried on for months among the unemployed. The Tageblatt and the Lokal Anzeiger remark it is significant that the attack was not sporadic but broke out simultaneously in the principal Jewish sections.

Open Memorial Tower to British Settlers.

CAPETOWN, South Africa, Nov. 7.—(Canadian Press Cable. Via Reuters.)—In the course of his farewell tour Prince Arthur of Connaught, Governor General of the South Africa Union, yesterday opened the "Settlers' Companile," a lofty tower of dignified proportion erected in Port Elizabeth at the approximate spot where the first British settlers landed from surf boats in 1820 after the final cession of the Cape to Great Britain.

The retiring Governor-General congratulated the city on the erection of a memorial worthy of the great traditions it commemorates.

Quebec Motorist on Manslaughter Charge.

RIMOUSKI, Que., November 7 (Canadian Press). — A Matapedia merchant named D. I. Bernier, who is held here on the charge of manslaughter, preferred against him as the result of the death of Antonio Poitras, a young man residing in Amqui, who was killed by the accused's automobile, appeared yesterday before Magistrate Fiset in the Court of Sessions.

The investigation is expected to last several days ,and Mr. Perrault Casgrain is acting for the Crown, while the accused through his attorney has applied for bail.

Socialists Will Defend Republic

The Socialist manifesto says that the army and republicans with military training will spring from the earth at the first summons.

DOUBT SALE OF BRITISH STOCK OIL COMPANY

Reported Deal With Royal Dutch Combine Would Be Opposed By Parliament.

FUEL FOR NAVY.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—Much doubt is expressed in Government quarters over the possibility of a deal going through for the sale of the British Government's 5,000,000 shares in the Anglo-Persian Oil Company for £12,000,000, as reported yetserday by the Daily Express.

Officials in the Foreign Office point out that the Government in 1922 declined an offer of £32,000,000, which was then the market value of its holdings.

It is believed the sale to the Shell-Royal Dutch combine, if consummated, would be discountenanced by Parliament, which, like the general public, might feel that the sale was depriving the British Navy of one of its most valuable sources of fuel oil and making the country dependent upon United States and Dutch companies.

At the same time there is a feeling among certain of the Government's advisers that the identification of the Government with a private oil concern is obnoxious from a political and international standpoint, the oil question having been an important diplomatic issue at all the recent international conferences. These officials therefore favor the sale, and one predicted to-night that the ultimate disposal of the Government's interests are not far distant.

Ottawa Doctor Will Appeal Conviction.

OTTAWA, November 7 (Canadian Press). — An appeal will be entered in the Division Court here against the conviction of Dr. Gordon Booth by Magistrate Hopewell on a charge of illegally furnishing drugs.

Dr. Booth was convicted and fined $200.00, on the first charge laid by the R.C.M.P., and decisions on three other charges are pending against him.

The grounds of appeal are that the prosecution failed to prove that Dr. Booth acted otherwise than according to medical practice.

Buffaloes Slaughtered Humanely As Possible.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 7.—"Foolish fabrication" declared Hon. Charles Stewart, Federal Minister of the Interior, in commenting here on reports that buffalo in Wainwright Park had been turned loose in a herd and tortured duing the recent slaughter. The animals were killed in the most humane way possible, Mr. Stewart said.

A healthy adult's lungs contain 170,000 cells.

ALBERTA WILL ORGANIZE FOR LIQUOR TRADE

Early Session of Legislature to Implement the Mandate of the Majority

REPLENISH STOCKS.

EDMONTON, Alberta, November 7. — The Alberta government has issued the following statement on the referendum:

"The electors of the province have spoken very decisively in favor of another system of liquor administration. It is now left to the Legislature to frame suitable legislation and for the government to organize the necessary machinery to carry into effect the will of the people as soon as that can possibly be done.

Apart entirely from the question of legislation there are important problems of organization which will take a little time—for example since assuming office the stocks of liquor have been depleted by over $1,000,000, and immediate attention will have to be given to the important question of adequate stocks.

A session of the Legislature will, of course, be necessary.

A special session will not be called but the date of the regular session will be advanced and an adjournment made if necessary to deal with the regular sessional business.

Why Cough Your Head Off

Make Your Own Cough Mixture for the Whole Family and Save Money. It's Easy.

When you can make in your own home a wonderful cough mixture far ahead of any you can buy ready made, why not do it?

This home made mixture will stop the most stubborn cough and is fine for chest colds and acute catarrh. Children love it.

Get from any druggist one ounce of Parmint (double strength)—to this add a little granulated sugar and enough water to make half a pint—that's all there is to it.

Like a soothing, healing poultice one costly substance in this home-made cough mixture spreads itself completely over the membrane of the throat. This causes the most stubborn hang-on cough to cease almost instantly. No ordinary slow-acting cough syrup contains this expensive ingredient.

Any remedy that overcomes catarrh, partially or wholly, is bound to be of benefit to those who are troubled with head noises and catarrhal deafness.

Get a Parmint and get better.

ITALY FAVORS PEACE LEAGUE

Mussolini Tells Canadian Italy Will Participate If Rights Secured.

ROME, November 7 (Canadian Press). — Sir Eric Drummond, the Secretary-General of the League of Nations, who was received here by Premier Mussolini, met the representatives of the Italian and foreign press yesterday, and gave them some details of this conference.

"I am happy at the result of the meeting," he said. "The Premier assured me that Italy had no prejudice whatever against the League, and that he himself favoured the principles of the League as an association of nations to effect the peaceful settlement of disputes and promote co-operation in technical international fields."

Mussolini, however, informed the Secretary-General that Italy required that her position as one of the great Powers and one of the founders of the League and a provisional signatory of the Treaty of Versailles, should be adequately established.

Italy holds that her position is insufficiently recognised, and that if Italian rights were secured Italy would be ready to participate fully, and further, that the popularity of the League with Italy would doubtless greatly increase.

Sir Eric assured the Premier that he recognised Italy's claims as just and equitable, and that he personally was endeavouring to ensure the principle of national equality, which was the underlying spirit of the League. He expressed certainty that the requirements of Italy as explained by Premier Mussolini would be understood and appreciated by the other members of the League, with a desire to effectuate them in the friendliest spirit.

At a meeting of League sympathisers, Secretary-General Drummond declared that the main obstacle to a popular understanding of the League was lack of knowledge of what has been achieved, and also the impression here that Italy's position has not been recognised which vicious circle, Sir Eric added, he would do his utmost to break down.

WASHINGTON AWAITS DETAILED STATEMENT OF FRENCH POSITION

Reported Deadlock Between Governments Without Foundation — Translation of French Phrase 'Capacity to Pay' Subject to Various Interpretations.

DOOR STILL OPEN.

EXPLANATION CABLED.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—(Canadian Press).—The French Foreign Office this evening despatched to Ambassador Jusserand at Washington a long cablegram which will enable him to amplify fully the outline of the French viewpoint which he has already given to Secretary of State Hughes on the reparation problem.

This is for the purpose of meeting the wishes of Secretary Hughes, who, in the course of his talk with M. Jusserand yesterday, asked for further information as to the limits France desired to place the work of the proposed experts commission.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(Canadian Press).—Availability of United States co-operation in the European economic crisis apparently hinged tonight upon detailed explanations of the Poincare restrictions on the proposed expert inquiry into the reparations tangle. Up to this time it was learned authoritatively, the Washington Government has not been able to find out exactly what the French Premier had in mind in proposing to confine the inquiry to Germany's "present" capacity to make reparations payments.

Conversations between President Coolidge and Ambassador Jusserand today and between the French Ambassador and Secretary Hughes, yesterday, it is known, turned almost wholly upon the effort to determine the exact nature of the French restriction. As it had been translated in London, the French phrase reads: "Capacity to pay at present and for a limited future period."

It was evident today that the Ambassador had been unable to amplify this sufficiently and has cabled his Government for a detailed explanation for which Government officials here are waiting with deep interest.

Public Be Patient.

In view of this situation it was stated emphatically that reports that the negotiations had met a deadlock were wholly without foundation. Administration officials, on the contrary, regard the door as still open to United States co-operation in the search for a solution of the reparations problem, provided the Allied Powers desire such aid. After President Coolidge's conference today with Ambassador Jusserand, which lasted nearly half an hour, a White House spokesman urged that the public exercise patience.

It was pointed out that Europe's present economic plight had a historic background and was not to be remedied on twenty-four hours notice. Matters of the utmost delicacy for the French Government were involved. This is recognized in Washington, and although it is felt in Government circles that the economic situation is growing darker day by day and there is every reason to avoid delay in getting the experts to work, if the Powers can reach agreement on that course, there is no disposition to withdraw the offer of co-operation while there is any reasonable chance that the Allies can find a way to avail themselves of it.

Foggy Translation.

The language of the French proposals is subject to various possible interpretations. A complete understanding of the limitations sought is rendered the more difficult by the fact that the original text of the French restrictions is in the French language and variations in translation are possible as there are many English equivalents, not precisely similar in meaning, for some French expressions and words.

It was on the basis of his conference with Mr. Hughes that the Ambassador formulated the inquiry that he addressed to Paris, and it is hoped by officials here that the reply will show that the United States view and that of the French authorities are no so far apart as it has been feared in some quarters.

While further developments apparently awaited upon the formulation and receipt of their French reply so far as final decision on the expert committee is involved, Government officials here have been giving further consideration to the possible scope of United States aid in the foreshadowed famine crisis in at least parts of Germany. Study of reports from Germany has convinced President Coolidge that aid must be forthcoming during the winter and until the next German crops can be harvested.

Allied Council Demand a Reply

PARIS, Nov. 6 6.—The Inter-Allied Council of Ambassadors has sent a note to the German Government requesting a reply before November 10 as to what measures it intends taking to insure the functioning of the Inter-Allied military control. The original request, made on October 3 through the German Charge D'Affaires in Paris, has remained unanswered.

Tombstones Damaged in Maxville Cemetery.

OTTAWA, Nov. 7—Joseph Belle feuille aged 21, who is alleged to be the instigator in the desecration of the cemetery at Maxville on Sunday when heavy damage was done to tomb stones was arrested yesterday morning at his home and is now lodged in Cornwall jail awaiting arraignment on Tuesday next before Magistrate Cline of Cornwall.

Albert Picard, who together with his sister and younger brother are being held in connection with the affair were to be arraigned again in Cornwall court but police court did not meet and the cases have been adjourned until Tuesday Nov. 13.

Talk of Controlling Wheat Price Nonsense.

REGINA, Sask., November 7 (Canadian Press). — "All this talk about controlling the world price of wheat is economic nonsense," Premier Charles Dunning declared before the Kiwanis Club yesterday.

"It will be said that I am knocking the pooling idea. But I believe that some advantage can be gained by the farmer if he believes in the system. One expert selling direct can average better results for a hundred thousand farmers can average selling for themselves."

BARBAROUS TO KEEP PRISONER CROWN PRINCE

Berlin Paper Says His Exile Recalls Dark Ages — Holland Anxious to Consult Allies.

STILL AT DOORN.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—"It is an act of barbarity which recalls the Dark Ages to keep the Crown Prince prisoner on the desolate island of Wieringen," says Der Reichsbote, the Monarchist organ, to-day. The news paper believes that humaneness demands that Frederick William be permitted to return to his native country and live as a private citizen.

LIKE WILKINS MICAWBER

DOORN, Holland, Nov 6.—Confirmation was obtained today of the report that former Crown Prince Frederick Williams had not yet left Wieringen where he has been residing since his interment in Holland.

Former Emperor William is maintaining close relations with the leaders of the Monarchist movement in Germany and is said to be hopeful that present events in the Fatherland will turn in his favor.

It is sad the Dutch Government is anxious to consult with the Allies before granting permissiin to either the former emperor or his son to quit Holland.

KEEP HIM THERE

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The British Government is still awaiting a reply from France with regard to its suggestion of the formulation of a common policy aimed at preventing the return of former Crown Prince Frederick William from Holland to Germany. It is assumed, however that France, even more than Great Britain, will desire to adopt every safe guard to prevent Frederick William from going to his Upper Silesian estate were he would be in a position to indulge in activities subversve of the peace and existenc of the present republican government.

If France agrees with the British viewpoint, it is probable that collective representations will be made to Frederick William's movements.

A Paris despatch last night said Premier Poincare had approved the British suggestion for joint representation to Holland with regard to Holland with a view to keeping the former Crown Prince within the Dutch borders.

DIFFICULTIES IN PROTECTION PATH.

British Agriculture Sees Unequal Treatment in Baldwin Policy.

LONDON, Nov, 7. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—An evidence of the difficulties likely to be experienced in carrying out a policy of protection without taxing food was furnished by a resolution adopted by a meeting of the central and associated chambers of agriculture in London yesterday protesting against the unequal treatment to agriculture foreshadowed by Premier Baldwin's Manchester statement.

The chairman, Lord Strachie, declared that agricultural interests must not be sacrificed to the interests of the manufacturers. Lord Bledisloe said he could not help thinking that the agricultural community was not going to be improved by any system of protection. Another speaker said that Premier Baldwin's proposals were the greatest betrayal agriculture ever had.

J. R. Clynes, M.P., deputy labor leader, speaking at Sunderland on the prime minister's contention that trades unionism was lop-sided protectionism, said that all protection was lop-sided but trades unionism protected the producer in his struggle for better conditions while the protection now proposed would further weaken the producer in relation to the purchasing power of wages and would strengthen those who already were strong. The margin of commodities which by any measure of protection could be kept out of this country was so small, he said, that no considerable number of unemployed could ever hope to get relief by it.

Ensures Sound Sleep

DO you enjoy a real night's sleep, waking rested and refreshed? Or do you lie awake for hour after hour, tossing restlessly, so that you rise in the morning feeling more tired than when you went to bed?

Sleeplessness is usually due to one of two causes.

The first cause is digestive. It is a mistake to eat a heavy supper late at night. It is equally a mistake to go to bed hungry. In both cases the result is disturbed, restless sleep.

The second cause is mental. Anxiety, worry, and over-work result in mental activity at a time when the brain should be soothed and quiet. To ensure sound sleep you need a light beverage which will satisfy the cravings of hunger without causing any digestive activity, and which will soothe and rebuild the worn nerves.

There is nothing to equal a cup of "Ovaltine" for this purpose. This delicious beverage is rich in the restorative food elements which soothe and rebuild the nerves. It is easily and completely assimilated. It ensures sound, natural sleep. "Ovaltine" contains the concentrated nourishment extracted from Nature's Tonic Foods—ripe barley malt, creamy milk and fresh eggs. It contains no drugs.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1923.

POPPY DAY.

The G.W.V.A. of Peterborough, assisted by the Ladies' Auxiliary, will make it possible on Saturday for every citizen to secure an artificial poppy, the flower of remembrance to be worn upon Armistice Day.

Thousands of these flowers have been secured and will be on Sale on the street Saturday, and the co-operation of the public is earnestly solicited in making Poppy Day a complete success.

The artificial poppies have been manufactured by disabled Canadian soldiers, so that a large sale of them will help to make these men self-sustaining, will assist the G.W.V.A. in its fine work on behalf of ex-service men and the dependents of the men who failed to come back, and at the same time will give citizens an opportunity to show that they have not forgotten the soldiers who made the supreme sacrifice.

"In Flanders' fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place, and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly,
Scarce heard 'amid the guns below.

"We are the dead; short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders' fields.

"Take up our quarrel with the foe!
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch, be yours to hold it high!
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders' fields."

MIGHT HAVE A TONIC EFFECT.

The members of the Great War Veterans' Association were urged by His Honour Judge Huycke in an address the other night to take more interest in politics in the civic field as well as in the Provincial and Federal arenas.

As veterans and citizens, the returned soldiers might reasonably be expected to concern themselves with such matters, and just at this season of the year a constructive interest in municipal affairs on the part of the G.W.V.A. might have a tonic effect in Peterborough.

Neither organizations nor individuals as a rule show a proper appreciation of the importance of endeavouring to secure for this city the best possible civic government.

The municipal campaign—if it can be called such—is allowed to drift along until nomination day.

Then a comparative handful of citizens place in nomination a field of candidates without, in some cases, making any effort to see that those nominated will remain in the race.

The result is, many of the nominees decline to allow their names to go on the ballot papers, and the election is staged among those who have qualified.

The usual plan of campaign is to issue a brief address full of generalities to the electors.

And then on New Year's Day the choice has to be made from a limited field of aspirants who have offered nothing concrete in the way of a policy upon which a selection may be based.

It is high time that the veterans as well as citizens generally took more interest in this matter of choosing the city's board of directors.

WHAT CAUSED THE CHANGE?

Prohibitionist leaders may well concern themselves with a study of the reasons for the remarkable change in public opinion as regards prohibition shown in British Columbia, Manitoba and Alberta.

Why has there been such a turnover in such a comparatively short time?

Does the fault lie in the principle of prohibition itself, must the reverses be explained by the failure of the law which was designed to put that principle into effect, or was the law sound but its enforcement poorly handled?

Is any one of these reasons or a combination of them all the cause for the "wet" victory?

All these questions are being asked in Ontario, and will continue to be asked by thousands of voters who are trying to decide upon the best policy for this Province to pursue in dealing with the liquor problem.

Perhaps the outstanding reason is the reaction caused by the excessive penalties provided for minor infractions of the temperance regulations, and by the failure to stop the illegal sale of liquor by bootleggers who have grown rich out of their operations.

The spectacle of men going to jail because they were unable to pay a heavy fine for taking a drink of liquor in an illegal place, while the real offenders against the prohibition regulations somehow managed to escape the clutches of the law, has grated upon the public.

The mistake has been made of being too drastic in punishing the minor offender, as the Examiner has urged for the last two years.

He has been pursued as a criminal and has been punished more severely for his infraction of the regulations than have other people charged with more serious offences.

Naturally there has been a reaction against such a policy, even among those who have no desire to see "the liquor come back," and when there is an opportunity given to vote the reaction indicates itself by a substantial "wet" majority.

THE ALBERTA REFERENDUM.

Following closely upon the heels of the turnover in Manitoba and in British Columbia, prohibitionists do not attempt to disguise the fact that the return of Alberta to the "wet" column as a result of Monday's voting is a heavy blow to their cause.

That prohibition should have been rejected by the cities of the Province was not surprising, but the "dry" forces confidently counted upon the rural districts to offset the effect of the "wet" landslide in the larger centres.

Instead the returns indicate that the Alberta farmers voted alongside their city brethren in killing prohibition after seven years trial.

The policy that will succeed it was set forth in Clause D of the referendum, which calls for the Government sale of all liquors and the sale of beer in licensed premises, the clause that was supported by the majority of the voters. The other two "wet" clauses providing for the sale of beer under varying conditions met with scant favour, and the real fight was between those supporting prohibition and the advocates of Government sale.

The result is not without its significance for Ontario.

As the Examiner pointed out a few days ago, the action of Alberta in rejecting prohibition is bound to increase the pressure upon the Ontario Government for a referendum on a similar policy in this Province.

There are among the members elected to the Legislature at the last election men who will lead the fight in the House for a chance to kill prohibition in Ontario, and "wet" and "dry" parties alike will be making a serious mistake if they do not soon come to the conclusion that the next session of the Legislature will see the authorization of a referendum.

The Alberta result practically makes a campaign in Ontario certain.

GOOD TRADE.

The annual report of the Dominion Department of Trade and Commerce for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1923, has recently been issued. The Deputy Minister reports that the trade of Canada for the last fiscal year shows a marked increase in value as also in volume compared with that for the previous fiscal year. The total value of the trade of Canada for 1923 was $1,733,916,486, which showed a gain over the previous fiscal year, 1922, of 16.5 per cent. A much larger increase is reported in exports than in imports, the increase in exports amounting to $191,210,763, or 25.8 per cent., and the increase in imports amounting to $54,660,711, or 7.3 per cent.

Although the trade of Canada for the fiscal year 1923 shows a substantial gain over that of the previous fiscal year, yet compared with the trade of the fiscal year 1921 it shows a decrease of $695,406,097. The Deputy Minister accounts for this by the fact that the conditions in 1921 were extremely abnormal especially regarding prices. He states that comparison should be made in the quantities of commodities imported and exported rather than in value, which would show a marked increase in trade. The Deputy Minister's statement in this connection is worthy of note, and in part is as follows:

"On the whole the trade expansion is very satisfactory and indicates a revival of commerce and industry. Though the trade during the fiscal year 1923 is much in excess of that for the year 1922, it is millions of dollars less than for the fiscal year 1921, when peak prices prevailed. Notwithstanding the fact that the trade figures for 1923 compared with those in 1921 show a tremendous decline in value, they are generally misinterpreted, due to failure to comprehend that the conditions existing in 1921 were abnormal in the extreme, especially as to prices upon which the valuation statistics are based.

"Last year I had occasion to point out that valuation statistics are apt to be misleading. Consequently in considering the foregoing trade figures, it must be remembered that for some years import and export statistics when expressed in values only have not conveyed an accurate indication of the fluctuations in a country's foreign trade. The decline of the trade in 1923 compared with 1921 was a price decline, as a study of the volume of Canadian trade indicates that there was no decline in the total quantity of merchandise imported and exported. Comparisons should be made, therefore, in the quantities of commodities imported and exported. Compare the trade of Canada for 1923 with a normal pre-war year—e.g., 1914—and it will be found that the interchange of merchandise has increased about 70 per cent., and if one refers to the fiscal year 1909, the increase is about 240 per cent. The increase in exports is considerably in excess of the increase in imports."

It is gratifying to note that Canada had a "favorable" trade balance—that is, a surplus of exports over imports—for the fiscal year under review of $142,830,790, a marked increase over the favorable balance of 1922 of $6,122,677. It is also interesting to note that although the trade for 1921 was millions of dollars in excess of that for 1923, yet there was an "unfavorable" trade balance for 1921 of $29,730,763.

Canada has attained a reputable position in respect to her trade, and it is confidently expected that this position will be increased in immediately ensuing years.

The favorable trade balance for 1923 is very creditable, but this trade balance could be greatly augmented if we could develop our natural resources to a greater extent, and encourage more manufacturing concerns to open operations. Our imports of iron and its products, non-ferrous metals and non-metallic minerals now run into millions of dollars annually. This should not be the case whe we have such abundant natural resources. In some cases the raw products are taken out of our country to be manufactured, and the manufactured product is then imported with a duty attached. In the case of asbestos, large quantities of the raw product are taken to the United States, duty free, and the manufactured product is imported here with a 25 per cent. duty attached.

Can not some means be taken to encourage the establishment of more manufacturing concerns in these industries in Canada?—Ottawa Journal.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, November 7. — Yesterday's sales of cattle at the Union Stock Yards totalled 4,395 head, and left 2,225 on hand. Early receipts yesterday morning were light, being 204 cattle, 75 calves, 1,753 hogs, and 506 sheep and lambs.

Both the railways were making fair deliveries during the morning, and the supply will be added to materially. Several cars of rough Westerns also came in yesterday morning. For export on Monday 550 steers were bought from $6.25 to $7.00 a cwt. There was also 86 short keeps and 10 bulls taken for overseas. The short keeps cost 5 1-2 to 6c a pound, and the bulls $3.75 to $4.00 a cwt.

Commission men and butchers differ on Monday's prices. The former claim heavy steers were down 25 cents a cwt., but those who bought the choice kind say there was no drop, and if anything prices were a little firmer. Business yesterday morning was about the usual Tuesday's doings. All the good stuff had been picked over, and with few exceptions sales included the tail ends of loads and bunches of inferior butchers. There was a plentiful supply of stockers, and these were going from $3.00 to $4.50 a cwt., about the prices of the last three weeks.

Calves were not too plentiful, and prices were quite steady. Good calves, but not choice, sold at 11c a pound, and some mediums at 8c. Heavies were again draggy, and buyers had this market pretty much in their own hands.

Monday's offering of lambs was well cleaned up, and several bunches sold yesterday morning at 11 1-4c. This would indicate a drop of 25c a cwt., but the market was not weak.

Sheep remain about unchanged.

With 3,000 hogs in yesterday morning, packers' buyers talked of a cut of 50 cents a cwt. for to-day's loadings. Against this, one outside packer said as high as $8.50 a cwt. f.o.b. was being paid in the country. Most of Monday's hogs sold here at $8.50 a cwt. f.o.b.

There will be no market next Monday (Thanksgiving and Armistice Day), and any shipments arriving will have to be held until Tuesday.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, November 7 (Canadian Press). — Further selling on the part of owners who had ceased to count on Government action to help them out led to fresh declines yesterday in the price of wheat, but strength in the corn market had a counterbalancing effect later.

Wheat closed unsettled at 1-8c to 1-4c to 3-8c net decline, December $1.05 7-8 to $1.06, and May $1.10 7-8 to $1.11.

Corn finished 1-4c to 3-8c to 1 1-8c up; oats unchanged to a shade higher; and provisions varying from 5c to 7c off to a like advance.

The majority of wheat traders at the outset yesterday apparently were acting on the assumption that the only hope of higher prices through Government aid of an immediate character was the chance that the wheat tariff would be raised on a possible recommendation of the Tariff Board at Washington. It was contended that wheat is one of the few articles selling materially below the cost of production, but this circumstance brought it little if any fresh buying, and the market in some cases fell more than a cent a bushel—showing power to rally.

Meanwhile a bearish factor was gossip that in the last few days five Italian drafts for grain had been reported unpaid.

After mid-day, however, selling in the wheat pit appeared to dwindle, and with the corn market showing a decided upward trend, the prevailing sentiment as to wheat underwent considerable change. On the ensuing upturn, nevertheless, there was selling enough to prevent a complete recovery. Denial by a noted speculator that he had predicted wheat would drop to 90 cents was circulated just before the market closed.

Scantiness of receipts had a good deal to do with strengthening the corn market, as did reports of disappointing husking returns.

Oats were steadied by the action of corn.

For the most part provisions tended downward in line with the hog market.

WED TWENTY YEARS THEY CELEBRATED.

Happy Function at Home of Mr. and Mrs. F. McBain, Omemee.

OMEMEE, Nov. 7.—On Friday last at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McBain, of Omemee, about forty friends gathered to celebrate their 20th anniversary. Their only daughter Violet, received the guests at the door.

Since 1903, throughs clouds and sunshine, through sickness and health, this happy couple have shared each others joys and sorrows. When first married they made their home in Cavan for three years, after which they moved to Emily and resided there until, through the ill health of Mrs. McBain, they left the farm and retired to Omemee.

At 7.30 o'clock the guests entered the drawing room, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion, the table being adorned by a four-storey cake which looked beautiful indeed surmounted with 20 lighted candles.

After supper appropriate addresses were made by the Rev. Rowland of Omemee and Mr. Geo. McBain of Cavan, brother of the host to which the latter responded in a few well chosen words.

Then a toast was proposed to the host and hostess, after which they sang "For They are Jolly Good Fellows". Then all retired to the sitting room where the rest of the evening was spent in music and games.

Many valuable and appropriate gifts were received by the host and hostess from friends, who expressed hearty good wishes and many more years of happy wedded life.

Entertained Friends.

Miss Iona Sanderson entertained a number of girl friends at her home on Strickland street on Wednesday evening (Hallowe'en). The house was decorated with Hallowe'en favors, with pumpkins, witches and cats in evidence. The pretty little hostess received her guests attired as the Queen of Hallowe'en. The evening was spent in games suitably to the festive season after which dainty refreshments were served. The fact that the guests were all in fancy costume added to the enjoyment of the evening and all voted it the best yet. A jolly "Irishman" lived up to the reputation of the race that is famous for its fun and laughter, and kept the fun running high all evening. The guess were:

Miss Mary Dever, a witch; Miss Eva Hendren, a bat; Miss Winifred Payne, oddity; Miss Hazel Crawford, gypsy; Miss Beatrice Junkin, Old Dutch Cleanser; Miss Madeline Junkin, Mr. Rooster; Mae Mahood, ghost; Miss Vera McIlmoyl, ghost; Miss Phyliss Morrison, Irishman.

Hallowe'en Passed Quietly

Hallowe'en passed quietly and the spirit of impish destruction - which marked the occasion last year was not in evidence to any appreciable extent this year. Small folks "dressed up" were in evidence early in the evening and a chance visitor might remark on the size of Lakefield's colored population. The evening was very jolly and was especially a childrens' night.

Laid to Rest.

The funeral of the late Gerald Fitzgerald took place on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence on Charlotte street and was attended by a large number of relatives and friends. Mr. Fitzgerald was one of the oldest residents of the village and his interests in its municipal welfare never relaxed. Mr. Fitzgerald has served as Reeve and on the council and was a conscientious booster for the village. He was a central figure in a little group of old residents wht gathered together almost daily to discuss the past and to discuss current events.

Athletic Tournament.

The athletic tournament, held in the rink on Thursday night of last week terminates the soft ball for the season, unless special exhibition games can be arranged. The month of October was given over to the soft ball league and provided evening of entertainment and getting together that cannot fail to be of value in the community life. Almost without exception the sporting spirit was of the British variety that means fair play. The closing game had aroused a great deal of interest and the races which followed had plenty of entries to keep the interest up. Both the Grove school and the Public and High schools have regular field days during the autumn when races are run and athletic contests held. The idea is of course to strengthen and develop the youth of the community by physical exercise. It has always seemed as though a community sports day would be a good thing and if a day could be set aside for village sports to which the immediate rural district would be entitled to enter, there would be a great deal of interest felt and the entries would be surprising. As to a managing committee, there is sufficient talent as can be seen by the efficient management of the tournament in the rink and as to the financial side, it is more than likely that it would pay for itself and in future years yield a profit to the community.

Picture Entertainment.

The Picture Entertainment held in St. John's Sunday School on Friday evening was attended by a large number of youngsters and a smaller number of adults who enjoyed the picture story of "Alice in Wonderland" very much. Rev. C. G. King told the story in a most interesting manner and held the attention of the audience to he very end. Chas. James very kindly operated the lantern.

Baptist Congregation Held Anniversary Events — Letters of Condolence in Death of Charles I. Puffer

PERSONAL MENTION.

NORWOOD, Nov. 7.—The Baptist congregation their anniversary services on Sunday, November 4. On Monday evening, November 5, their annual fowl supper was held.

The Methodist congregation purpose holding their anniversary services and fowl supper on Sunday.

Thanksgiving service will be held in the Presbyterian church on Sunday next when the annual thankoffering will be given.

Letters of Condolence.

The following are copies of letters received by Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Puffer following the auto accident in which their son, Chas. I., was killed. They show the esteem in which the deceased was held by his Los Angeles friends.

Los Angeles, Calif.
October 27.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Puffer:

I am writing for my friends, Miss Jane Sheehan, who was with Charlie at the time of the accident which caused his untimely death. No doubt you understand that Miss Sheehan was injured, receiving a severe scalp wound, gashes on her arms, hands and back, and otherwise badly shaken and bruised. It is God's miracle that she was not killed, but no doubt it was not to be.

Words fail to express her sorrow at this trying time, and had she been able to travel she would have accompanied the remains of your son home.

May I take the liberty of telling you of the accident?

I happened to be with Jane and Charlie throughout the evening, as a few friends spent the evening together. They had just taken me home, not "shortly before dawn," as the papers stated, but at 12.35 They left me after a few minutes of laughing and talking, and continued on their way home.

In this city people buy old houses and have them conveyed to other lots, and in this instance a house was being moved at night. It was a large structure and completely covered the street making it impossible for a machine to pass around it (machines having to detour to the next street). There was a red light at each corner of the house, as I understand, and being dark it appeared as though the red lights were for danger at each side of the road, and the centre for clear passage, and Charlie unfamiliar with the fact that they were moving the house, crashed into it This happened at 12 minutes to one.

It is with heartfelt sorrow that I am compelled to write of his sad accident and my heart goes out to you and your family in your hour of bereavement. Charlie was well-liked by all who knew him and his loss is sorrowfully felt by his fellow workers and friends generally.

Kindly accept Miss Sheehan's words of sympathy through me and when able she will write to you herself.

God stand by you and help you to bear this sorrow.

Sincerely,
ARLINE ABRAMS.

October 26.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Puffer:

With sincere sorrow from the innermost depths of our hearts for the untimely demise of our beloved friend, Chas. I. Puffer, who had endeared himself to all who knew him, for the beauty of the reflective personality, which he possessed. We desire to express our deepest sympahty in this your hour of bereavement, and our prayer is that God in his infinite mercy to His children will give you spiritual fortitude to bear up under the grief, which has come to you and us so unexpectedly.

While it has been by Divine will that you son and our friend has passed to the Great Unknown, his memory will live on while our lives last.

MONEY SMUGGLING IS BOOTLEGGING GAME IN BERLIN.

Foreign Money Brings Several Times the Official Rate in Marks — Deals Are Secret.

BERLIN, Nov. 7. —"How much did your bootlegger give you today?" is the first question friends ask each other when they meet in Berlin these days. The bootleggers, however, do not deal in prohibited drinks, but in money, and the competition to obtain the best rates has displaced betting on the ponies as the autumn sport.

The official rate fixed on the paper mark is 420,000,000,000 to the dollar, and theoretically that is all that can be paid, but those who can obtain foreign money get twice or three times that much for their dollars. Pounds, or other stable money in the "bling pig" exchanges which exist in many sections of the city.

The banks have lost their exchange business, and the regular exchange shops are not conducting their business over the counter, but are clearing houses for persons needing paper marks, as here unofficial agents, both men and women, flock about them and negotiate secret deals. The arcades of the city are also great centres for the money dealers.

Many gentlemanly bootleggers have their clientele so well organized that they are able to call them up each morning and ask if there are any orders. Strangers coming to Germany are surprised at first by the large number of persons endeavoring to attract their attention on the streets; that is the way the amateur bootleggers pick up their first customers and lay the foundations for a regular business. They cannot make an open proposal to exchange money until they are sure their prospective customer is not a plainsclothes man in the employ of the Finance Bureau.

The newspapers allege that the banks are really financing the bootleggers and gathering in foreign money by that means, but the business is so scattered that it cannot be checked, despite the raids made on cafes and cabarets where the traders loiter.

BOOKS GOING TO GUAM

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—(Associated Press)—The Island of Guam is to have a public library established by the Junior Red Cross, co-operating with the American Library Association here. An initial contribution of 400 books for children has been collected and shipped to the governor of Guam.

Since few of the natives of Guam except the school children can read English, children's books and a few elemenetary books are the chief need at present.

BELGIAN DENIAL OF FRENCH SPLIT.

No Separate Agreement With Britain and Italy.

BRUSSELS, November 7. — A semi-official denial was issued last evening of a rupture between the French and Belgian governments over the appointment of the proposed experts commission on German reparations and the Rhineland Republic. It was further declared that there was no question of agreement between Great Britain, Italy and Belgium, but it was added, "there exists upon the question of the meeting of an experts' commission a similarity of opinion between the three governments that it is of vital importance for Europe to have the United States participate in the solution of the reparations problems."

The Belgian government has not lost hope that the negotiations will be proceeded with, but it admitted in Brussels that the question now lies between Washington and Paris.

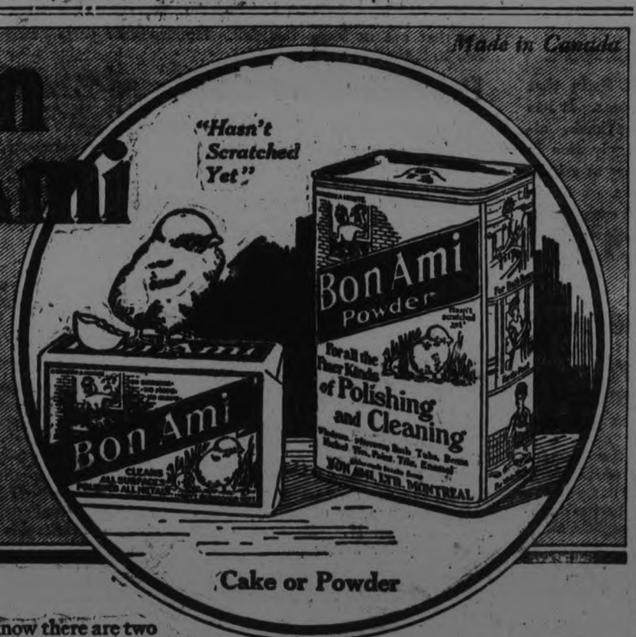
Bon Ami

"Hasn't Scratched Yet"



Cake or Powder

Do you know there are two kinds of Bon Ami—cake and powder? Both are made from the same ingredients—both are equally good.

It's a matter of taste which you use. Many women prefer the powder in its handy sprinkler-top tin—it's so easy to shake the powder on a damp cloth.

Others prefer the solid cake—that's rubbed on the cloth like ordinary soap.

Many women keep both kinds on hand—they prefer the cake for some uses, the powder for others. It's a splendid idea to keep both—why not try it?

Are you familiar with the principal uses of Bon Ami—they're listed at the right?

CHANGING SEASON IN LOCAL STORES

Only The Rear Guard of the Fruit Supply Remains

The changing seasons of the year are marked in the stores of any city by the ebb and flow of the different foodstuffs that come and go with the change from winter to summer and back to winter again. Just a few short weeks ago, the fruit stores were piled high with brimming baskets, their contents waiting for the busy hands that would turn them into preserves and pickles for the cold days to come. Now, only the rear guard remains, the last belated peaches, small specimens pears, little too, yellow and green, and the remnants of the season's vegetable offerings, red tomatoes in scarce baskets, pallid in color from the early frosts, green tomatoes standing up well against the cold, and little, somewhat shrivelled peppers in the bright red and green these glazed, curlycue relishes affect.

The honeydew melons are in, Casaba fruit, or Persians, as they are termed, the aristocrats of the canteloupe family, selling for a good deal less than when they made their premier bow to the public last autumn. And there are Chirstmas nuts in the stores the big 'nigger toes' from Brazil, the product of a century-old trunk, and chestnuts from Canada, smaller than the imported variety, but selling for 60 cents a pound, while the big, meaty Italian nuts from across the water sell for 40 cents a pound. From California come walnuts, in Grades Number One and Two, at 50 and 40 cents a pound.

Pomegranates are another innovation, "liked by the English", as one fruit dealer expressed it. There is something romantic about these red, round things that come of a twisty point in their topknots. They remind one of the old school-book story about the reckless Prosperpine, condemned to live part of the year with old King Pluto, because she had a liking for the many-seeded fruit.

Apples are fairly plentiful this year, considering the bad weather that attended their ripening, but even their best friends couldn't call them exceptionally good examples of what Canada can do. St. Lawrence apples are practically off the market, Snows are very scarce, and the main variety seems to be the nondescript cooking apples of varied genus, the somewhat despised Tolman Sweet, and the big Greening.

Another reminder of fruit-cakes and Christmas pudding in the shops is the presence of raisins, seedless and seeded, and big, flat Smyrna figs in boxes, dates from across the brine, and cranberries to accompany the turkey for Thanksgiving or Christmas Day. Cocoanuts look out from store windows, with their little monkey faces. California grapes in dulle reds hang in large clusters against the pane.

There is head lettuce, crisper and more appealing-looking than the leaf variety, with its white heart, winter radishes and bunches of dried herbs, and Brussels sprouts vie with cauliflower as an adjunct to a real meal. Sweet potatoes hold their own against the popularity of the "solanum tuberosum" as the botanica term which is supposed to mean "potatoes" puts it.

Eggs and butter are scare and expensive. Some efforts are being made to grade eggs, to a certain extent, several of the dealers classing them now as storage and fresh, a classification that is somewhat less complicated than the various ramifications proposed by the framers of recent regulations along this line.

Fish are coming into their own this month. "Fish for Friday" is the slogan of many of the stores that deal in the succulent and high-priced oyster and the more or less plebian haddies and herring. There is more or less of uncertainty about the price of the aristocratic bivalve that inclines toward the "R" months. It is rumored that a price of less than $1.60 a quart cannot be charged for the expensive thing, unless the dealer resorts to the watering-can to supplement his supply. White fish sells for 25 cents a pound, halibut is 35 cents, fresh herring 20 cents, and finnan haddie 20 and 25 cents a pound.

HIS SLUGGISH LIVER MADE HIM FEEL DROWSY AND TIRED ALL THE TIME

Mr. E. Hazel East Florenceville N.B., writes: —"I had been troubled with my liver and felt drowsy and tired all the time, and was unable to do my work with any comfort. I took your Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and to-day I am a different man, and would not be without them in the house."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE LIFE OF A HOME

A healthy, happy, contented wife is the life and joy of the home and the greatest inspiration a man can have, yet how many homes in America are blighted by the ill-health and sufferings of the wife and mother. It may be backache, headaches, the tortures of a displacement or some other ailment peculiar to her sex, which makes her irritable, despondent, and her whole life a burden. Every woman in this condition should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from roots and herbs to restore her to health and happiness, for statistics prove that it benefits 98 out of every 100 women who try it.

PETERBORO JUST AS BAD AS REST

Vice Here Compares With Paris, London and Montreal.

That Peterboro, comparing its size and the prevalence of social disease within its limits, to the size and comparative disease of the cities of Paris, France; London, England; Montreal or Toronto, is as badly off where the plagues of syphilis and gonorrhea are concerned as any of these great metropolitan centres, was the statement made last evening to the parents who attended a meeting of the King George Home & School Association, held in the school, by Dr. A. Y. McNair, who, with Dr. N. H. Sutton, addressed the representative audience gathered to hear them.

"Social Hygiene" was the title of Dr. McNair's address, which described the effects of venereal disease, with particular reference to women and the birthrate of the nation.

Dr. N. H. Sutton's talk dealt particularly with the present-day system of training children, and with the laxity of parents in regard to unchaperoned petting parties and evening automobile rides. The duty of parents in explaining the facts of life to their children and thus obviating possible disaster, was stressed by the speaker.

The evening concluded with the service of light refreshments. An instrumental selection was given by Miss Alethea Scott, and Miss Zoe Doyle sang the dainty little "Lilac Time" (Perspicacity), accompanied by Miss Scott.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

Miles Sheridan has just learned that the girl with whom he has been taking a yacht trip, under the impression that she was

Juliet Divine, the Million Dollar Doll, a beautiful show-girl, is, in reality

Teresa Desmond (Terry), Juliet's innocent half-sister, whom the Doll sent to masquerade as herself. Miles is madly in love with Terry and is eager to divorce his wife.

Betty Sheridan, who is infatuated with

Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian. Salvano has now deserted Betty for

Rose Callahan, a somewhat ordinary young heiress, travelling in Europe with her father. Betty, learning of Paul's desertion is not anxious to lose her husband also, and goes to Algiers where Miles yacht is lying.

Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek, long in love with Terry, has almost succeeded in persuading the girl that her only course is to marry him.

Miles and Terry are enjoying a brief sojourn at Bousaada with Miles servant Mrs. Harkness as chaperone. Miles is preparing to rejoin his wife at Algiers.

Terry prepares to give up Miles for his own sake.

Mrs. Harkness, now aware of Terry's real identity is amazed to learn that Juliet Divine is her half-sister.

Terry, persuaded by Harky's eloquence, decides to wait for her Prince who is on his way to Algiers.

Betty, on board the yacht, heatedly insists on her maid's occupying Terry's room.

Two Conspirators

For an instant there was silence after that fierce though whispered outburst. Then Salvano said—always in the same gentle tone—'Of course I love you, Betty. I've always wanted you. Someone must have lied, to part us. I see that now. I swear to you I thought everything was changed. And you know as well as I do, I was what they call 'on my beam ends. Your letter says, you're staying on your husband's yacht. Where is he?'

'Away—motoring—with that girl. He won't be back till tomorrow at earliest, probably not then.

'If he comes, and you stay on the yacht, that will be condoning— —'

'I'll condone nothing, unless I have to send these letters of yours to Callahan.

'I'd like to call on you tonight, and explain several things if you'll let me—'

'Of course I'll let you. I expect you.

'And if you're sure Sheridan won't come. I don't want—for your sake—to go through a second scene like that in New York.

'I'm sure he won't come. What time will you call?'

'I've got to go to the Opera with some people—oh, there are others besides the Callahans It's my party. I invited them, so I can't get out of it. But isn't it better for me to be late, coming to you? Everyone on board the yacht is sure to be a sort of spy for your husband. You know what the law is. If he heard I'd been with you, he might bring in a counter petition. I'm not sure what they call it, but you see what I mean. At twelve o'clock, if you're sitting on deck in the moonlight, can't I get to you without being spied on? Can's you receive me—and send me away—without anyone being the wiser? If you'll do that, I'll make everything right between us again—as if this mistake had never been.'

'Perhaps I can manage it," Betty said, slowly. 'Let me think what to do.....Oh, I might buy a ticket and send Estelle on shore to that masked ball for the benefit of the war orphans of Algiers, that they're advertising all over the place. I noticed the posters as I taxied to this hotel. She'd adore to go I could tell her she needn't be back till two o'clock—that I'd do without her help. And I'd give it out on the yacht that she was to return at twelve. Then, if you wore a black domino, and the Captain or anyone saw you from a distance as you came on board——"

'That would be easy," Salvano agreed. 'But going off—"

'You just mustn't be seen, that's all And going off won't be difficult. We're in harbour. The Captain doesn't have to be on the bridge. By that time of night he'll be in his bunk asleep. I'll go with you to the gangway. I'll wear white. Beside me you'll be only a black shadow."

"You were always ingenious," Salvano praised her. 'My beautiful one, I am a new man. You take a load from my heart."

He rose, very tall and handsome, handsomer than he had ever been, Betty thought. 'I must go back to the Callahans at once, I'm afraid," he said. 'It's best to keep the peace for today, or something may go wrong again. Besides, here comes Eustace Nazlo—making straight for your table."

Betty let Paolo go without a word of objection, giving him her hand again, and a conventional smile for the benefit of the Callahans. He had been with her no more than five minutes, but they had contrived to say a good deal, perhaps all that needed to be said before the full explanation. She did not trust him, but he was in her power, and she meant to use it.

Nazlo came up.

'Am I too early?" he asked, as he accepted Mrs. Sheridan's invitation to sit down.

'No," she assured him pleasantly, though with a wandering mind. 'I ordered tea—but you shall have some fresh. What have you found out about my husband—and the girl?"

'They've gone to Bousaada," the Shoe King answered. 'It's a motor trip of seven hours at least. They won't have arrived there yet. The chauffeur and car were engaged to be absent from three to four days. I found out at the garage where the auto was hired."

'Good " said Betty. 'I'm much obliged to you for taking all this trouble.'

'It was not trouble," the Greek protested. 'But—you seem to have changed, Mrs. Sheridan. You're not interested '

'Oh, yes, I am awfully interested," he insisted.

'Surely you've not altered your mind—in regard to your husband?' There was anxiety in Nazlo's tone, and Betty faintly smiled. She knew that what he had done wasn't for love of her blue eyes. He had some design which concerned the girl. Either he wanted revenge, or wanted the girl herself. That was the reason why he wished to prevent Miles from being divorced, and free.

'I haven't changed in any way, she said. 'Isn't this quite a little drama we're playing in, Mr. Nazlo? There seem to be so many funny complications I suppose the next one will be Miles turning up on the yacht—with his pretty lady—and finding me in possession.

'That may happen tomorrow, Nazlo agreed. And as Betty kept her opinion of his motives to herself, so he kept to himself his next intentions. He had thought of telling her that he meant to start early in the morning by motor for Bousaada; yet something in her manner caused him to decide otherwise.

He could not define that 'something but he connected it with Prince Paul di Salvano. The young woman had the air of being up to some impish trick. She might even hope to persuade Salvano to throw over the Callahan girl, and run away with her instead. It would be just as well to let her believe that she had plenty of rope, and then to draw it in, by hurrying Sheridan back from Bousaada to Algiers.

Nazlo was still sitting with Betty on the terrace of the St. George, when far away at the desert town Miles Sheridan's car drew up before the little hotel whose white facade was painted rose red by the sunset.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

MERRY-BILL MOCKING BIRD.

"My, but you have a nice voice!" said Nancy.

"Too wit, too wit, too weet, weet, Sugar cane is good and sweet," sang a little bird blithely.

Nancy and Nick peeped through the cane-stalks to see who was singing and saw a little gray and white bird sitting on top of one of them, singing as though his throat would burst.

"My, but you have a nice voice!" said Nancy. "What's your name, little bird?"

"My name is Merry-Bill Mocking Bird," answered the little bird, not a bit frightened at seeing a little boy and girl so close to him.

"And where do you live?" asked Nick.

"Oh, most anywhere at all," answered Merry-Bill carelessly. "I was born in my mother's nest, snugly hidden in some Spanish moss in an old oak-tree near a house in Dixie Land. I stayed at home until I was educated and since then I've lived 'most any place at all!"

"Were you educated?" asked Nancy. 'What did you learn?"

"Flying and singing and a few manners," said the little bird. "Although I am afraid I didn't learn any too many manners because I love to teass people so. Besides I can imitate any sound I have ever heard. That's where I get my name. I can mock anything from a cat to a sawmill."

"I know a bird that can do that!" said Nick. "He's called Casper Cat-Bird."

"Well I declare!" said Merry-Bill. "Isn't that interesting, though! Casper Cat-Bird is my cousin and he learned a lot from me. He can do almost anything that I can do."

"Say, Mr. Mocking Bird," said Nancy, "can you go like a robin?"

"Can't I, though! Just listen!"

"Cherree, cherree, red and sweet, red and sweet,
Good to eat, eat, eat, eat!"

"That's fine!" cried the Twins, clapping their hands with delight.

"Can you go like a crow?" asked Nick eager for more.

"Can't I just! Listen!" said Mister Mocking Bird, and he went, "Caw, caw, caw!" exactly like Chris Crow out in the corn-field.

After that he gave a regular concert, imitating every bird he knew from a wren to a poll-parrot.

"That's grand!" said Nancy. T"I think mocking birds must be the smartest birds there are in the world. Is there anything we can do for you?"

"I think not, thank you," answered Merry-Bill happily. "Except to come and see me again sometime, Goodby!"

"Goodby!" said the Twins, as he flew away.

CANADA ARTS ARE BEING SELECTED

OTTAWA, Nov. 7. —Jurors of the Board of Trustees of the National Gallery of Canada began yesterday the task of selecting from some 500 works of art what should be sent to England for the Canadian section of the Fine Arts Building at the British Empire Exhibition.

Eric Brown, director of the National Gallery has just returned from England where he was making arrangements for the Canadian Art contribution. Mr. Brown says that Canadian preparations for the exhibition are much farther advanced than those of Australia, South Africa or New Zealand.

He was also of the opinion that the Canadian contribution would be distinctly national. Australia was exibitin gpart of an exhibition shown at the Royal Academy, which lacked national flavor and distinction.

BAVARIAN FASCISTI STRAINING AT LEASH

Armistice Day Viewed With Apprehension By Moderate Faction—The Dictator's Position Becoming Shaky.

MUNICH, Bavaria Nov. 7—As Armistice Day approaches, the Bavarian military dictator, Dr. Von Kahr, is experiencing increasing difficulty in his efforts to hold the Bavarian Fascisti in leash, and the leaders of the moderate political factions here are inclined to view the approaching days with apprehension

The so-called patriotic leagues which are nominally behind Von Kahr, but are really dominated by Adolph Hitler the Fascist leader, are becoming more insistent in their clamors for "a strong nationalistic government in Berlin." They also view the Reichstag as wholly discredited and declare it can only rehabilitate itself if the Government exhibits a show of authority.

Von Kahr's position as dictator also is cracking because of the steadily worsening social and economic conditions in Munich and elsewhere in Bavaria, as none of his food regulating ordinances or financial measures has thus far afforded the impatient populace relief. The soaring food prices disintegrating business and depreciated currency are gradually impressing the natives as forming a poor offset to the flouting ultimatums which the Dictator has been dispatching to Berlin.

The Bavarian insurgents along the Thuringian frontier are not taken seriously in competent quarters here, which believe Von Kahr will be able to suppress them if the situation demands his intervention.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the bottle. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you 16 ounces of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for $2.50.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

THE ELECTIONS UNITED STATES

Present Party Alignments Maintained Throughout States.

New York, November 7. — Yesterday's elections throughout the United States gave little indication of any departure from present party alignments. There weer few developments bearing on the next presidential election, and in few instances was the election followed by more than state wide interest.

One election to fill a vacancy in the senate occurred in Vermont, where Porter Dale gained the seat by an overwhelming majority.

In the congression. election in this state, Republican Col. W. Gibson was returned. Vermont traditionally represented.

It was conceded last night that the 1924 assembly of New York would retain its representation complexion, and that this party might gain a few seats.

The Democrats claimed the victory in their fight to elect State Judiciary.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7. — The Republicans elected W. Freeland Kendrick Mayor of Philadelphia by one of the largest majorities cast in a mayoralty election in this city in recent years. The fact that Kendrick had no independent opposition, made the Republican victory an easy one. Party leaders claimed that the final count of ballots would show a majority of more than 200,000 over A. Raymond Raff, the Democratic candidate.

The entire Republican county ticket was also swept into office and two municipal loans, totalling $71,000,000 for various public improvements, were approvad by the voters.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Nov. 7. —William Laughlin, Democrat, defeated George W. Whitehead, Republican, for the mayoralty here by a majority of more than two thousand. For Councilmen, Frank Jenes and Clark Shipston, Republican and Democrat respectively, won by a wide margin over George Diemar and Joseph Riley. This practically gives the Council a Democrat majority.

TROTSKY REVIEWS RED ARMY ON ANNIVERSARY

Bolsheviki Have Had Six Years' Rule in Russia—Want Chance to Build Up Economic System They Shattered.

SAILORS CELEBRATE.

MOSCOW, November 7. Canadian Press. — The Parliament of the Soviet Federation convened yesterday on the eve of the sixth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution.

Sailors from the cruiser Aurora, which on November 7, 1917, bombarded the winter palace, signalling Kerensky's downfall, appeared, spoke and were cheered, but this was the only hint of revolutionary fire, the parliament discussing cold economic facts, money saving and government management. There was no mention of Germany at the opening session, but the Communists with whom the correspondent talked said they were entering the seventh year of the Soviet regime with the hope that there would be no revolution in Germany now, as Russia wants tranquility and the chance to build up her shattered economic system.

To-day there will be a big parade of the Red Army, reviewed by War Minister Trotzky, but the latter's proclamation of the event emphasizes that it is not in the nature of a warlike demonstration. To save money the government has decreed a holiday of only one day.

M. Rykov, first vice-president of the Council of Commissars, declared to-day, there would be no amnesty for counter-revolutionists on this anniversary, as there was "hardly anyone left to amnesty."

A note has been sent to Poland protesting the killing of a Russian officer at the frontier and declaring that unless a satisfactory answer is soon forthcoming the Soviet must take repressive measures against certain Poles in Russia.

BURNS DEATH OF MO 27 IN EXPLOSION

GLEN ROGERS, W. Va., Nov. 7 —(Canadian Press).—The little mining camp of Glen Rogers, sorrowed last night over death of twenty-seven of its citizens, victims of a gas explosion in one entry of the Raleigh-Wyoming Coal Company mine just as the men were going to work yesterday morning.

Sixty-three men 'checked in' at the mine mouth and only the fact that mine was equipped with the most modern of ventilating systems saved the 36 survivors from sharing the fate of the twenty seven in the doomed entry.

No cause for explosion could be assigned by officials of the company. In some manner, unexplained gas had accumulated in the entry where the explosion occurred but how it came to be ignited probably will never be known.

PRES. COOLIDGE CALLS TO MIND TRAGEDIES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(Canadian Press).—President Coolidge's Thanksgiving Day proclamation, issued yesterday from the White House, calls to mind that the year brought the people of the United States two tragic experiences, the death of President Harding and the Japanese earthquake.

The President asked the people to gather in their homes and places of worship on Thursday, November 29, to give expression to their gratitude and "seek the guidance of the Almighty God that they may deserve the continuance of His favor."

COMMUNITY OF FREE NATIONS

Such Is Conception of Empire Held By Prince of Wales and Premiers King and Bruce.

LONDON, Nov. 7. — (Canadian Press)—A community of Free Nations. This was the conception of Empire presented by the Prince of Wales emphasized by Premier Mackenzie King and echoed by Premier Bruce of Australia at a dinner given by the Overseas League to the Dominion Premiers here, last night.

The Prince of Wales spoke of the Empire as "a group of virtually independent sister states, all co-operating for the common good." Somehow, by process of time he added, by constructive genius of many statesmen and by instincts of peoples those two opposites, co-operation and independence, had been dovetailed together.

Various Conceptions

Premier King described various conceptions of imperial relations. There was imperial federation. In process of time, with elimination of distances, elected representatives of all peoples of the Empire might be seen in the empire's capital; but imperial federation was not now within the scope of practical politics. There was creation of an imperial council if by Imperial cabinet or council continued Mr. King "You mean the gathering of representatives who speak not as individuals but for the peoples they represent and are responsible to them for advice they give to the sovereign; then it is welcomed with all heart."

"But if by Imperial Council you mean gathering of gentlemen without authority to speak on behalf of parliaments or peoples they represent, I care not now or by whom they are nominated it is a reversion to the old order which has long since passed away, when men were nominated from top down while the whole spirit of or constitution is from, a broad base up."

In Mr. King's view the most enduring conception of Imperial relations was that of a community of Free Nations.

TO INTERPRET PEOPLES' WISH IS A PROBLEM

Ideas of Moderationists and Hotel Keepers as Expressed at Alberta Polls Conflict.

LIQUOR QUESTION

CALGARY, Novemb 7. Canadian Press. — Interest in the liquor referendum has turned now from figures to the Alberta government, and Legislature, which will have the task of interpreting the wishes of the people as expressed by the vote on Monday. This task will not be a light one and difficulties are beginning to appear.

Hotel keepers and moderationists united on carrying Clause D of the preferential ballot, which, in addition to providing for government control and sale of liquor, included "sale of beer to be consumed in licensed places."

Unlike Clause A for continuance of prohibition, and Clause B, the regular bill prepared by the hotelkeepers, the clause carried yesterday contained only the principle and nothing else.

The hotel keepers interpret "licensed places" to mean hotels, licensed as in old days, but many moderationists are inclined to limit very greatly the licensed places, and some interpret the clause as meaning that whereas there may be consumption of beer in licensed places, according to the clause, there can be no sale except by government vendors. That of course would not satisfy the hotel keepers.

Wires Cluttered By Reports of Accidents.

OTTAWA, November 7 (Canadian Press). — The Board of Railway Commissioners sat here yesterday for consideration of amendments to the general order respecting the reporting by telegram of railway accidents known as minor accidents. The full Board, with the exception of the Hon. Frank Oliver, were present.

The present law is that every accident upon a railway has to be reported by the conductor or engineer to the Board of Railway Commissioners by telegram.

At the present time, it is said, a great many trivial accidents are being reported, and clutter up the records without meaning anything.

One suggestion was that all accidents which caused employees to lose time would be reported.

Judgment was finally reserved.

Method For Sampling Liquor That's Suspect.

REGINA, Nov. 7. — Following suggestions in city police court, a conference was held between members of the Saskatchewan Liquor Commission and the director of prosecutions under the Saskatchewan Temperance Act which will result in a change of system of taking samples of beer and liquor from bars, homes or any places that may be recommended, A. G. Hawkes, member of the commission stated.

Details have not been worked out, but according to Mr. Hawkes the main feature will be a long seal that will pass up the neck of the bottle over the cork and cap and down the opposite side. Each such seal will carry a serial number and will have signatures attached, while on the premises raided. The owner of the raided premises will hold part of the seal so attached or a counterfeit.

SASKATCHEWAN WANTS A VOTE

Follows in the Wake of Alberta on Liquor Issue

REGINA, Nov. 7. — (Canadian Press.)—A petition asking for a referendum on the liquor question as it affects Saskatchewan will be presented to the government early next week, it was announced yesterday by officials of the Saskatchewan Moderation League.

According to the same source the petition will carry approximately 80,000 signatures. It is possible, according to men concerned in the circulation and final presentation of the petition, that pressure will be brought to bear on the government to repeal the Saskatchewan Temperance Act and substitute some measure of government control without putting the province to the expense of a referendum vote, the cost of which is estimated at $200,000.

Alberta's Liquor Act Is Still in Force.

EDMONTON, Nov. 7.—The only comment made by Mr. J. E. Brownlee, attorney general, was that the vote was a decisive one and whatever might be one's personal opinion on the liquor question the will of the people was supreme and must be fairly and honestly carried into effect. He hoped that all citizens would remember that the liquor act is still the law of the land and that he would have their full co-operation in seeing that it was respected and observed until such time as it was changed by the legislature. Certainly until that time his department had no other alternative than to carry on in the usual way.

S.R.O. SIGN HUNG OUT ALREADY TO OLYMPIC CROWDS FOR CHAMONIX

Little Town High Up in the French Alps Needs Miracle-Worker to House Visitors For the Winter Sports of 1924 Olympiad.

EXPECT 30,000.

CHAMONIX, France, Nov. 6.—How to provide shelter for the twenty to thirty thousand visitors expected here from January 25 to February 5, during the winter sports events which mark the opening of the 1924 Olympic Games, is the problem confronting the town authorities and French Olympic committee, now that the work on the skating rink, bob-sleigh chute and ski jumps is finished.

Chamonix, a little town of 3,000 inhabitants, perched high on the slopes of Mont Blanc, possesses normal accommodation for about 1,500 and 2,000 transients, and by placing cots in bathrooms, corridors and billiard parlors of the hotels, and by pressing private house owners to let out the "guest room," this might be increased to 3,000.

Frantz Reichel, the General Secretary of the French Olympic Committee and Allan H. Muhr, international secretary, were here recently and held several conferences with Mayor Lavaivre, with the result that 65 per cent. of the hotel accommodations were reserved for the committee, which has assumed responsibility for housing the athletes, trainers, officials and newspaper correspondents. Three hundred applications have been received by the committee from newspaper representatives desirous of attending the games.

The local hotels are already booked up to the limit and it is the present intention of the organizers to refer prospective visitors to hotels in Aix-Les-Bains and Annecy and to shuttle them back and forth to Chamonix morning and evening. For that purpose local excursion trains will be run twice daily between Aix-Les-Bains, Annecy and Chamonix, while bus lines will be established.

OMEMEE DECIDES ON HOCKEY TEAM

Athletic Club Has Lost Three of Its Prominent Members.

OMEMEE, Nov. 7.—A meeting of the Omemee Athletic Association was held on Friday evening in the Council Chamber. The president, Mr. Harry Lamb occupied the chair and Mr. S. J. Mackey, the secretary was present to take the minutes. A number of accounts were passed including the payment of $100 on the O.A.A. park. The president referred to a decided loss the association has met since last meeting in the moving of Mr. Fred McFarlane to Lindsay, A. Weaver to Alliston and Dr. Younie, the treasurer to St. Catharines. All three gentlemen took a very active interest in the welfare of the town and Dr. Younie, who was present, was given a rousing cheer, as a send-off. Mr. Horace Hill was appointed the new treasurer. The matter of running the skating rink was discussed, and Messrs. E. H. Mitchell, Reuben Bradley, M. J. Parsons and the caretaker, Mr. Percy Parsons were appointed a committee to draft a schedule for skating hours, hockey practice, and rink business in general. There were a number of young men present, who decided that a hockey club should be organized in the near future and they were all determined to put up a good fast game against all comers this winter.

BIG STARS ON SIDELINES AS OTHERS FIGHT

NEW YORK, Nov. 7. — Without cracking even so much as a faint shadowy smile, Mike McTigue and Gene Tunney will flit into the Madison Square Garden arena at an early date and discuss the world's light-weight problem with smartly upholstered gloves.

At present both of these distinguished business leaders are laid up with busted hands. How two such light tappers ever acquired maimed mittens is one of the mysteries of the age.

McTigue's wallops carry all the force of a humming bird's kick, and Tunney is one of the few persons in the world who can land a full punch on a lemon meringue pie without denting the surface.

To those who appreciate rare humour the battle between McTigue and Tunney for a world's title should be enormously amusing. We don't know who deserves a bigger laugh out of it than Tommy Gibbons and Harry Greb. Gibbons can "take" either McTigue or Tunney any time he wants to, and Greb has already demonstrated his ability to handle Gibbons.

McTigue Beat Siki.

McTigue won what is facetiously accepted as the world's title by beating Battling Siki in Dublin some months ago. It was one of those bouts that cause the serious-minded observer to wonder why people go to so much trouble to popularize boxing.

Tunney became the American titlist by defeating Greb. Nobody agreed that he defeated Greb except the two judges. It was distinctly a questionable decision. A less courageous person would call it less than that.

Whether McTigue beats Tunney or vice versa the fight will prove nothing aside from the fact that both wear their trunks fashionably. Tunney seldom fights impressively, and is lacking in aggressive qualities. McTigue at times looks like a great fighter. It is a treat to see him stab with his left and cross his right. In this detail he reminds you of John Kilbane, and none of the moderns use the "one-two" better than the Cleveland Irishman.

Is McTigue Game?

What McTigue lacks mainly is consistency and dependability. Some of the boys say he is not as game as he might be. This may explain his occasional lapses.

Against Young Stribling, the eighteen-year-old Georgian, he did not look the part of a champion, and Stribling, our scouts report, is no Bob Fitzsimons in the rough.

We recall, too, seeing McTigue fight Greb some years back. Both were youngsters then and Greb slapped him dizzy.

It will be interesting from the standpoint of high finance to see how the fans react to this world's championship battle between McTigue and Tunney—especially since a large part of the world must agree in advance that neither is as good nor better than Gibobns or Greb, the two young men who should be fighting for the title.

OTTAWA FANS DISAPPOINTED

Had Expected to Be in Big Four Money — Play Queen's Saturday.

OTTAWA, Nov. 6. — (Canadian Press.)—While no importance is attached to the rugby game scheduled here for Saturday between Ottawa and Queen's the local players are working hard in an endeavor to make amends for their final position in the Big Four race. The game is being treated lightly by the fans, many of whom will doubtlessly be attracted to see the Dominion champions in action. The majority of Ottawa fans have not seen the famous tri-color combination in war togs and will take advantage of the opportunity to size them up on Saturday.

Ottawas expect to have a full line-up for the occasion. Emerson and Baker are nearly sure to be back in line but it is feared that Brian Timmis is through with football. The star plunger received an injury to his back in the game with Argos at Toronto three weeks ago and has been in bad shape since. At his own request he was sent into the game against M.A.A.A. on Saturday, but retired after taking part in one scrimmage.

The football followers in the capital are sorely disappointed over the showing made by Ottawa this season. They realize the individual ability of the team but cannot understand what is lacking that is so necessary for a championship aggregation. However, should the locals topple the Queens team or at least give them a tough tussle for the verdict, much would be forgiven. It goes without saying that the locals will make a big effort to do this especially since "Bud" Thomas, star outside wing of the champions formerly played for the Senators before attending the Limetsone City seat of learning.

At the mile Exodus was still in front At this point My Dear began to move and on the stretch turn she collared the leader tand came on to a handy victory. Exodus held on and got the place. PITCHING ACES FAILED IN SERIES

BY BILLY EVANS.

The uncertainty of baseball produces many unusual angles. Never was this truth better illustrated than in the 1923 world series. Let me explain.

Prior to the start of the series if there was one pitcher that Miller Huggins banked on more than any other member of his staff, it was Waite Hoyt. The big right-hander of the Yankees is known as a great money pitcher, at his best in a pinch. Hoyt has a world of stuff and just as much courage.

In the camp of the Giants, John Watson was regarded with great favor. Watson, the pitcher who had been entrusted with winning the all-important game in the final series with the Cincinnati Reds, loomed up as McGraw's pitching ace.

Just before the opening of the series I was chatting with Hank Gowdy, veteran catcher of the Giants. Discussing Watson he remarked: "He has good stuff and a peculiar style that always puzzles a club facing him for the first time."

Opening Game Selections.

Just what the rival managers thought of Watson and Hoyt can be gleaned from the fact that the pair were the pitching selections for the opening game.

The first game in a world series is considered all-important, a much desired edge. Both pitchers warmed up well. I umpired the plate in that game and both seemed to have plenty of stuff.

Watson lasted three innings in which the Yanks nicked him for three runs through consistent hitting. His rather peculiar side arm delivery didn't seem to have any terrors for the Yanks. Hoyt breezed through three innings without any trouble. In an American League game any time a club spots Hoyt three runs it has work ahead to beat him. Then came the break.

Worked Only Few Innings.

The next inning saw the exit of Hyot from the game and the series Hoyt, a pitcher who works with his brain as much as his powerful right arm, suffered a mental slip. With runners on first and third, Hoyt wound up, which is contrary to baseball ethics, as it practically permitted the runner on first to jog down to second. But for this error Pipp would have been holding the runner on first and would have stopped the drive of the batsman that went for two bases and scored both runners. This slip caused Hoyt's withdrawal.

HOYT

WATSON

Thus before the finish of the first game, the two pitchers on whom the managers had banked to win the opener had been removed from the game. The strange part of it is that neither got another chance to show in the series.

No doubt had the Yankees lost the sixth game in which Pennock was started with only a day's rest, the second guessers would have had their inning as Hoyt appeared to be the logical choice.

The uncertainty of baseball sure produces some unusual angles.

CANADIAN PLAY-OFF OUTLOOK GAMES AND TEAMS UNCERTAIN

Queen's Likely to Play Interprovincial Winners Saturday, November 17, If the O.R.F.U. Race Is Tied.

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—The Canadian Senior Rugby playoffs are in more or less of an uncertain state and no definite announcement can be made until after the Parkdale-Hamilton Rowing Club game on Thanksgiving Day afternoon. The winner of the O.R.F.U. series, according to the Canadian Rugby Union draw, is called to play on the grounds of the Interprovincial champions in the eastern Canada semi-final. The Interprovincial will not declare a winner until Saturday. The O.R.F.U. may be tied up if Pakdale beat Rowing Club on Monday. Then they will have to play off on November 17.

The Possibilities.

Saying that Hamilton Rowing Club beat Parkdale on Monday and win the O.R.F.U. title, they will then meet the Interprovincial champions on the latter's grounds on Nov. 17. The winner of that will then play Queen's on the latter's grounds on Nov. 24. But if the O. R.F.U. race ends in a tie, Queen's will be asked to meet the Interprovincial champions in the semi-finals. That will mean a game in either Toronto or Hamilton on November 17, but just what teams they will be cannot be ascertained until this week-end.

Western Situation.

In the west no winners have been declared, and nothing has been heard regarding their coming east. However, it is taken for granted they will come.

The Kind of Bet You Dream About

PARIS, Nov. 6.—A two dollar parley bet —roughly 30 francs —parleyed on the six winners at the Maisons Laffitte Race Track to-day would have won 42,425,000,000 francs. The entire bank-note circulation of France is below 40,000,000,000 francs.

The six winners averaged 50 to 1. The odds on the horse that won the first race were 175 to 1, on the second 15 to 1, the third 20 to 1, and the fourth, fifth and sixh races, 30 to 1.

Tigers or Argos? Give the correct answer to that question and there is a heap of money in sight, for the Toronto fans are coming up a thousand or more strong to back their favorites, says the Hamilton Spectator. They point out that Argos have a habit of defeating Tigers in Hamilton, and that they will do so again this season. Argos have not lost a game; although they have played two ties, while Tigers lost one game and that was at Ottawa, it being the Senators' only victory of the season, despite the fact taht some of the dopesters figured the Senators to be the best team in Canada. Tigers are a greatly improved team since the held Argos to a tie in Toronto, and, allowing that the oarsmen have also improved, the fact that the Bengals will be on the home lot gives them an edge. If they can repeat the performance they showed against Montreal in Montreal, it will be good-bye Argos.

TRIBUTE TO QUEEN'S.

Bazil O'Meara in the Ottawa Journal writes: Queen's as they played on Saturday are on the most finished teams that has played the game since the war. Their every move was calculated and decisive.

Only the unusual tendency of Batstone to juggle the ball marred their otherwise flawless game. Interference that cloaked every play, deceptive shifts that completely bewildered Varsity, line thrusts that measured off their yards with telling regularity; and above all an eye filling aerial offensive that was the last word in kicking efficiency composed a game that for sheer power and strength could not have been excelled.

A large number of pianos seemed to be moved in the Limestone City Saturday. Large drays with huge piano boxes were parked outside Richardson Stadium. The boys on top were keyed up to concert pitch long before the match started.

School doesn't usually attract the small boy on Saturday, but that public school overlooking the stadium was very irresistible to the small boy who hadn't four bits. He didn't mind sitting there all afternoon even if a stern looking teacher was also there.

The striking appearance of those vivacious co-eds in their stunning short fur coats and general knock 'em cold get-up makes one reflect if Queen's is a "poor man's college" any more. The five o'clock peach crop on a sunny autumn day on Sparks streets is not a more colorful spectacle than Levana when dolled up for a rugby match.

No other town or city in Canada gives a team such enthusiastic, consistent support as does Kingston give Queen's. From the oldest enfeebled resident to the youngest boy able to shin up a tree near the stadium every citizen was interested in the championship game.

TOOK ON ALL COMERS.

Charlie Connell helped to enliven the proceedings a little when he took on several of the visiting players and a few of their enthusiastic supporters, in the M.A.A.A. game in Ottawa.

It was in the opening period, when Connell and Bennett, the hustling little halfback of the Montreal squad, went to the mat. A Montreal supporter on the sideline took a hand in the go, and the Ottawa skipper immediately stepped into him. When Connell reached the penalty bench he was forced to battle his way through a couple of the Montreal substitutes, but he went through all three engagements without showing visible signs of distress.

THREE GIANTS SAFE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7. — Ross Young, Frank Frisch and Travis Jackson are the only Giants who will not be traded, if the team can be strengthened by deals involving any of the other players, according to Manager John McGraw.

"Young Frisch and Jackson won the pennant for the Giants last season, and I will not trade them under any circumstances, but I will part with any of the others," McGraw said.

The Giants leader said he was ready to talk business with the St. Louis Cardinals about Rogers Hornsby but that he would not give the club what was being asked for Hornsby.

"He is thirty years old and has a bad leg," McGraw said. He added that he had offered $250,000 for Hornsby two years ago with another $50,000 to be thrown in if the Giants won the pennant.

McGraw also said that he had called off negotiations with the Baltimore club for Pitcher "Lefty" Groves. "He showed in the little world's series that he doesn't know anything and I don't want him," McGraw said.

POSTPONE ESKIMO HANGING

May Not Take Place Till End of January, it is Said.

OTTAWA, Nov. 7.—The execution of the two Eskimos sentenced to death at Herschell Island on December 7th will be postponed probably till the end of January owing to the difficulty of the officer going in with the executive order in reaching the island in time. The Government, however, reaffirms its decision not to interfere with the sentence.

NEW ALTITUDE RECORD.

PARIS, Nov. 7.—The Aero Club of France has officially accepted the altitude record of 16,145 meters, (36,564.88 feet) made by Sadi Lecointe, the French aviator, at Issy-les-Moulineaux on October 30.

The former record also made by Sadi Lecointe was 10,722 metres (35,718.88 feet).

BAA! BAA! BAA!

Being the Plaintive Bleating of Senor Casey Stengel, Official Goat-Getter of Mr. McGraw and His Master-Minded Giants.

In addition to hitting home runs in world series games, Casey Stengel's sideline with the New York Giants has been acting as "goat-getter."

In professional circles, if the opposition has a weak spot that comes under a verbal barrage, the job is turned over to the club's "goat-getter."

Stengel has a sense of humor—sometimes it is a bit distorted. Incidentally, he has a sarcastic tongue. In the last three series, Babe Ruth has been Stengel's target. As a bench-warmer in 1921 and 1922, Stengel went big against Ruth. In the recent series, Ruth refused to be disturbed by Stengel's unkind words.

Twice last season Stengel figured in fist fights on the diamond, each time losing the decision. In a game at Philadelphia, Pitcher Weinert was making the Giants look foolish. Then Stengel said something, a fist fight followed and Stengel and Weinert were chased from the game. Stengel had accomplished his purpose—the exit of Weinert.

In the all-important series with the Cincinnati Reds, in which New York took five straight and practically decided the pennant, Stengel got in his work. Luque piched the first game. Near the finish, Stengel said some things that reflected on Luque's Castilian ancestry. Another fight, in which Luque was suspended for five days and lost for the rest of the series.

Stengel is a pretty fair hitter but a far better "goat-getter."

CHARLES RAY IS COMING TO GRAND

For Three Days This Week in Screen Version of "The Girl I Loved."

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week the Grand will present Charles Ray in "The Girl I Loved." This picture should have a special appeal to women and girls, as well as practical men.

Everything romantic in the imagination of women is appealed to by this splendid translation to the screen of James Whitcomb Riley's personal romance. The title of the feature alone should have a strong appeal and when there are added to it the values of Charles Ray's popularity and known acting ability and Riley's fame for humanizing every subject that he turned his matchless pen to, you have a great picture.

The "Girl I Loved" is the quintessence of romance. There are in it some of the most vehement love scenes ever screened that will give a thrill to all who have romance in their imaginations.

At the same time "The Girl I Loved" has all the "kick" in it that the most practical man could wish. Charles Ray represents a thoroughly masculine lover and the action of the play has very much in it that will satisfy those who care most for punch.

While the love scenes in the picture can be exploited as intense it can also be truthfully stated that there is not a base suggestion in them, and this fact brings "The Girl I Loved" within the classification of film appealing especially to women's clubs, parent-teacher organizations, school societies and all similar organizations.

The work of a great poet has been filmed by a star who is known to give the public only clean pictures.

"THE MAID OF THE MOUNTAINS" RANGE OF MUSICAL CHARMS.

Sharing honors with the Merry Widow Waltz, that immortal haunting air from the Merry Widow, the musical comedy sensation of ten years ago, stands "Love Will Find A Way" a tune of exceptional charm from the "Maid of the Mountains" the musical comedy which took all England by storm., and its run at Daly's Theatre, London for over five years during and after the war set a record which has never been equalled. All our Canadian boys says it "over there" and they are its biggest boosters. During the tour of this Dominion by the play three years ago, thousands were turned away in every town in Canada, and now those who were unfortunate enough not to have seen this musical comedy before have their last opportunity on Thanksgiving Day, November 12, when it comes to the Grand Opera House for a special matinee and evening performance.

Other charming melodies from this musical favorite are "A Bachelor Gay", "Paradise for Two", "When You're in Love" and dozen other hits which are haunting and beautiful. To hear these selections as you can on your phonograph or piano at home at your leisure, is a privilege great indeed to the music lover of the better kind but the full effect can only be realized when heard and seen on the stage.

The character of Teresa and rendering of "Love Will Find A Way" are forever linked together in your mind, as is Beppo, The Lieutenant of the Brigand Chief, and his singing the "Bachelor Gay."

The records and sheet music of all musical hits from the "Maid", can be secured at any music store in the Dominion, and unless we have them all to play at your leisure at home we can assure you, you are missing a treat.

After seeing the play and hearing the music once you won't need any advice as to which of the many favorites you get, for you will surely get them all.

To sum it up in a few words don't miss the last chance you will probably have to see the "World's Greatest Musical Comedy."

BOY'S BAD COLD TURNED TO BRONCHITIS

The frequency with which bronchitis develops into pneumonia is appreciated by very few mothers. The danger of pneumonia is, probably, well understood too, but how many mothers take into consideration that a neglected attack of bronchitis frequently leads to this dangerous disease.

We would advise all mothers to give their children Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup the first moment they show any symptoms of a cold or cough as by doing this they save them from an attack of bronchitis or pneumonia.

Mrs. Lawrence Quick, Sandwich, Ont. writes:—"My little boy, six years old, had a bad cold which turned to bronchitis. I tried every thing I thought would be best for it but did not see him getting any better. I was told to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after giving him two bottles he got wonderful relief. I cannot praise it enough."

AT THE ROYAL.

ROYAL AGAIN CROWDED TO THE DOORS LAST NIGHT.

A very large audience turned out again last night to see Betty Balfour's latest English production "Mord Em'ly." This picture deserves the patronage it is attracting and although it may not have as many laughs as 'Me and My Gal,' it has a better story and is so intensely human that it would be a hard-hearted person indeed who will not fall in love with "Mord". The picture was reviewed at length in Tuesday's Examiner. To-night will be the last showing and to miss it is to miss a screen treat.

POPULAR MELORDAMA NOW ON THE SCREEN

"The Kentucky Derby," Exciting Picture of the Blue Grass Region Coming to Royal Thursday.

Kentucky, home of mint julep, aristocracy, beautiful women, thoroughbred horses and magnificent scenery

The Pacific Ocean romantic, tyrannic and historic grave of hopes and boon to idle dreams.

These two were the "locations" Universal chose in filming "The Kentucky Derby," the Universal-Jewel special which will be shown at the Royal Theatre on Thursday.

The story of "The Kentucky Derby' is based on "The Suburban," a stage play which thousands remember to-day, thought it was presented twenty years ago for the first time. Charles T. Dazey wrote it.

Universal assigned King Baggot to direct it immediately after he had made "Human Hearts," the country life picture now enjoying popularity on American screens.

Baggot chose Reginald Denny, Universals star as the best type for the leading male role.

Lillian Rich will be seen opposite Denny as a daughter of a stableman, brought by education and culture into the very heart of the mint julep aristocracy of the Blue Grass State.

Lionel Belmore Emmett King, Gertrude Astor, Kingsley Benedict, Harry Carter, Bert Tracy, Bert Woodruff, Walter McGrail, Wilfed Lucas, Pat Harmon. Verne Winter and Anna Hernandez are other members of the all star cast.

Romantic variety and breadth of locale is promised, the action switching from Kentucky to New York slums and then to the high seas and the China coast.

AT THE REGENT.

After all is said and done, the final card in the making of a picture is dealt by the cameraman. The director may be worth a fortune a week, the company may be all stars, the author may be the world's best, the scenario and technical staff may be perfect, and the electricians the most competent in their profession, but if the cameramen make the slightest error in adjusting their delicate mechanism, the picture is spoiled. "Cameron of the Royal Mounted," which is at the Regent Theatre to-night, is blessed with having some of the most expert cameramen in the game, the names of William Kraft, William Thornley and Anthony Kornfan being favorably known to the picture profession all over the continent.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

New York, November 7. — United Press. — Business news over the holiday was mostly of a constructive character; chain stores and mail order houses reported increased sales in October General Motors produced more cars in October than in any other month in history, notwithstanding that this is supposed to be the off season; awards of between 75,000 and 100,000 freight cars pending, and relatively as many locomotives; the $1,000,000,000 telephone and telegraph bonds were oversubscribed; heavy tin plate sales pointed to great activity for tin plate and can manufacture companies next year. Japan awarded large steel contracts and large sales to Italy are pending. Stocks reflected this favorable budget in a generally strong tone in the early morning. Marine preferred sold at the best level on the advance and Steel, Studebaker, General Motors and other industrial leaders scored fractional gains over the previous close.

Another extraordinary display of strength in cotton quotations was followed by another advance in the stock market before the end of the first hour; Steel and Studebaker made new high on the movement and special strength was shown by Mac trucks and othre specialties. The market has undergone a good test over the last two days of trading. It was believed that considerable profit taking would make its appearance Saturday and Monday, due to the two holidays. No doubt many traders sold stock in anticipation of a reaction but this profit taking made very little improvement on values. The majority of stocks traded in scorned advances on Saturday as well as Monday, and for this reason many traders take the position that securities should be strong for the remainder of the week. That the gasoline situation is adjusting itself is evident from the government figures showing a reduction in surplus gasoline stocks during September from a 45 days' suppl. to a 40 days' supply.

NOTICE
Madame Merriam, hairdresser, 286 George street, has purchased a machine for permanent hair waving that will doubtless find many patrons in the beauty-loving feminine world of Peterboro. This machine gives the most up-to-date form of permanent wave to the hair, in accordance with the Lanoil method used by the Nestle people, and is guaranteed to give that appearance of trim perfection to the coiffure so much desired by particular women.

While in New York recently, Madame Merriam received a diploma from the Nestle company on Fifth avenue, for permanent waving, and took a 'brush up' course in special hair dressing methods and massage work, including muscle strapping. She also attended the convention of the National Hairdressers' Association, held at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York city and there gleaned many good ideas from the exhibitions given of up to the minute fashions in hair designs. At this convention, hair dressing competitions were held, when $300 in prizes was warded to the successful contestants and exhibits at the various booths included demonstrations in waving and dyeing, facial and scalp steaming and peels, treatments for superfluous hair, massage work, packs and muscle culture for face, neck and hands. A public style show, with an elaborate stage setting, luxurious costuming and appropriate music, was the scene of every type of 'hair do', from the coiffure of the flapper to that of the matron the tableaux including portrayals of the transformation of the immigrant maiden's mode of dressing her hair; classical Grecian effects; permanent waves; transformations for elderly wearers, and the very latest ideas in braided effects and curl for use with bobbed heads.

Madame Merriam makes a specialty of guaranteed work in hair dye ing and has facilities for all types of hair and facial work. 1d 4302 109

Patients Don't Propose.

Wartime novels are perhaps to blame for the mistaken idea that patients in hospital invariably make love to the nurses who wait on them. Several nurses, while reticent on the topic, declared positively that men are more likely o complain of food, attendance, or stringent rules than they are to make love. Pain, they say is not conducive to romance, and once the patient is convalescent he is eager to return to the haunts of daily life in his business or home circles.

DISCUSSION OF CANADIAN PULP

OTTAWA, Nov. 7. — (Canadian Press.)—The matter of an embargo on exports of Canadian pulpwood is not the most important question before the Royl Commission investigating the pulp and paper industry, said Elwood Wilson, of Laurentide, Que., giving evidence yesterday before that body. He believed that forest management and conservation was the most important pending question before the Dominion to-day. Furthermore, Mr. Wilson contended, the question was one for Canada alone to solve. He said that opinion was becoming prevalent that United States paper concern were so interested in the matter that they were attempting to over-ride the work of the Commission. The United States had wasted their own timber resources, he averred, and there was no reason why they should be allowed to take advantage of those of the Dominion. Canada was already over-cutting its timber every year and unless better methods of conservation were adopted the Dominion forests would not lend themselves to an expansion in the output.

STRIKING FACT ABOUT EXPORTS

LONDON, November 7 (Canadian Press Cable). — A very striking fact about our exports to the Dominions is that nearly all of them are manufactured goods employing a large amount of labour in their production, declared Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, last night.

"The only thing keeping the Dominions from developing their territories is uncertainty as to what they would be able to sell if they developed them," the Chancellor said.

"The certainty we have now offered them," he added, referring to the preference already announced, "is security of the British market, which is the finest in the world. It will enable them to place orders with us for locomotives and machinery, and to take more settlers from Britain."

PROTECT THE KIDNEYS

The heart and the kidney are the most important organs of the body.

This time of the year particularly the kidneys are easily deranged from chills and exposure. Excesses in eating or drinking will often couse disease in the kidneys.

Never neglect a backache which is one of the first symptoms and may lead to other complications.

The best remedy for any kidney ailments is Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills. They will keep the kidneys in a sound and healthy condition and free the blood from all poisons.

Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are sold at Lynch's Drug store, 168 Hunter Street, and if they fail to do what we claim for them your money will be refunded.

CONVICTS GET AWAY AS THE BULLETS FLY

Flashlights From Prison Walls Turned On and Excited Throng Pours Out.

ONE IS SLAIN

PHILADTLPHIA, Nov. 8.—Three Eastern Penitentiary prisoners have escaped. Another convict was shot and killed before his three companions fled.

One of the men was captured by guards in an alley on North Street near Twenty-First. The man struggled desperately.

The escape was gained by the men through the main gate on Fairmount Avenue. A guard there saw them. When he attempted to stop them one of the prisoners drew a pistol and shot him.

Then the great iron-studded door was swung open, and the three men in their prison garb scattered. Two of them ran to Twenty-Second Street and the third to Twenty-First Street.

Details of guards with shotguns pursued them, firing as they ran. Police of the Twentieth and Buttonwood Streets Station were called in, and they took up the chase.

Flashlights were turned at full-head in all directions, and soon the entire neighborhood was thronged with excited men and women.

At Twenty-Second and Wallace Streets the two men disappeared and at 11 o'clock no trace of them had been found.

Firemen from Truck No. 1, Twenty-First and Fairmount Ave., were pressed into service.

A warning was sent through the neighboring sections and police were posted at every corner.

At Twenty-Second and Wallace Streets the two men attempted to halt the driver of a yellow taxi cab, who, recognizing the convict uniform, turned his machine in their direction and started it directly at them. One of the men, in his haste to get out of the way, fell to the street. He was dragged to safety by the second convict.

A NEW CONTRACT FOR THE INSULIN

Production Cost Cut in Half by Manufacturers

TORONTO November 8. Canadian Press. — Folowing negotiations carried on through Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, Provincial Minister of Health Department, has succeeded in securing a new contract with the Connaught Laboratories, which will cut the provinces cost on diphtheria anti-toxin by $2400 for 1924.

The province has been distributing increasingly large quantities of this anti-toxin, and the department took up with the laboratory authorities the question of the cut in price, with the above successful result,even more notable perhaps from standpoint of public interest, has been the 100 per cent. decrease in the per unit cost of insulin. due to the increased quantity which the department was called upon to distribute free of charge in October as compared with September, while the demand was for many more thousand units of insulin. The laboratories are now able to cut the production cost to the government from three cents per unit to 1 1-2 cents.

Allies Would Have Little Willie Kept on Dutch Territory

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The Allied Council of Ambassadors decided to-day to request the Dutch Government not to allow former Crown Prince Frederick William to leave Dutch territory where he has been in exile since the war, and also to ask German Government not to allow him to enter Germany, as he is on the list of persons charged with war crimes whose arrest is sought by Allied Governments.

The Ambassadors likewise decided to give out the text of instructions sent on October 3 and November 3 to General Nollet, chief of the French military mission in Berlin with a view to resumption of work by Allied Commissions of Control in Germany.

PREPARED FOR RUSH ELECTION

London Press Repeats Suggestion That British Government May Go to Polls Before Christmas

LONDON, November 8. — Canadian Press. — More than one paper this morning repeats the suggestion that a general election may come before Christmas.

Panic stricken by the force of the free trade speeches delivered in the last few days is condition of those prepared to support the premier, according to the Daily News, which will have nothing to do with protection, and thinks the protectionists are eager to jockey the premeir into a snap election.

Another suggestion abroad that a full meeting of the Unionist party ought to be called encounters a rather poor reception of the party's own press, which regards the demand as submitted by a rather fussy minority

Premier Baldwin, of course, has his own means of taking the pulse of his followers, while in any case, it lies within his own province entirely to advise His Majesty concerning the date of dissolution.

Both Unionist and Labor organizations express themselves as fully prepared for a rush election, and indeed have arrangements in hand for such an emergency.

WEDDING BELLS

HOPKINS—BURNS

Robertson Presbyterian church, Vancouver, B. C., was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday after noon, October 13, when Miss Marion Alice Burns, second daughter of the late Charles Burns and Mrs. Burns of this city, became the bride of Mr. Roderick Newton Hopkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Hopkins, 203 Rubidge street, Peterboro, Ont., Rev. Alex. Esler, pastor of the church performed the ceremony. The bride, who was given in marriage by her mother, was attired in a navy blue poiret twill suit with grey hat and ermine furs, and was attended by her sister, Miss Vera Burns, who wore a costume of reindeer cloth with hat of champagne velvet. The groom was supported by Mr. William Proctor. The wedding chorus from Lohengrin was played by Miss Edith Shook, and during the signing of the register Miss Edith Butler sang "O Promise Me." Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left for Seattle and the sound cities. On their return they will reside at the Westerdale apartments, Victoria drive, Vancouver.

BOTH REPUBLICANS

Washington, November 7. — Despite the few changes made by yesterday's off-year election in the political map of the country, the leaders of both of the great political parties professed to find comfort in the outcome.

Speaking of the Republican organizations, National Chairman Adams directed the attention of the political observers to Vermont, which retained its place in the Republican ranks despite the senatorial campaign waged by the Democrats, and to the Twenty-fourth Congressional District of New York, where a Republican was chosen to succeed a Democrat in the House.

Chairman Hull of the Democratic Committee, on the other hand, invited attention to the re-election of a Democratic Governor in Maryland, and to the Democratic gubernatorial victory in Kentucky.

ARE PREPARED TO CHECKMATE ALL INVADERS

Berlin is Not Alarmed at Threatened March on City of Borderers From Bavaria.

MONARCHISTS BUSY

BERLIN, Nov. 8. — (By Carl D. Groat, United Press Staff Correspondent).—Chancellor Stresemann's Government prepared to-day to head off the threatened march of the Bavarian Borderers to Berlin.

Reichswehr troops occupied the railroad centre at Weimar, near the border of Thuringia. It was believed that in any attempt of the Monarchist Borderers to make a sudden rush on Berlin, they would probably try to use the railways passing through Weimar.

Camouflage Move.

General Reinhardt, commanding the Federal troops in Thuringia, is carrying out an aggressive campaign against the "Red" organizations there.

The move, however, is more camouflage for a larger military action he is taking to bar all roads to Berlin against the Bavarian Fascisti units gathered along the frontier.

President Ebert Wednesday told callers that the action against the "Reds" must not be taken too seriously and explained that the Government was really proceeding to unify its forces for resistance to any Bavarian Fascist thrust.

Surround Weimar.

The commander of the Reichswehr troops who took over Weimar announced that the city would be surrounded immediately to prevent undesirable persons from entering. While the occupation of Weimar was announced as only a move against the "Reds," like the occupation of Zweickau, another railroad town near the Thuringian border, it was known to be actually directed against the Borderers. It was part of General Reinhardt's scheme for the defence of the Republic in the event of the Monarchist Putsch freely talked of as scheduled for the anniversary of the founding of the Republic November 9.

President Ebert assured visitors they need not worry about the Borderers' march from Bavaria to Berlin, because the Government was much more active than generally supposed.

Lost Enthusiasm.

Reports to-day indicated Captain Ehrhardt's Borderers had lost some of their enthusiasm since learning of the wall Reichswehr erected against them.

Members of the Nationalist party were reported to-day growing restive under Chancellor Stresemann's rule.

It was rumored that Deputy Hergt had warned the Chancellor that troops would drag him from the Chancellory soon unless he resigned and made way for a reactionary regime.

Stresemann, however, was said to be clinging to his office. The Government hopes to issue the new "renten mark" (the new currency) on November 15, it was said to-day. Meantime it is trying to raise more foreign currency to give it a sound basis. The release of sugar for export so as to improve the trade balance was announced.

Absurd to Prophecy.

To prophecy is absurd in the present chaotic condition, but there are some indications that the projected Fascist coup may be postponed or averted. The tension seems largely relaxed in Berlin. This is not, however, a certain criterion, as it is recalled that prior to the Kapp movement, the Government was confident that all was calm.

Few food disorders occurred on Wednesday, as the municipality had taken strict measures to prevent looting. Numerous stores bore the sign, "This is a Christian shop."

May March To-Morrow.

A Berlin correspondent of the London Exchange Telegraph forwards a telegram from Munich, which says that Bavarian irregulars have decided to march on Berlin to-morrow.

POINCARE RECEIVED TODAY UNITED STATES' LAST WORD

Climax Believed Reached in Negotiations to Decide on Basis of Agreement Between Powers on Reparations Controversy

WASHINGTON November 8.—United Press. — France to-day is understood to have the last word of the United States as to whether it will be worth while for this government to proceed with the proposed expert conference to examine into German's capacity to pay reparations.

The climax is now believed to have been reached in the negotiations to reach a basis of agreement between the different powers for his final attempt to bring about a real settlement of the reparations controversy.

An official announcement of the fate of the proposed conference is expected in the immediate future, probably within the next 48 hours. It is likely that either the announcement itself or the first development leading up to the publication of a decision, will come from Paris.

The conference late yesterday afternoon at the State Department between Secretary Hughes and Ambassador Jusserand, when the French envoy gave Hughes the further explanation desired by the American government of the limitations that Premier Poincare is seeking to place on the scope of the conference, is regarded as having constituted the virtual climax in the situation.

Jusserand is understood to have given a satisfactory explanation of Poincare's reservation that the French and Belgian occupation of the Ruhr cannot be dealt with in the expert conference.

TORONTO, November 8. Canadian Press. — An "advance" on their electrical power supply from the Central Ontario plant, was secured this morning by a deputation from Kingston, which waited upon Premier Ferguson and the Provincial Hydro Commission, at the Parliament Buildings this morning.

According to Sir Adam Beck, the "Advance" will bring them to the end of their share within a short period.

The deputation requested that the government authorize Sir Adam to grant them a further allottment of seven hundred horse power in addition to the amount of 3300 horse power now distributed by them. It was claimed that additional power was necessary that industrial activities might be increased.

SAVES LIFETIME BUYS TELESCOPE

It is Nice He is Laying Away a Nice Little Nest Egg for His Old Age.

DELAWARE, O., Nov. 7.—A real philanthropist is Prof. H. M. Perkins.

For more than half a century he skimped and saved. Every month a few dollars from his pedagogical salary—there never was a year it amounted to more than $1,800—were carefully tucked away.

As they accumulated into a tidy sum, the professor began making a few investments. All in time proved quite sound.

Surprised 'Em.

"It's nice he's laying aside a neat little nest-egg for his old age," said the folks at the bank.

But Professor Perkins fooled them. Not, however, until he had passed the ninetieth milestone in life's long journey.

Then his benevolence began to manifest itself. And Ohio Wesleyan University, where he had taught mathematics and astronomy for more than 50 years, benefited thereby.

It's Big One.

A herculean 60-inch reflecting telescope is Professor Perkins' gift. It is said to be the third largest in the world. Those at Mount Wilson, Calif., and Victoria, B. C., are declared to be the only ones with greater range.

The instrument, through which Wesleyan's sons and daughters will read the stories of the stars, will be housed atop the new observatory being built upon an eminence four miles outside of town, far from traffic's dust and jar.

The telescope was made by Warner & Swasey in Cleveland. The lenses are being ground in Pittsburg now. It will be six months before the glass is cool enough to set.

No Strings.

"There are no strings to the gift," Professor Perkins asserts. "I want it to be used freely by the students at Wesleyan, and scientists from all over the world."

Professor Perkins forsook the class room in 1907 to make a trip around the world. But he's been with his school in spirit ever since. And his heart's in Wesleyan yet.

LABOR COUNCIL ENTERS ARENA

Will Endorse Municipal Candidates — Markson Sentence Considered Severe.

Contributed

The regular meeting of the Trades and Labour Council was held in the Labour Hall last evening with a large number of delegates in attendance.

Attention was called to an editorial appearing in the Examiner of last Saturday, Nov. 3, in which it was stated that organized labour had discussed the advisability of running candidates for the City Council in the coming election. Some of the delegates stated that the matter had never been mentioned either at the Trades' Council or in their local unions, so it appeared a little premature on the Examiner's part or who ever was responsible for the statement, but now the matter had been broached, the delegates thought it would be wise to call an open meeting in the Labour Hall within a few weeks and endorse candidates for the municipal board and thus give the worker's of Peterborough an opportunity of being represented in proportion to their number, not for "class" purposes, but for the benefit of the whole city.

The Markson Case

The Markson case received some attention some of the delegates being of the opinion that the sentence was unduly severe for an offence which in nenty-nine cases out of a hundred would have been passed over without any attention being given to it.

A number of other matters were dealt with and the Council adjourned to meet again on Wednesday, November 20.

KILLED ON TRACK AT GARDEN HILL

Elderly Woman, Hard of Hearing, Run Down by Train.

GARDEN HILL, November 8. — Mrs. Florence Osborne, who with her husband and family, resided near Garden Hill, was struck by a C.N.R. morning train to-day, and instantly killed. Mrs. Osborne, who was 48 years old, was walking on the track, and being very hard of hearing, it is thought she did not hear the train approaching behind her.

It is said that Mrs. Osborne was walking the track yesterday when the train was coming, and the engine was stopped just in the nick of time to prevent her death in the same manner as overtook her this morning.

The deceased leaves her husband, two small sons and two little girls.

POLICE THINK CLUB EMPLOYE STILL MISSING

Believe Dieters' Hat and Coat "Planted"— Hear of Member's Letters He Obtained.

EROM WASTE BASKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—A different light was shed on the disappearance of Richard Dieters, a telephone operator in the Crescent Athletic Club, Brooklyn.

The police, who found Dieters' hat and coat, well identified through letters, on the Manhattan Bridge, expressed belief he was not dead at all. Mrs. Dieters had told the authorities she feared her husband had been murdered or driven to suicide by "a wealthy engineer," who, she said, had accused Dieters of having obtained possession of letters sent to the engineer by a woman.

The police, unable to find Dieters' body in the East River, indicated they though the hat and coat might have been "planted."

The District Attorney's office took a hand in the investigation and events moved rapidly.

Tells of Finding Letters.

Ralph Hande, captain of bellboys on the main floor of the club, told attaches of the District Attorney's office that last week he was taken to a police station and questioned concerning his knowledge of two letters alleged to have been written to E. F. Jeffe, a commercial engineer employed by the Brooklyn Edison Company and a member of the club. Hande said he later was allowed to go.

According to Hande's story, he and Dieters, on October 27, saw Jeffe tear two letters in half and drop them into a basket. Hande said that Dieters had asked him to pick up the letters and hand them to him. Hande complied and said he saw Dieters paste the torn pieces together and read the letters.

Hande asserted he refused his fellow employee's invitation to read them, and instead, tore the letters into small pieces and threw them down a waste pipe.

District Attorney Silent.

Jeffe and Mrs. Jeffe later were questioned separately. Assistant District Attorney Cuff declined to make public an extensive statement given him by Mr. Jeffe, and District Attorney Dodd, after interviewing Mrs. Jeffe, said:

"I do not feel that I can tell any detail of the story told me by Mrs. Jeffe. It was given to me in strictest confidence. She gave me the names of a number of men and women, but these people do not figure in this case so far as the possibility of any crime is concerned."

Mr. Dodd said that J. F. Keenahan, employment manager of the club, had given him information that might prove of considerable value should it develop that a crime had been committed.

EJECTED SOVIET BISHOP FROM CATHEDRAL IN N.Y.

NEW YORK, November 8. Canadian Press. — An effort by the Russian Soviet church in the United States failed yesterday when Rev. John S. Kedrovsky, formerly a rebellious priest, appeared from Russia wearing the diamond insignia of the Soviet Bishop of North America, and attempted to take charge of St. Nicholas' Cathedral. He was forcibly ejected by the resident priests and monks.

Kedrovsky declared that he was ready to bring forty priests from Russia to this country to take the places of those who would not fall in line with the so-called "Living Church."

SCHOONER WRECKED.

HALIFAX, Nov. 8. — (Canadian Press).—Telephone advices from Town Harbor, Halifax County, received here this morning, report the wreck of the American schooner Elizabeth Howard, Captain John McInness, on Porter's Island, near Egg Rock. According to meagre advices received, the schooner is a total wreck, and all the crew safe. The captain and crew are proceeding to Halifax.

Mrs. Anne Stillman Denies Contents of Confession Letter

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Mrs. Anne U. Stillman denied the whole contents of the so-called "confession letter which James A. Stillman submitted to the Appellate Court in Brooklyn yesterday as the basis for an appeal from Justice Morechauser's recent decision refusing him a divorce. Counsel for Mrs. Stillman to-day declared that his client repudiated the document.

The letters, which is full of mistakes in punctuation and spelling, is not signed. It was barred as "illegal evidence" by the referee in the case during the hearings last year. The full text of the letter is printed by all New York papers this morning. If the Appellate Division rules that the referee erred in excluding it, a new trial of the whole case very likely will be ordered.

PAID TRIBUTE TO REV. LLOYD

Local Ministerial Association Pass Resolution of Regret at His Leaving St. John's.

A strong vote of regret was voiced by the clergy of the city at the last meeting of the Ministerial Association at the recent news that one of their number, Rev. O. H. Glyn Lloyd, was no longer connected with St. John's Church, and hence might be leaving the city, which was spoken of personally and collectively as a great loss.

One member, in speaking of the reverend gentleman, said that he always brought a cheerful smile and much pleasantness to these meetings.

Two city pastors, Rev. Robert Pogue and Rev. W. E. Morrow, were appointed a committee to draw up and present to Rev. Mr. Lloyd a resolution of regret.

The following is the resolution:

Rev. O. H. Glyn Lloyd, Peterboro.

Dear Mr. Lloyd.—The following is the record, as it will appear in the minutes of our Ministerial Association, of my reference to your leaving the city at our last meeting:

At the regular meeting of the Ministerial Association held on November 5, the Rev. R. Pogue drew attention to the fact that the Rev. Mr. Lloyd was soon to leave our city and that it would be a fitting tribute to place on record our sense of loss at his removal as well as our appreciation of him as a member. This was heartily agreed to by the association, and a committee, composed of Mr. Pogue and Mr. Morrow, was appointed to draw up such a resolution. The resolution is as follows:

"That the association learns with regret that Rev. O. Glyn Lloyd, assistant of St. John's Church, is about to leave the city, and, hence, to sever his connection with the association. During the time he has been in the city he has taken an active interest in the work of the association, and by his bright and cheerful manner has gained the esteem of his brethren. We desire to place on record our appreciation of his fellowship and to wish him the guidance and blessing of God in the field of his future service for Christ and His Church."

Yours very truly,
Robt. Pogue.

ANOTHER MAN SAW RED RYAN

Bank Robber is Getting Lots of Publicity These Days.

HAMILTON, November 8. Canadian Press. — The police officials had a lively hour last night when a man whose name they disclosed rushed into headquarters and said that "Red" Ryan, the notorious bank robber and escaped convict, had just shot him on Wilson street, two blocks away. The man was bleeding freely from an ugly scalp wound. He said he recognized Ryan, spoke to him, and that later Ryan pulled out a gun and fired. The bullet the man said, grazed his scalp.

Subsequent investigation established the fact ,the police said, that this man never saw Ryan, and that his injuries were received in a drunken brawl.

HIGH COST OF PRODUCTION IS LOSING TRADE

European Situation Not the Only Factor Today Detrimental to Business in British Isles.

PARLEY NEARS END

LONDON, Nov. 8. — (Canadian Press Cable).—Sir Herbert Hambling, Deputy Chairman of Barclay's Bank Limited and president of the Bankers' Institute, declares that although Great Britain is losing much because of high costs of production. In statement on matter he said:

"I contend that if all restrictions on output were removed by Labour and if all trading interests aimed at making a larger total profit on each item of big output, we should enlarge our markets and provide a larger amount of remunterative work. Labor is suspicious of combines but I think that that suspicion is not entirely justifiable. Combines, properly organized are an essential feature of modern production.'"

Imperial Conference

The Imperial Conference closes its business today with a formal adoption of a series of resolutions reached during course of six weeks' deliberations. The resolutions, it is understood are not likely to indicate any startling developments.

On Foreign Affairs the most important feature is recognition of the right of Dominions to make treaties when no other part of the empire is affected. This is claimed to be concurrence in the Canadian Government's attitude with regard to signing of the Halibut Treaty at Washington by the Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries instead of by the British Ambassador.

With regard to defence any resolutions passed are likely to be moderate in tone.

On the matter of the three mile limit a formal resolution will be general in its terms, it not having been thought advisable to go farther in view of negotiations in progress between British and United States Governments on the question of extending the limit to twelve miles for the purpose of putting a stop to rum-running on United States coast.

Opinions of Press

Attacked by Free Traders as tax on poor man's lunch Britain's new preference proposals already are centre of controversy.

Daily News estimates that as result of preference every pound tin of salmon and every pound honey outside empire will cost penny more wholesale. Every quart bottle of fruit juice will jump three half pence according to news and every pound of foreign apples penny.

Westminster Gazette says. 'One by one delicacies of working class table are being added to schedule of things to be taxed, added to foods that will cost more to buy.

None of preference proposals will now become effective till they have received parliamentary sanction.

Wing of Conservative party is understood to be strongly pressing for dissolution this week end to avoid meeting parliament at all.

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG Nov. 8. — Some few weeks ago a large quantity of silks and crepes were stolen from the store of P. McCallum & Sons here. A few days afterwards a part of these goods were recovered having been hidden under a pile of leaves in the eastern part of the town. On Saturday Mr. Western found about 32 pieces more of the goods hidden under some leaves in a yard at the rear of Mr. Herman Griffin's summer home here. Two pieces of the goods were considerably injured but the remainder was in very good condition. There are still from 20 to 25 pieces of crepe de chine Canton and georgette crep- missing.

Port Hope Girl Escaped

A Port Hope girl is stated to have been among the twelve girls who escaped from the Industrial Refuge at Toronto the other night.

Presentation of Portrait

A notable event in connection with the opening of the Supreme Court Sittings here on Monday before the Honorable Mr. Justice Kelly was the presentation of a handsome painting made by Mr. E. Wyley Greir Toronto of the late Judge Thomas Moore Benson Judge of the Counties Court of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham. This painting was originally a gift from the bar of the united counties to the late Judge Benson made some time before his death as an evidence of their regard and admiration. It was provided that after the passing of Judge and Mrs. Benson the painting was to revert to the counties and belong in in the court room here where he had so often presided with outstanding ability and fairness. As Mrs. Benson is now not in good health she desired that the formal presentation of the picture should take place now and the opening of the Supreme Court sittingsw as chosen as a suitable time. Judge H. A. Ward of the Counties Court read a tribute paid by Mr. Justice Falconbridge to the late Judge Benson in 1914 upon the occasion of the latter retiring from the bench after long and faithful service.

Mr. D. B. Simpson K.C. senior member of the bar of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham and Mr. Justice Kelly the presiding judge spoke briefly and also Mr. H. S. White K.C. Toronto the latter on behalf of the benchers. Mr. G. A. Smith Port Hope the present warden accepted on behalf of the counties.

Machine and Man in Water

Rev. H. A. Bunt a former Roseneath pastor now of Canton Mr. Percy Carroll and Mr. S. Gifford worked in the icy water up to their waists in a large stream just south of Canton on Monday morning for a half hour before they could free Mr. Lewis Osland of Canton whose foot was caught when a bridge collapsed and a threshing machine fell into the water and he with it.

With his foot caught so that he could not help himself he was forced to remain in this perilous position for half an hour although his rescuers were working indefatigably to release him. He escaped however with a few scratches and bruises and it is hoped that no serious results will follow his untimely dip. The bridge, which Mr. Osland was crossing, is situated south of the village of Canton. Just as he reached the centre of it the whole thing collapsed and the threshing machine is stated to have gone down with a crash.

Bazaar and Tea

Tomorrow afternoon and evening the bazaar and tea in connection with St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at Colborne is to be held. This is an event eagerly looked forward to.

Concludes Mission This Week

Rev. Canon Sawers is conducting the mission which he has been holding for the past two weeks in St. George's Church Toronto and will return to Cobourg to occupy his own pulpit on Sunday. Rev. Canon Moore of St. George's Toronto who has been taking Rev. Canon Sawers' work here is returning to Toronto at the week-end.

Inspecting County Roads

Warden Gerrow accompanied by other officials has been making a tour of inspection of county roads in Ontario County which boasts of having some of the best roads in the province. Eighty per cent. of the 200 hundred miles of roads to be built has been completed and the remainder will be completed at as early a date as is possible.

Enjoyable Evening

The ladies of St. Peter's Church at Lakeport held a progressive euchre at the home of Mrs. Cracknell in that village tonight. Refreshments were served and a pleasant social time was spent.

Horses Caught in Fence

While driving along a road in Haldimand Township a few days ago Mr. S. E. Robinson found a young percheron colt caught in a barbed wire fence where it had apparently passed a bad night. Its legs and one side were torn in its efforts to escape from its predicament.

Will Not Operate

It is stated that the Public School Inspection Board which took in about 35 classrooms and comprised the schools of Bowmanville Newcastle Orono and the rural schools in Darlington and Clarke Townships will not operate this year. Nurse Hanna was the nurse in charge and active and valuable work has been done the past year and the general health of the pupils advanced.

Death of W. E. Robinson

Mr. W. E. Robinson of Kitchener formerly of Brighton went to Rochester some little time ago to visit his daughter Mrs. F. J. Moulden. While there he contracted a severe cold which resulted in pneumonia. Mr. Robinson formerly conducted a restaurant at Brighton but after it was burned in 1921 he went to Kitchener to live. He is mourned by his widow and two sons Lawrence and Will of Kitchener. The funeral took place at Brighton under Masonic auspices.

Presentation at Brighton

The girls of the Mission Circle and Philandoras Class of Brighton Methodist Church were the hostesses of a pleasant social event held in the schoolroom with Miss Vera Snelgrove who is leaving shortly for Toronto as the guest of honor. About 50 guests were present. Misses Irene Sandford and Phyllis Lawson presented Miss Snelgrove with a handsome clock and appreciative address to which the recipient made appropriate reply.

Opposed to Referendum

The Bay of Quinte Methodist Young People in session at Belleville on Friday afternoon expressed their conviction by resolution that there should not be a referendum taken at the present time on account of the fact that Ontario had registered such overwhelming votes against the continuance of the liquor traffic. Until there has been a fair trial of the adequacy of prohibition and until it is clear that there is a majority in favor of a return to other conditions no vote should be taken.

District Competitions

The Young People's Conference also adopted a resolution upon motion by Rev. W. W. Jones arranging for a series of debates for shields or medals among the different districts. Also for an oratorical contest at the next convention each district to have one competitor.

The conference further pledged its support to the summer and winter schools.

Winter School at Cobourg

A winter school is to be held in Cobourg opening the second week in January and an efficient staff of speakers have been engaged to give instruction along the lines of missions and religious education.

SILENCE STILL STANDS GUARD WASHINGTON

Reparations Conversation With France Continue But No Information of Definite Result.

HUGHES HOPEFUL.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.— Absolute official silence as to the nature of continued conversations to-day between Secretary Hughes and Ambassador Jusserand blocked every effort to obtain informations as to whether progress had been made toward an agreement on the scope of the proposed expert inquiry into Germany's economic situation as it affects the reparations problem.

It was said officially, however, that the conversations were continuing. This statement was regarding in some quarters as significant inasmuch as it indicated that no insurmountable obstacle to reconciling the United States and French viewpoints had as yet developed.

No Statement.

The Ambassador laid before the Secretary detailed explanations from Paris as to the French point of view. The only word obtainable from the diplomat when he left the State Department after a half hour conference with Mr. Hughes was this sttaement:

"We continued the conversations. When there is a definite result, it will be brought to your notice."

Secretary Hughes would not go even that far. Evading an effort to get him to say whether he still regarded the situation "hopefully," he went directly from the Conference to the White House to report developments to President Coolidge.

Study Press Cables.

In view of this complete silence as to what had occurred, speculation as to how far direct conversations between Washington and Paris had served to clear the way for an understanding among the Allies which would result in the extending of a formal invitation for United States' co-operation in the proposed inquiry was thrown back upon analysis of press cablegrams from Paris and London.

These despatches were viewed, particularly those from Paris describing French official circles as more hopeful of ultimate agreement among the Allies, as indicating that distinct progress had been made.

FRENCH DEFINITION OF "PRESENT CAPACITY"

PARIS, Nov. 7.—The definition by the semi-official Temps to-day of Germany's "present capacity" to pay reparations, as the international committee of experts is expected by the French Government to understand the phrase and the newspaper's elucidation of the committee's position regarding the Ruhr appear to have been made, it not on direct official authority, at least in terms which the official authorities refuse to challenge. These were the two points on which M. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States, demanded instructions from Paris before giving definite replies to the questions thereon put to him by Secretary of State Hughes.

Germany's "present capacity," according to the newspaper, is that capacity that can reasonably be attributed to the Reich until it has returned to a normal state. The present disturbed state of Germany, it is pointe out, evidently makes impossible calculations of what resources it will possess when the crisis has passed. The Treaty of Versailles, says the Temps, fixes certain limits which France can always invoke if necessary; for instance no payments falling due after 1926 can be carried forward over three years without the unanimous agreement of the Reparation Commission. Likewise no payments which fell due on May 1, 1921, can be postponed beyond 1930 without similar unanimous consent. These limits exist in addition to any that may be fixed by the Allies and the United States.

Concerning the second point, the French Government's conception of the expert committee's rights, as set forth by the Temps, is that they can investigate and compute the resources of Germany in the Ruhr, but cannot touch any matter involving the Franco-Belgian occupation, either regarding its legitimacy or the methods used in its application.

WORKERS OF THE RUHR MUST CHOOSE LONGER HOURS OR BREAD LINE

Resumption of Deliveries to France Depends on Labor's Sacrifice of the Eight-Hour Day, Say the Industrialists.

STARVATION LOOMS.

ESSEN, Nov. 7.—(Canadian Press). — Negotiations were begun today between representatives of the Ruhr industrialists and all the workmen's unions to determine whether the workmen will make sacrifices which the employers consider necessary to enable them to acceed to the terms of the French authorities for the resumption of economic life, and consequently reparation deliveries. On the outcome of these negotiations, which will continue tomorrow, depend to a large extent whether the industrial leaders will sign agreements and whether unemployment in the Ruhr, already reaching alarming proportions, will increase or diminish.

The crux of the negotiations is the question of the working day. It is considered more than likely that the industrialists will reach an agreement with the French if they can induce the workmen to accept a ten-hour day, instead of an eight-hour day, for factories and above ground work, and an eight and a half hour day for underground work, instead of seven.

Alternative Idleness.

If the workers refuse, the industrialists will probably carry out their threat and close down, throwing all their employees on the mercy of unemployment doles. On the question of increasing the working day, which was fixed by law after the 1918 revolution, the workers have remained adament, and undoubtedly this would be one of the possibly insuperable obstacles to finding a satisfactory solution of the Ruhr stagnation with the French.

The workers' attitude, as reflected by Union leaders with whom the Associated Press correspondent talked to-day, seems to be that they are caught between the upper millstone of the industrialists' pressure and the nether millstone of wholesale unemployment, with danger of starvation. From their conversations they appear to be equally acrimonious against the French for manoeuvring the employers into a position where it is impossible to compete in the world markets, and the employers themselves, whom they blame for using threats of unemployment to get the men to work longer hours.

Open Soup Kitchens.

Already grim starvation is staring several hundred thousand workmen in the face, with the cold winter nights creeping up. Soup kitchens have been opened in most of the Ruhr towns, where the unemployed are seen handing in their pittances of three billion marks for a quart of soupy mixture composed mostly of boiled potatoes and a tiny morsel of bacon.

Thirteen kitchens already have been opened in Bochum alone, and the city hopes to increase the number to twenty by the end of the week. Many of the workers are provided with one meal daily, but there are about 30,000 others who are not supplied.

Corps of Unemployed.

The unemployment list at Gelsenkirchen numbers about 40,000; at Essen, 60,000; Dortmund, 60,000 to 70,000; Duisburg, about 100,000; Mulheim 50,000; Hamborn 30,000 to 40,000. If all the industrial plants close as threatened, the total unemployed in the Ruhr will reach from 700,000 to 800,000.

The Bochum Verein has already turned out 3,000 men and the Thyssen works at Mulheim and Hamborn expect to drop 40,000 Saturday.

Even the Krupps company expects to shut out ten per cent. of workmen on November 15, and an additional ten per cent. a few days later, if the workers refuse to accept the longer hours.

Wide Powers in Melbourne Bill

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 7th. —The Legislative Assembly to-day by a vote of 37 to 19, passed the second reading of the public safety bill. The bill would give the government exceptional powers in dealing with disorders. It would prevent intimidation, restrict public assemblages and the sale of liquor, and prevent the accumulation of union funds for the use of the striking policemen.

The Labor members in the Assembly will fight the bill to the utmost in committee. They contend that the measure would give the government the widest powers ever sought by any government.

BAVARIANS ARE GERMANS FIRST DON'T WANT WAR

Free the Fatherland From Misfortune of Social Democrats' Domination —No Military Activities

MUST ACCEPT MARK.

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—The Bavarians did not march on Berlin to-day, although recent rumors had it that this was the day fixed for such an advance. There was no sign, however, of Captain Ehrhardt's followers moving from their present quarters.

The Bavarian Minister in Berlin, interviewed on the question of what Bavaria really wants, said:

"Certainly not war against the Reich. We do not want separation; we are, and remain, Germans. What we wish is to help the Fatherland from the misfortune into which it has sunk deeper and deeper under the influence of the Social Democratics during the last five years.

More Manliness.

"It is now a question of making an end of the so-called achievements of the revolution, and restoring order and work to their proper places. In foreign affairs the Reich needs more manliness, pride and self-consciousness."

The Minister, Dr. von Pregar, was convinced that an amicable arrangement would be reached with Berlin and that the present difficulties with the Central Government would not be fought out along the Bavarian-Thuringian border, but in Wilhelmstrasse.

Chancellor Stresemann is still consulting the party leaders, but there is no sign of the appointment of new ministers. The Government seems more preoccupied with the chaotic financial conditions but it is nonplussed as to what to do.

Dollar Rate Higher.

The arbitrary attempt to fix the dollar rate at 420,000,000,000 marks collapsed to-day, after being maintained for nearly a week, and the rate was increased by fifty per cent., which is still greatly behind the rates quoted abroad. With the object of

BULGAR PRIDE BOWS TO FORCE OF JUGO-SLAVS

National Apology in Sofia For Attack on Jugo-Slavia's Military Attache —Troops on Border.

DAMAGES DEMANDED.

Sofia, Bulgaria, November 7. — The Bulgarian government to-day carried out that part of its program of apologies to Jugo-Slavia for the recent attack on that untry military attache, Colonel Krastich, which was most galling to the national pride .

This consisted in the marching of a company of soldiers, headed by officers, to the gate of the Jugo-Slavian Legation, where, with the Bulgarian flag flying, the regimental band played the Jugo-Slav anthem, and the troops saluted the Jugo-Slav flag.

During the ceremony, the personnel of the Legation, including Col. Krastich, stood on the porch.

The face of Minister Rakitch was wreathed in smiles. During the ten minutes the ceremony lasted the attaches of the Legation were busy snapshotting the scene.

Satisfactory Amends.

Afterwards Minister Rakitch expressed to the corespondent of the Associated Press his satisfaction over the prompt salute of his country's flag. He assured the correspondent that the negotiations concerning the other demands upon Bulgaria were being satisfactorily brought to a conclusion.

From diplomatic sources it was learned this morning that the Jugo-Slavian note was couched in strong terms and that it left no doubt of Jugo-Slavia's determination to exact complete satisfaction for the attack on her military attache within the time limit fixed by the ultimatum.

It was intimated that at the present time many thousands of Serbian troops are close to the border, and within reach of the Pernek coal mine, which is the largest on the Balkan peninsula.

Formal Regrets.

The day's programme of apologies was completed when Premier Zandoff formally called on M. Radkitch, and expressed bulgaria's regret for

New Lamp Burns 94% Air

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U.S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, F. S. Johnson, 246 Craig Street, W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

THE LLOYD GEORGE MODEL.

The visit of David Lloyd George to Canada and the United States, if it has accomplished nothing else, will at least prove worth while, the Examiner hopes, if it has impressed upon our public speakers the fact that it is not necessary to make long speeches to score points to put forth a message or to leave a lasting impression.

The world statesman made in all over seventy speeches during his American tour, and not one of them ran over three-quarters of an hour—most of them, in fact, did not take thirty minutes.

Even his last address, in which he said farewell to America and recapitulated his various references to the world situation, Lloyd George succeeded in compressing his arguments into a speech lasting forty-five minutes.

What a lesson for a lot of our politicians and public speakers who are accustomed to devote an hour and a half to two hours in rambling addresses upon subjects of nothing like the importance discussed by Britain's war Premier!

We suffer on this side of the water from speakers who as suggested by a wag in the House of Commons, are handicapped by "poor terminal facilities."

They don't know when or where or how to stop, and the result is a bored audience and usually a failure on the part of the speaker's hearers to remember the important points he has made.

The adoption of the Lloyd George model would be a splendid thing for Canadian orators, a better thing for Canadian audiences—and, above all, a wonderful boon to Hansard writers and newspaper reporters.

ARMISTICE DAY.

Sunday, November 11th, is Armistice Day, and while the Great War Veterans' Association have taken the lead in arranging a special service in the afternoon, at which Hon. Dr. Beland will be the principal speaker, the Examiner hopes that the observance of this most important anniversary will not be left entirely to the veterans.

The community generally should recognize the significance of the occasion and co-operate loyally in the celebration of the end of the war.

In the first place, the request of His Majesty the King that all flags be flown at the masthead on Armistice Day should be kept in mind.

Last year there was confusion over this point, some ensigns being flown at half-mast as on a day of national mourning.

The King has touched the right string in asking that the occasion be marked as the anniversary of a great victory.

So let us in Peterborough—where, alas, our failure to fly the flag on such days has been commented upon often in the past—see to it on Sunday that the Union Jack is flying from every masthead in the city, a silent message of victory and freedom.

And then there is the two-minute period of silence in memory of the Empire's dead, which, coming as it does this year at the hour when the church services are commencing, will not have the same effect as usual, unless our city churches put into effect the programme adopted by the churches in England, where it has been arranged to begin the morning services at an hour that will make it convenient to observe the two-minute silence in every place of worship throughout the kingdom.

There is no reason why this could not be done by the churches in Peterborough on Sunday morning and an opportunity thus given of honouring the memory of the valiant dead.

Armistice Day is such a significant anniversary that its celebration here should be in keeping with the wonderful recruiting record set up by the men of this city during the war years.

VICTORIA PARK.

The Examiner cannot help feeling that in prohibiting the pupils of the Central School from using Victoria Park, except in mid-winter, when the ground is firmly frozen and covered with snow, the City Council has acted without giving the matter sufficient consideration.

There is no desire to approve of anything that would injure the park, but it has not by any means been convincingly shown that the children have in any way harmed this beauty spot.

In fact, they have been allowed to use the eastern portion of the park for many years without any complaints, and their general conduct has been such as to elicit admiring remarks from many citizens who have noticed how carefully the youngsters avoided the flower beds and how scrupulously they have left the squirrels who frequent the park unmolested.

For this the teaching staff of the Central School deserve great credit for their successful appeal to the better nature of the children, and to them the edict of banishment must come as an unmerited reflection.

The children have been using a portion of the park for a total period of not more than three quarters of an hour each school day, and it is difficult to see how the park has suffered as a result.

On the other hand, the children will materially suffer as a consequence of the ruling inasmuch as the school yard is inadequate for playing purposes for 500 youngsters, and the only alternative with the park out of bounds will be the street—surely not the safest and most desirable recreation grounds for young children.

There are periods in the year, notably in the spring before the ground has dried up, when Victoria Park should be closed to everybody, but outside of those periods the park should be available to the school children, as it has always been, so long as the privilege is not abused.

THE ALBERTA VOTE AND ITS MEANING.....

It will be a great mistake if any one imagines that the vote in Alberta, following that in Manitoba, indicates any lessening of temperance sentiment in Canada, says the Montreal Star. Alberta has not voted for "whiskey." The people out there are no more tolerant of intoxication than they ever were. They do not propose to drink any more intoxicants. They have not voted for easy access to liquor in any form.

What they have voted for is that, if liquor is to be sold in their Province, the profits on its sale shall go to the Province and not to the "boot-legger." They have intelligently recognized the fact—the unpleasant and greatly-to-be-condemned fact—that liquor is sold in spite of the law; and they have with equal intelligence decided that it is most undesirable that the criminals who thus break the law shall be subsidised for their lawlessness.

That is, Alberta has voted against bonusing the "boot-legger." It has voted for lifting the selfish motive out of the sale of liquor. This latter point is well worth considering. Where liquor is vended by a "boot-legger" or by any other private vendor, the seller has a strong pecuniary interest in pushing the sale. Where it is sold by a salaried public official in a Government office, no one makes any money by pushing the sale. Any business man will see the great difference which this makes.

But the decision of Alberta to torpedo the "boot-legger" and put liquor on sale publicly under close restriction, is also a challenge to the temperance people. It will now become possible for the Alberta citizen to buy liquor legally. Hence it becomes doubly imperative for the temperance workers to tell him why he should not buy it.

THE TASK OF THE PROHIBITIONISTS.

Prohibitionists in Alberta—and elsewhere for that matter—are given something to think over by the warning given them by the Montreal Star that the decision of the people of Alberta to put liquor on sale publicly under close restriction is a challenge to the temperance people.

With that view the Examiner is thoroughly in accord.

There is plenty of work for prohibitionists to do in educating the public against the use of liquor; in recent years many temperance leaders have perhaps been inclined to sit back and imagine the law was doing this work for them.

But the law failed to do anything of the kind, and it will now, in Alberta, be succeeded by another policy which will allow liquor to be legally purchased in that Province.

Where does that leave the prohibitionists?

Surely with a clear-cut mandate to redouble their efforts to show the people of Alberta that although the law permits them to buy liquor there are many good reasons why they should not buy it.

In other words, instead of entrusting the machinery of the law with the task of seeing that liquor is kept away from the people, they must by their own efforts do what they can to convince the public that the drinking of liquor is folly and worse.

There have been many warnings given that prohibition could not been enforced with a club.

The law having failed in Alberta, the sincere temperance people will go back to their real mission, that of educating the people against the use of liquor.

Along that road lies success.

RUNNING A PAPER.

Indignant Subscriber. Yes, we'll call him that, because he was both and is still the latter. He entered the sanctum, sat down, pulled the morning paper from his pocket and said, "See how many murders, war rumors and suicides you have this morning! And auto smashes and police news of chasing rum runners. And two fires and a story of the police working on a murder case near Hamilton."

'Twas all true, says the London Advertiser. In defence we had to say something—we didn't commit the murder, had nothing to do with the war, had not committed suicide, had no hand in an auto smash, and were putting up no finances for the rum runners. Simply recording what other people did.

Didn't think much of the defence, shot holes through it and asked for more human, healthy news about well-behaved people. Thus we pen the Life and Adventure of said Indignant Subscriber covering one day.

Seven o'clock, arose, went downstairs and put on the water to make the mush; went to cellar and rattled the furnace, threw on three shovels of coal and noticed how the bin was going down. Went upstairs, shaved, washed back of neck, dressed. Yelled at children several times to hurry up for breakfast.

Went downstairs; picked paper off step and looked at funnies before children came down. Ate. Went to office. Talked to other clerk for half hour, wrote letters, went out. Met friend and talked over local murder trial. Went to cross street, and nearly run down by truck. Back to office and took up half hour telling all hands on deck what a shame it was the way they drove cars, wonder he wasn't killed, police should get in jail. on the job and land some of them

Went home at noon, picked up choice piece of gossip about neighbor who was paying attention to another man's wife, told his wife in full.

Afternoon, played golf and talked to other player about problems of the workers. In office at four, signed letters, asked stenog. if he'd drive her hme. Did so.

Evening. Went to show. Much impressed in fate of villain, clapped hands when hero rescued girl from burning building. Home. Shook furnace, put out milk bottles.

Not bad newspaper copy, is it?

ALFRED WALLACE CUT HIS THROAT

OSHAWA, Nov. 7.—A futile attempt to commit suicide was made here this morning by Alfred Wallace, aged 56, married, with five children. Mr. Wallace shortly after one o'clock got up, and, seizing a butcher knife, gashed a cut three inches long in his throat. This not being successful, he left his home with blooding streaming from the wound and walked to the Tannery bridge and jumped into the creek. The water being only a few feet deep, he was unable to drown.

He then walked back to his home and aroused his wife, who telephoned the police. Sergeant C. Taxton responded and had the man taken to the local General Hospital. His condition is not serious. When he recovers he will face a charge of attempting suicide.

ENGLAND LACKS DENTISTS.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—(Associated Press)—There are 3,000,000 children in England and Wales who need dental treatment, and it has been said recently by an insurance concern that bad teeth are the direct cause of most of the general debility and minor illnesses which exist today. England has only 117 dentists to every million of population which is far from enough.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, November 8.—Tuesday's total cattle receipts amounted to 1,161, and this to the carry-over totalled nearly 3,400. As only 2,013 were weighed, there was still left about 1,400 and 500 were added yesterday morning.

Receipts of all kinds yesterday were; 501 cattle, 222 calves, 2,470 hogs, and 2,875 sheep and lambs.

With Monday a holiday salesmen are exerting every effort to sell the market out this week, but they are up against a tough proposition. One abattoir received 45 loads of cattle from the West direct yesterday, and commission men say that as long as the Western cattle are available the packers will have very little use for this market except for the choice beeves.

Exporters were buying short keeps yesterday morning from $5.00 to $6.00 a cwt., and paid $5.60 for one nice even load. Butchers' steers that are poor breeds and unfinished are a difficult sale. Packers' buyers are bidding a dollar a cwt. lower on these at 4c a pound, but they are failing to get them. One heavy load of Western steers was sold by J. Wilson at 5c, and another not so heavy, at 4 1-2c, and a load of Western cows in good condition at 4c. Heavy shipments are again reported in the Winnipeg market, and many of these are expected to come East.

Lambs looked heavy at yesterday morning's opening. Packing houses' killing space is filled with direct shipments from the Ottawa Valley, and they are therefore indifferent buyers. Yesterday's lambs were heavy and rough coated, and were not within nearly a dollar a cwt. of Monday's lambs. There were also 1,000 on the market that were shipped here after being on the Montreal market. Some loads sold yesterday morning at 10 3-4c a pound, but others were expected to go at 10 1-2c a pound. Choice light lambs brought 11 to 11 1-4c.

Hog buyers were all bidding lower prices yesterday, and salesmen were not confident. Country points report prices anywhere from $8.00 to $8.75 a cwt. f.o.b., and it was hard to get a settled price here. The best guess seems to be $8.00 to $8.25 a cwt. f.o.b. for the thick smooth.

WINNIPEG, November 8 (Canadian Press). — Receipts, 2,170 cattle and calves, 1,565 hogs, and 300 sheep and lambs.

Trading was again light on the cattle market yesterday morning, and prices were steady to slightly lower.

The hog market was steady at $8.00 for thick smooths and $8.80 for select bacons.

Sheep and lambs declined about 50 cents with top lambs quoted at $10.50 ,and sheep from $6.00 to $6.50.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, November 8 (Canadian Press). — With the corn market scoring a big advance, wheat yesterday showed power to recover from declines. Closing prices for wheat were unsettled at a range varying from 3-8c lower to 1-4c higher, December $1.05 5-8 to $1.05 3-4 and ay $1.11 to $1.11 1-8.

Corn finished 1 3-8c to 2c to 2 1-8c up; oats at 1-8c to 1-4c to 14c to 3-8c advance; and provisions with 12c to 30c gain.

Aside from the corn strength, wheat at first was bullishly affected here by an unexpected upturn in wheat quotations at Liverpool, as well as by a bulge in the cotton market at New York. Wheat selling here, however, increased when prices advanced. The result of the enlarged selling was a material setback in values about mid-session, but the strong upward swing of the corn market was subsequently a decided counter influence, and wheat was rallying again as the day ended, with gossip afloat that the surplus of wheat in exporting countries had been considerably over-estimated.

Although talk about the likelihood of President Coolidge asking Congress to appropriate money to buy wheat and flour for relief work in Germany had some effect as a bullish factor, the late rally in the wheat market was due chiefly to the sustained advance of corn. Assertions that large numbers of vessels were taking on grain cargoes in Russian ports and that the Argentine wheat crop outlook was promising, failed to keep the wheat market down.

Active general buying of corn took place owing mainly to scantiness of receipts and to predictions that the Government report to-day would suggest a crop and carry-over less than th average. December delivery of corn rose to within a fracion of the season's top prices.

Oats sympathised with corn.

Provisions were advanced by the lift in the corn, hog, and cotton seed oil prices.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, November 8 (Canadian Press). — Cattle, receipts 15,000; desirable beef heifers and highly finished weighty steers were steady; steers, $12.00, weight 1,477 pounds; top long yearlings, $12.00; stockers and feeders, $5.50 to $7.00; fairly active, strong.

ogs, receipts 31,000; strong to 10c higher; bulk desirable 210 to 340 pound butchers, $7.20 to $7.45.

Sheep, receipts 14,000; fat lambs mostly 10c to 25c lower; bulk good and choice fat lambs, $12.25 to $12.75; heavy fat ewes, $4.75 to $5.25.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—(Canadian Press)—A weaker feeling developed in the cash grain market yesterday and prices were down one cent a bushel for all grades. A fair amount of business continues in the flour market. The tone of the millfeed market is steady and trade in rolled oats is fair. A firm feeling prevails in the baled hay market. There was no change in the local egg market. The potato market was without development. The tone of the butter market was firm. Prices were down ¼ to ¾ cents per pound for cheese on an easier market.

It is understood Krastitch rates his damages highly. No trace has been found of the men who attacekd the military attache, though the Bulgarian Government is exerting every effort to find them.

A LARGE NUMBER KILLED IN RIOT

WARSAW, November 7 (Canadian Press). — Twenty-two persons have been killed and threescore wounded in riots and bombings growing out of the strike of railway workers.

Disorders occurred despite the agreement of the Socialists to call off the strike in return for the Government's promise to withdraw the military from the railroads.

The most serious riot was at Cracow, where the crowd surrounded and disarmed a company of infantry.

The men were rescued by a cavalry charge, in which twenty persons were killed.

Most of the dead were soldiers, including three officers.

Cracow has been scene of Communist propaganda of the most active sort directed, according to the Government, by outside leaders.

A bomb exploded in Warsaw yesterday morning in the headquarters of the Socialists, killing the porter and wounding the janitor.

The city was alarmed by the disturbance, but no further trouble occurred.

HOW BECHUANALAND BECAME A BRITISH PROTECTORATE

The Story of a Heathen Prince Who Became a Christian King Brought His Country to Prosperity and Lived Long in the Land.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 7.—Rev. Joseph Wilks gave a most interesting address in the Young Peoples' League on Monday evening, the subject being, "The Story of an African Boy," in the telling of which the reason why Bechuanaland, in West Africa, became a British Protectorate was explained. Rev. Mr. Wilks spent four years in West Africa as a missionary in the earlier days of his ministry and so is well qualified to speak of conditions there.

Bechuanaland lies north of Cape Colony and has an area of 125,000 square miles; a number of tribes inhabit the country, among them being the Zulus, and Kaffirs, the latter a tall, stalwart, bold and heroic people, showing at times a kindness of disposition toward an enemy which one would hardly expect in a heathen tribe. The king of Bechuanaland was a witch doctor, nearly one hundred years ago, and his son, a boy of thirteen or fourteen years, come under the influence and teaching of Dr. Livingstone, Robert Moffatt, and other missionaries and having a keen desire to learn and live a righteous life, was helped by their teaching and the enlightment of the Spirit of God, to become converted, baptized, and to join the Christian church, Khama, though opposed by his father, held fast to the faith, and won other young people of his tribe to Christ. He married a naitve Christian girl, and though the custom of the country was to practice polygamy and this was his father's determination for him also, he steadfastly refused to possess himself of more than one wife.

Prayer Was Answered.

A rumour brought news one day of the approach of the Matabeles, a war-like neighboring tribe, and the people knowng the custom of these enemies, if victorious, of putting to death men, women, and children in a conquered village, fled many of them to the hills for refuge taking what cattle they could with them for food. A frantic appeal was made to the witch doctor, and their native gods, for deliverence but in vain. Gathering a few faithful friends about him, Khama prayed earnestly to God for guidance and victory and, with two hundred chosen warriors, went out to meet the Matabeles. His prayers were answered for enemy was utterly put to rout and he returned home victorious. The people acclaimed him a hero and gave honour to the God with whom he had interceded and who had accomplished the defeat of their cruel foes. Soon afterward, the old king died and Khama became ruler. He immediately instituted a number of reforms among them the prohibition of withcraft, and the banishment of all witch doctors, the barbarous custom of burying a baby alive with its dead mother was done away with, while the habit of torturing prisoners, the manufactur, sale, and importation of intoxicating liquors, the cruel practice of casting old people, or deformed children out to be destroyed by the wolves, were made illegal. Khana introduced the practice of setting the prisoners to work, and made trial by jury the law of his land.

Prosperity Came.

Commercially the country prospered under his wise rule. He built up a new capital city with fine, large business blocks, and many industrial establishments. A handsome, stone church, splendidly equipped, and costing $15,000 which he and his people built without any outside assistance, and still in use, is perhaps his highest achievement. But his neighbours, the Matabeles, Germans, and the Boers cast envious eyes upon his country because of its prosperity, and Khana wrote a letter to Queen Victoria, then upon the English throne, asking her to take Bechuanaland under the protection of Britain. The Government received his sequest favourbaly and this large territory in West Africa became a British Protectorate and has remained so ever since.

Died This Year.

The capital city has a population of 25,000, the king's palace is a beautiful residence, and all the blessings of civilization are enjoyed because of one boy giving his heart to God in his early teens and continuing faithful in spite of opposition which we, in more favored lands, can scarcely comprehend. On February 21st, 1923, King Khama died, at the extreme age of ninety-four years, after serving God for nearly eighty years and winning many of his subjects to Christianity also. It is unique in the history of heathenism that anyone lives to such an age as this king did. The superstition, ignorance and unsanitary conditions of life tend to shorten the days of those who live under such unfavorable conditions, but apparently Khama's allegiance to Christianity won for him the keeping of the promise, "With long life will I satisfy him, and show him my salvation."

The sheaf of Christmas greetings which the League, under the direction of Mrs. G. W. Sayles, missionary vice-president, is sending to their representative in China, Rev. E. and Mrs. Hibbard, and family, was added to on Monday evening as it must be completed and started on its long journey by the end of this week. A loose leaf booklet of fine linen notepaper, with dainty hand-painted cover, each leaf containing a personal message from the several officers and members of the League, is the form in which the greetings are being sent.

BAILIEBORO TO HAVE NEW CLUB

BAILIEBORO, Nov. 7. — On Monday evening a meeting of the young people of the community was held in the U.F.O. Hall, Centreville, for the purpose of organizing a United Farm Young People's Association.

On account of the disagreeable weather the attendance was not so large as expected, but those who were present appeared anxious to organize a young people's club, and so it turned out to be a lively meeting.

Mr. W. H. Barnard, president of the Centreville U.F.O. Club, occupied the chair, and was assisted by Rev. A. H. McConnachie, both making brief addresses along the lines of the benefit such an organization would prove to the young people of the community if they would only take an interest in the progress of the club, and help it along in every way.

The following officers were elected: Douglas Deyell, president; Harold Bebee, vice-president; Miss Kathleen Isbister, secretary-treasurer, and Miss Connie McConnachie, assistant. Rev. A. H. McConnachie, honorary president.

It was decided to hold their first fortnightly meeting November 16, and it is hoped a large crowd of young people will be present to help out with the meeting and also to plan for meetings of the future.

The farmers throughout the country are busily engaged with their fall ploughing. GRAPES ABOUND IN BULGARIA.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 8.—(Associated Press)—Local winemakers are dismayed at the prospect of an abundance of grapes this year, for a good harvest will force down the price of wine.

Last year's crop is still unsold; and today the casks are worth more than the wine itself.

Shut the Car Doors

The danger that may arise through leaving the door of a moving car on the swing was shown in a lakefront town one day recently when a ten-year-old boy, who was standing by the curbing was struck on the face by a swinging door of a passing motor car, was thrown to the ground and injured about the face. It is further stated that the occupants of the car did not stop, but looked back and afterwards slammed the door shut.

HONOR MEMORY OF CHURCHMAN

George McQueen Left the Stamp of Rare Personality on Marmora Friends

MARMORA, Nov. 7.—On Monday evening a memorial service was held in the Presbyterian church in memory of the late George McQueen. The church was crowded with the old friends and acquaintances of Mr. McQueen. The Deloro choir led in the hymns for the service. The psalm and hymns chosen were those sung at Mr. McQueen's funeral. The Rev. Mr. Jull, of Lakes field, conducted the service. He centred his words around the thought contained in Hebrews 11:4. "He being dead yet speaketh." Mr. McQueen, in the twenty-five years of his life spent in Marmora, filled almost every office possible in the Presbyterian church He was caretaker, Bible Class teacher, superintendent of the Sunday School, treasurer of the church, leader in song, and for several years he fulfilled the duties of pastor. He was a man of quiet tastes and always feared publicity. Mr. Jull mentioned some of the traits of character which formed this personality for Mr. McQueen was different to any other man. His kindness, his love for children, these won the love of his friends. His clean speech and clean thought won their respect. Mr. McQueen was always prompt, yes, he was always ahead of time for an engagement.

Mr. Jull said that though dead there were three things of which the memory of Mr. McQueen still spoke.

First, he speaks of the value of a clean life. Anyone whose life was not clean fell in the estimation of Mr. McQueen. His life was perfectly clean and there is no part of it which could not be made public.

He speaks of the value of service. Mr. McQueen served his church here to his utmost ability. He tried to serve the students who were sent here as pastors by showing them their mistakes and by correcting them. He gave of himself and he gave of his money, perhaps more than anyone ever suspected because he never wanted praise for his work. During the war he was not acetpted for active service so he did his best here in his own town.

Mr. McQueen speaks of the value of religion. He was not narrow in his ideas of religion but his sympathies were worldwide. Many of the young people of this town can remember, perhaps, how gently Mr. McQueen led them on to a realization of the love of Christ. His whole life shows us how much value there is in his religion.

Rev. Mr. Jull as a personal friend of Mr. McQueen, recalled many incidents in his life which came to his mind. The service was simple but it was intentionally so on account of the humble traits of the one in whose memory it was held.

On Monday, the 29th October, he became worse and died. The funeral service was held on Thursday, November 1, in the Anglican church. The service was conducted by the Rev. THIEVES RAID OMEMEE HOMES

Chickens, Grain and Preserved Fruit Recently Carried Off — Shot Was Fired.

OMEMEE, Nov. 7.—Petty thieving is not on the wane as yet, and it is getting to the stage where householders are afraid to leave their homes for fear "the meanest man or men" in the community should pay a visit while they are absent. Within the past few days, the cellar of Mrs. S. Connell was raided and practically all their fruit and pickles stolen.

Mr. Alex. Lang and sons were recently aroused by the barking of their dog. Mr. Lang fired a couple of shots which had the desired effect on the would-be marauders.

Mr. Garnet Shields had 30 choice chickens stolen and two bags of grain recently, and continually other thefts are being heard of.

Naturally the indignation of the whole countryside is at fever heat. A few days ago a resident of the village while traversing a lonely section of the country espied something protruding from a clump of bushes. On investigation he found between twenty and thirty bags of what looked very much like red clover seed. To make sure, a sample was brought to the village and on inspection by the local seed dealer, was found to be screenings or refuse, which had been dumped there, although it contained a good percentage of the real thing.

PREFERENCE EXTENDED BY BRITAIN ON MANY PRODUCTS OF EMPIRE

Canned Salmon, Apples and Honey on Free List—Preference on Tobacco Increased — Hon. G. P. Graham Defends Canadian Manufactories.

FISCAL AUTONOMY.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—(Associated Press and Canadian Press).—The Imperial Economic Conference today reached another stage on the road to imperial preference by approving a further extension of the preference method offered by Sir Philip Lloyd-Greame, President of the Board of Trade, in behalf of the Government.

The conference decided in favor of a tax of ten shillings per hundred weight on importations of foreign canned salmon, while allowing Empire products free entry.

The conference also favored increasing the preference on tobacco by one-fourth the present duty. A tax of six pence per gallon on foreign fruit juice, including lime juice, was decided upon and also a tax of ten shillings per hundredweight on foreign honey with Empire products free and five shillings per hundred weight on foreign fresh apples, Empire apples free.

The conference decided against an attempt to increase Empire trade by means of subsidies import licenses or stabilization of prices.

The food and materials committee had previously decided against such measures as impracticable, it being held that the difficulties of any government in interfering with trade were almost insurmountable.

Throughout the discussion emphasis was laid on the principle that the home Government and each Dominion must control their own fiscal policies.

With regard to the tobacco increase the preference is from one-sixth to onefourth. It was pointed ou that the whole basis in considering these questions was whether Dominion trade can expand rapidly enough to supply all British needs, and in the case of apples it was stated that the supply would easily equal the demand. It was also understood that all the preference proposals thus far made would be accepted by the British Parliament.

The conference unanimously adopted a program reaffirming the preference resolution of the Imperial War Conference of 1917, and another resolution reaffiming the principle that in all Government contracts effecive preference should ge given to Empire products and matrials.

Welcomed By Canada

The preference to be given canned salmon and apples is particularly welcome by the Canadian delegates. They feel it will be a great stimulus to apple growers throughout Dominion as well as encouragement to the salmon canneries on the Pacific coast whose products are to enter the British market free while the foreign competitor is taxed.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham, is expressing thanks on behalf of Canada, observed that if Great Britain decided to make far-reaching changes in her fiscal police "Canada will naturally expect that in the establishment of a tariff full and adequate consideration would be given through preferential duties to the interests of Canada's producers and to the substantial preferences which Canada accords to British goods."

"If a general tariff was to be established by Britain and reciprocal trade arrangements negotiated with foreign countries it was plain, Mr. Graham said that bargaining on a business basis would tend to become the rule inside as well as outside the Empire, though it was to be hoped it would not involve any lessening of the forces of sentiment and impartial policy which annimated the proposals of the British Government

Wheat and Flour

The elimination of wheat from the preferential scheme as indicated in Premier Baldwin's speeches would restrict the value of the preference to Canadian producers. Mr. Graham added but Canada freely recognized it was for Great Britain to decide what was best for her own people. Referring to flour he said the effect of a duty would depend very largely on the extent to which the Canadiian miller would be put in a less advantageous position than the British miller. A duty that was protectionist, rather han preferential would not be as advantageous to the Canadian millers as the existing situaton. This would be the case also with other commodities. Mr. Graham further mentioned a large number of Canadian products such as fresh fruits, lumber, newsprint, iron and steel products and dairy products and dairy produce for considerdation in event Great Britain imposed preferential duties. He challenged the view current that Canadian manufactured goods were merely assembled in Canada. They were there fore entitled to preference. "This conception," declared Mr. Graham, "is wholly erroneous. It could not survive a visit to Canada's manufacturing centres."

Hon. H. Burton, minister of finace, South Africa asked if canned salmon would include canned crayfish. Sir Philip Lloyd-Greame promised to see what could be done in the matter.

Develop Empire Resources

The discussion concluded by passing a resolution that the conference holding that "especially under present circumstances all possible means should be taken to develop the resources of the Empire and trade between Empire countries, desires to reaffirm the resolution on the subject of imperial preference passed by the Imperial War Conference in 1917." A resolution was also passed favouring preference to Empire products in carrying out public contracts unless special circumstances rendered it undesirable or unnecessary.

The conference further concurred in a report of a special committee which found impracticable three suggestions submitted by Premier Bruce of Australia for investigation, namely subsidies where required to British agriculture, Dominion producer import licensing system to discriminate against foreign imports and the stabilization of prices. At the same time the committte strongly recommended the closest co-operation between the Empire governments and between producers' organizations, both here and in the dominions, in concerting in the carrying out of any action possible for improving the marketing of Empire agricultural products.

The Present Trade

OTTAWA, Nov. 7.—(Canadian Press). — Announcement that the imperial economic conference has decided in favor of taxing foreign canned salmon, fresh apples and honey entering the United Kingdom while empire products will be admitted free directs attention to Canada's trade in these commodities. For the twelve months ending September 30, last the Dominion export ed 93,249 cwt of canned salmon valued at $2,092,764 to the mother country. In the month of September alone, 10,617 cwt of canned salmon valued at $247,714 was exported by Canada to the United Kingdom. The total exports of canned salmon to all countries during the twelve month period was 323,106 cwt. valued at $4,808,831.

Exports of fresh apples to the United Kingdom during the twelve months ending September 30 last to talled 1,323,841 barrels valued at $5,824,988. In the month of September alone, 3,954 barrels of fresh apples valued at $18,287 were exported to Great Britain. The total exports of fresh Canadian apples to all countries during the twelve months was 1,456,560 barrels with a valuation of $6,424,526.

WINTER WHEAT RESISTANT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(Associated Press)—Development of a new variety of winter wheat which is resistant to bunt or smut is announced by the Department of Agriculture. It has been named "Ridit" because it is expected to rid the wheat fields of smut. The variety was developed by Dr. E. F. Gaines of the Washington agricultural experiment station at Pullman, Wash., in co-operation with the Department of Agriculture. It was bred through crossing Turkey and Florence varieties, the latter a smut resisting spring wheat from Australia. Ridit has been found better adapted for the more humid regions than for semiarid regions. A few hundred farmers in eastern Washington planted Ridit this fall to give it a more complete trial than it has had in experiments.

Aliens Crowd Jails in Northern New York.

MONTREAL, November 8. — Aliens barred from the United States as immigrants under the Quota Law, are endeavoring to smuggle themselves into that country to a very large extent at the present time. The local United States immigration office states that these immigrants are mostly from Europe, and many are from the United Kingdom. All the jails in Northern New York are filled with such aliens, it is reported by United States Court Commissioner Patterson at Plattsburgh, where the county jail with provisions for 30 prisoners, is congested with 57 smuggled aliens.

Similar conditions are stated to be prevalent in the other United States border states.

Sterling Down To Year's Low Price

New York, November 9. — Demand sterling touched another low price for the year in the foreign exchange market to-day, being quoted at one time at $4.44 1-8, where it was nearly two points below Monday's price.

Bankers said the market was heavy because of the offering of an unusually large number of sterling bills. They stated there was little rallying power at this time and that any offering of sterling bills influenced a downward trend.

WELLAND MAN IS HELD ON CHARGE OF SLAYING WIFE

Dr. English of the Hamilton Asylum Declared Stewart Was Undoubtedly Sane.

WELLAND, Ont., Nov. 8.—The hearing of the medical testimony as to the sanity of the prisoner and the argument of counsel took up the entire second day of the trial of Herschell Stewart, charged with the murder of his wife in Thorold township last June.

Doctors Binns, Read and Colbeck called by the defence, in support of a plea of insanity, were subjected to a gruelling cross examination by A. C. Kingstone, Crown Prosecutor, who called Dr. English of the Hamilton Asylum in rebuttal, who declared that Stewart was undoubtedly sane but was dirty and lazy. The case was adjourned at 7 o'clock last night until to-day when Justice Rose will deliver his charge to the jury.

BRITISH AGREE TO RUM SEARCH

The Imperial Conference Accepts Original Proposals of U. S. Secretary Hughes.

LONDON, November 8 (Canadian Press) — Rum-running by British vessels within range of the United States shores, which has been so provocative of United States resentment against Great Britain, received its death-blow from the Imperial Conference yesterday.

In its closing session the Conference accepted in modified form the original proposals of Secretary of State Hughes for checking this traffic.

The question is now out of the hands of the Imperial Conference delegates, and a formal treaty vesting the United States with authority for the search and seizure of British ships suspected of carrying contraband alcohol within stipulated steaming distance of the United States shore is nearing completion at the hands of Foreign Office legal experts.

Approval Assured.

A complete understanding has been reached between the State Department at Washington and the British Foreign Office regarding the main clauses of the document, and there appears o be no serious obstacle to its early acceptance by both Governments.

The treaty will confer reciprocal rights on Great Britain in the shape of granting authority to its ocean passenger liners to bring legitimate liquor stores into United States ports under seal, when intended for outbound consumption.

Lord Curzon, the Foreign Secretary, is now communicating with Secretary Hughes with the object of perfecting the treaty's constitutional features and making it proof against attack in Congress or elsewhere

WARRANT NEEDED IN LIQUOR SEARCH.

Manitoba Decision Affects Thirty Temperance Act Cases.

WINNIPEG, November 8 (Canadian Press). — Not less than thirty Temperance Act cases, about a dozen of them involving liquor selling hotels, are affected by a decision handed down yesterday by the Manitoba Court of Appeal ruling it illegal for police officers in search of liquor to invade premises or arrest individuals without a warrant.

Police admit that it will add to the difficulties—already greatly increased by the Government Liquor Control Act—of enforcing the Manitoba Temperance Act.

Attorneys predict that the defendants in most of the cases which have been hanging on the Police Court docket for some time awaiting the Appeals Court decision, will be discharged.

The Appeal Court's ruling is sweeping, and states definitely that in cases where alleged liquor law violators resist arrest without warrant, the onus of justifying his course will rest on the police officer involved.

Aftermath of Chautauqua.

Twenty one of the leading business men of Campbellford are absolutely 'young lady shy', according to their own report. A beguiling young lady ahead of the late Chautauqua programme induced them to go into the scheme, with the result that each of the number is out of pocket to the extent of eleven or twelve dollars or thereabouts. The Chautauqua, although pronounced as excellent by those who patronized it did not have a large enough sale of tickets to re-imburse the guarantors. A somewhat humorous twist to the entire affair was the discovery by the group of gentlemen who fathered the presentation that they were each one singly liable for the amount of the guarantee note of $490.

Work on the new dam Number Nine is proceeding apace. A gang of between two and three hundred men many recruited from the town itself are at work on the construction, the contract for which is in the hands of the Lumsden Engineering and Transport Company of Toronto.

The brickwork is finished the electricians are busy inside, with conduits n place in the upper storey the boilers are being cased in the lathers and plasterers and glaziers are expected on the job next week. To-day, the flag-pole, a towering affair of twenty-eight feet in length, will be placed directly at the central front of the building.

POSTPONE TRIAL OF KLUX KNIGHTS

Bastrop, La., Nov. 7. — Judge Fred C. Odom, late to-day announced indefinite postponement of the trial of all the hooded band misdemeanor charges scheduled for this week, and dismissed all the witnesses until further notice.

The judge took under advisement a motion by the defence that he disqualify himself and permit another judge to try the remaining cases. He will make his decision to-morrow.

State Attorney Garrett said after adjournment that he believed it would be at least three weeks before the trials will be resumed.

Down the obliging long street of Campbellford, the thoroughfare that started out in life to be Sebastopol street, presumably named in memory of the famous Crimean town, then changed its mind when it got to the Methodist church, and decided to go ahead and immortalize the name of old Captain Tice, finally settling down farther along into the unromantic Bridge street, one meets many of the polite folk of the busy little town. Walking in the rain they salute one, young and old, with a pleasant smile and word, and no one seems to be too hurried here to answer an enquiry along the line of possible location of some person who lives in the unnumbered houses on the winding streets. Even the house dogs are friendly in Campbellford, and seem to wag much more than bark, and a small family of tiny Manx kittens, with button tails, will follow one for blocks if not remonstrated with.

In the windows, one encounters Spark Plug and his owner, a gay little red and gold Egyptian lady stands on a new dance record, presumably an Egyptian melody, and a scarlet lei of Hawaiian source lies carelessly over a Hawaiian guitar.

LAKES PAPER CO. ERECT NEW PLANT

FORT WILLIAM, Nov. 8.—Erection of the huge plant of the Great Lakes Paper Co. at the western limits of Fort William has passed the principle stages and actual work is under way on the foundation. With a continuation of good weather the work will be so well advanced by Christmas that it can be carried forward all winter, as is the present intention.

In the meantime the hydro commission is carrying forward the work of delivering hydro power, a big block of it, at the sub-station from which the new plant will be served. An authentic version of the disturbance at Cracow says it began Tuesday morning, when in spite of the prohibition upon street meetings a huge crowd gathered and soldiers and police were sent to disperse the throng. The crowd met the soldiers with cries of "Long Live Pilsudski!", upon which the soldiers sided with the demonstrators, leaving the police dominated by the crowd.

Resisted Cavalry

General Gzekiel commanding the Cracow military forces, sent to the scene a squadron of cavalry which the manifestants resisted and the firing ensued.

The officers killed were Captain Boobenek leader of the cavalry squadron and two of his subordinates.

A second squadron dispatched failed to clear the streets. Then General Gzekiej sent a tank equipped with machine guns. The rebellious crowd took possession of the tank and obtained control of the largest part of the city ordering the general to withdraw all the military forces from the city to their barracks.

Arms Surrendered

General Gzekiel complied with the demand and the city remained in the hands of the rebels until the arrival of troops sent by the Warsaw Government. The troops reached the city late in the day and by evening, according to the latest advices from Cracow, had suceeded in completely restoring order.

The Goverment has sent General Zeligowski, the hero of Vilna, to replace General Gzekel in command of the troops. He succeeded in inducing the Laborites to turn over all their arms, and it is expected that by to-morrow the city will be normal again.

LUMBER DEALERS OPPOSED TO EMBARGO ON PULPWOOD

Comparatively Little Demand For Poplar In Canada—2,000 Fires Extinguished This Year By Rangers.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 8.—(Canadian Press.)—Any present embargo on the export of Canadian pulpwood was unqaulifiedly opposed by a number of lumber dealers and contractors yesterday before the Royal Commission investigating the Canadian pulp and paper industry. These witnesses were engaged in purchasing wood from farmers and settlers, which they in turn exported to paper concerns in the United States. It was brought out that from 80 to 95 per cent. of this wood is poplar for which, it was claimed, there is no demand in Canada.

Frank Cahill, M.P. for Pontiac County, also appeared before the Commission and voiced opposition to the embargo. He claimed that settlers in the Abitibi District depended upon the money secured for their wood until such time as a fair area of their land had been cleared.

Montreal Hunter Was Victim of Own Rifle.

MONTREAL, November 8. — Geo Lefrancois, aged 35, of this city, who died at Nominingue, a fortnight ago, from the effects of a bullet wound, was the victim of an accident, according to the verdict given in the coroner's court here yesterday afternoon. The case was the outcome of a hunting accident on the shore of Lac Noir, near Nominingue, on October 19th, when Lefrancois was fatally wounded by a bullet from his own rifle, while accompanied by Mrs Isaie Dugas, a young woman of Montreal. After the accident she carried him to a boat and rowed him across the lack to the nearest doctor. He died on Oct. 24.

THE SKELETON CASE IS DOWN TO ONE THEORY

Detectives Seek Mother of Violet Mary Starry—Will Search in Smaller Towns.

ELIMINAEE NAMES

READING, Nov. 8.—Police investigating the case of the body of a woman found on Neversink Mountain to-day are convinced that it was not a suicide and that she was not a resident of Reading.

'We must look other places for a clue," they said. The theory that the woman was Mrs. Grace McBride, of Pittsburgh, has been discredited. A newspaper published in that city was found near the body, but the description of the body does not tally with that of Mrs. McBride. The police are now directing their attention to small cities and towns in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Deleware.

One theory is that the woman was German. The ring found on the skeleton is not marked 'S.Y. to L.N.' but "S.Y.L.N.", which fact is interpreted as showing that either the owner of the ring or possibly some man or woman who gave it to the wearer had four names in the German fashion. Other Europeans sometimes bear four names, but the custom is more common in Germany.

Today detectives went to Mount Carmel to interview the mother of Violet May Starry who is reported to have left Reading last summer. They believe that the evidence they have might fit in with the description of Miss Starry. If this clue fa they have no other.

Miss Starry is a Polish woman, who was known to George Kazarak. His name card was found near the body and he was questioned by the police. He is said to have given much information about the Starry woman that may prove valuable. Miss Starry lived in the southern section of the city and has not been heard of either at her place of employment or at her boarding house since the early part of September. She was married and formerly lived in Utica, N.Y.

The case affords less material for the police to work upon than any other murder mystery they ever handled. The vicinity of the place where the skeleton was found shows evidence of a struggle. Half a dozen persons residing near the foot of Neversink Mountain, when questioned again to-day, insisted that they had heard screams late at night about seven weeks ago. Examination of the woman's skull shows plain evidence that it was crushed by a blunt instrument.

AMERICA A LAND OF MAKE BELIEVE

And U. S. Has No Sense of Shame, Says English Visitor.

NEW YORK, November 8.—Canadian Press. — Addressing the League for Political Education yesterday, Israel Scangwill, an English man of letters, gave his audience his opinion of the United States. Among things he said were:

"There are more cranks in a square mile in the United States than in any other country in the world."

"There is more honor justice and dignity in England than in the United States."

"The Ku Klux Klan which is a sort of exaggerated Boy Scout movement would be laughed out of existence anywhere else but the United States has no sense of humor."

"The United States has no sense of shame. A Sunday newspaper weighs four pounds. The world was better off when the people read the Bible and Shakespeare."

"This country has the most half-educated people in the world. It is a land of make believe."

WILL EXPLAIN USES OF FLAGS

Veterans' Alliance Wish to Impress Citizens With Sense of Respect.

OTTAWA Nov. 8.— The Dominion Veterans' Alliance will undertake to make widely known(throughout Canada the proper uses of the Canadian and British flags and impress upon citizens the respect which their country's flag merits.

This decision was made at the closing session of the Dominion Council of the alliance here yesterday afternoon. A protest from Winnipeg veterans pointing out that official flags had not been half-masted upon the death of one of the empire's first citizens, Bonar Law, brought about the discussion.

Delegates cited various instances of the misuse of the flag. One of the more common errors was in using the flag as a table cloth. Another reported that it was frequently flown upside down.

A carefully prepared circular will be broadcasted among units of veterans' organizations, schools and elsewhere showing the proper uses of the flag.

Independent Official

A resolution of protest was passed against the alleged efforts of the department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment to have the soldiers' advisers recently appointed by the federal government, regarded somewhat as officials of the department, with offices in connection with departmental unit offices. The resolution declared that the soldiers' advisers were appointed to provide a medium by which the individual seeking adjustment of his claim for pension, treatment etc., might secure independent advice and assistance in the prosecution of the claim. This, it was declared would be impossible if supervised by departmental officials.

Commendation for the extensive adjustment and legislative service with the G.W.V.A. has borne on behalf of all veterans and dependents was voiced by the alliance in another resolution. The necessity of carrying on this work was emphasized and sympathy was expressed with any efforts that might be made by made by the G.W.V.A. to adequately finance the enterprise. It was declared that this service is one of the vital factors in laying the foundation for an amalgamation of veterans' organizations in Canada.

Lax Examination

Lax medical examination of ex-soldier immigrants from the British Isles was declared to be responsible for a considerable number of men being allowed to enter Canada whose disabilities were such as to prohibit them from earning an adequate living. A resoluton was passed urging the immigration authorities to have a more strict examination of those about to leave the Old Country in future. Several pitiable cases of disabled imperial veterans who were subsequently deported under humiliating conditions, were cited.

Major F. G. Taylor K.C. D.S.O. Portage La Prairie, was re-elected chairman of the alliance; Gordon McNichol, D.C.M. of Hamilton, vice-chairman; and C. G. MacNeil, Ottawa, secretary. Mr. MacNeill was also re-elected as chairman of the legislative committee which will prepare and present the legislative program to parliament on behalf of all veterans' organizations.

The next meeting of the Dominion Council will be held in Winnipeg. The session which closed last evening extended over three days and was declared by those attending as having been productive of good results in the interests of all veterans in Canada.

FIGHT HIGHER EXPRESS RATES

Council of Agriculture Will Press For Reduction When Question Opened.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 8.—The application of the Express Traffic Association of Canada for an increase in rates will be opposed by many trade organizations throughout western Canada when it is dealt with by the Board of Railway Commissioners at various western sessions, the first of which will open at Edmonton on Nov. 26. Not only will the Boards of Trade and other business associations oppose the request for higher express rates, but the provincial governments will co-operate against the increase, and the Canadian Council of Agriculture, will, it is understood, enter opposition against it and ask for a reduction in rates.

The whole question will be dealt with by the Council of Agriculture at a meeting here next week. Producers are affected by increases stated John Ward, secretary of the council to-day as they ship cream, eggs, poultry and pure breed live stock by express.

"It is more or less generally recognized," said Mr. Ward, "that the express companies put in this application for an increase in order to stave off an application for a decrease, which has been impending for some time Our efforts will not only be directed to opposing the increase but we will endeavor also to get this decrease."

Skull Fractured By Fall During Scuffle.

Montreal, November 8. — When Vicenzo Lavoro, alias Jimmy Labrey, fell on the pavement near the corner of St. Columban and Wellington streets on August 6th last, following a scuffle, his skull was fractured at the back from ear to ear, according to the evidence of Dr. D. D. Mactaggart, the court autoist, during the trial in the court of King's Bench here yesterday of Gerald McAleer, charged with manslaughter.

There was some doubt as to whether the injury was caused wnen Lavoro was thrown to the ground by the accused or whether it occurred after he had fallen a second time some distance from the scene of the encounter.

The trial was adjourned until tomorrow morning for further evidence.

PRESS COMMENT ON RESURRECTION OF JOHN BARLEYCORN IN ALBERTA

The Calgary Herald.

The most satisfactory feature of the vote was that it was uniformly in favor of government control and sale. The government was given a clear and positive mandate by all classes and by all sections to bring in a new law that will place the control and sale of liquor in its care.

Winnipeg Tribune.

There is left no room for doubt that at present Alberta people want the sale of liquor resumed for reasons sufficient and satisfactory to themselves.

In five years the people there will have a better understanding of the liquor question than they have today, and will be able to vote if called upon with reasonably clear judgment as to the relative merits of prohibition and government control.

Prince Albert Herald.

The result of the liquor referendum in Alberta yesterday has placed Saskatchewan in a splendid position of isolation on the prairies as far as prohibition goes. Yesterday's decision will add to the difficulty of enforcing the provisions of the Saskatchewan Temperance Act, and will go far to hastening another reference in Saskatchewan.

Moose Jaw Evening Times.

The canture of the Alberta salient by the Wets is only an incident in Canada's war against alcoholism, indicating that the wartime drive against the liquor traffic pushed the front line too far in advance of the supply base of public opinion.

Edmonton Journal.

The Legislature must proceed immediately to wipe out the present act. Town and country have joined hands in issuing clear instructions on that point. But in view of the different interpretations that were placed upon "D" it is not going to be an easy matter to frame a new act on the basis of popular verdict.

Saskatoon Star.

The tendency to compromise with the liquor evil, to reinstate the booze traffic under the comparatively respectable administration of politicians is but one of the signs of the general reaction toward moral hibernation in social problems and passivism in politics, which makes the present day. It is to be regretted that the choices in the Alberta ballot were not more intelligently presented.

Brandon Sun.

The Alberta vote again emphasizes the need of temperate views and action by temperance advocates If the conditions obtained in that province that arose in Manitoba, the vote was for temperate thought on a question that should be more moderately considered.

Vancouver Sun.

The result as indicated in these returns must be no surprise to those who have been following the fortunes of John Barleycorn in Canada during the past few years. Quebec British Columbia and Manitoba, are now frankly wet.

It must be remembered that the movement toward the re-establishment of liquor is in the final analysis a revulsion of feeling against the self-denying fervor of war time days that placed all things spirituous on the sacrificial altar to the Gods of war.

MOVABLE LIBRARY THE LATEST IDEA

This is the Idea Behind Dayton's Newest Innovation a Library ou Wheels.

DAYTON, O., Nov. 7.—If you can't bring the people to the library, take the library to the people.

This is the idea behind Dayton's newest innovation, a library on wheels. Officials at the Dayton Public Library wanted to extend the service and get more books before the public. They didn't have money enough to build new branches so they hit upon the idea of a circulating library in a truck.

It is equipped with 600 volumes of selected fiction and carries 104 current magazines. You get your library card from one of the young women who accompany the truck and you draw the books you want. The only charge is the customary fine for keeping a book too long.

Goes Everywhere.

The itinerant library goes over a different route each day and assistant librarians go over the same route once a week in order that the reading public may become acquainted with them.

After the first week's operation, sponsors of the idea declared a long-felt need had been supplied and the library on wheels was a success. Hundreds of persons who never before had a library card are now duly enrolled as readers.

The trips of the book truck had no preliminary announcement and took an unsuspecting public by surprise, but the unsuspecting public rose to the occasion and asked for books by the score.

Miss Electra C. Doran, chief librarian, says it is "surprising but true" that people who have not been inside a library for years choose good books.

"The frivolous kind," she says, "are not in great demand. Books which make a person think are the ones that are most wanted.

A La Carte.

"We have divided the city into zones. Regular routes have been established in each zone and stations have been designated at which the truck calls once a week. From these stations library cards are distributed and books issued. In addition, the truck may be stopped along the street and books obtained right in front of the homes.

"We have decided to extend the service to rural communities just as soon as we can."

The travelling library is no inconspicuous figure as it ambles through Dayton's streets. Striking posters emblazon its sides, one of which reads as follows:

"Lincoln walked 20 miles to get a book. You have books brought to your door."

DENIES PURCHASE OF CASA LOMA FOR HOME

TORONTO, Nov. 8.— (Canadian Press.)—Premier Ferguson, on behalf of the Provincial Government, last night gave explicit denial to the report yesterday to the effect that "one of the governments" was about to purchase Casa Loma, Sir Henry Pellatt's residence, as a home for permanently disabled soldiers of war.

Similar contradiction of the suggestion came from Ottawa by the Canadian Press and special despatches, thus disposing of the possibility that the Federal government was interesed in any such scheme.

REV. R. B. GROBB'S LECTURE ON PASSION PLAY HEARD IN OMEMEE

At Christ Church Anniversary Entertainment — District Meeting of the A.Y.P.A.—Omemee High School Report.

VILLAGE VISITORS.

OMEMEE, Nov. 7.—The anniversary services of Christ Church were held on Sunday. The services being very largely attended both morning and evening. Rev. G. J. Bousfield, of St. Luke's church, Peterborough, was the special speaker who delivered in spiring sermons both morning and evening. The special music by the choir was thoroughly enjoyed by large and appreciative congregations. In addition to the anthems, which were well rendered, a beautiful duet was rendered at the morning service by Mrs. Hume and Mr. W. G. Stephenson. At the evening service Mrs Hume sang a solo.

Although Monday was a very wet day, it was not damp enough to keep a large crowd away from attending the fowl supper which was held in the Sunday School room of the church on Monday evening. The ladies of Christ church, having long ago made a name for themselves in the excellence of their annual fowl supper.

All attending were amply satisfied with the liberal serving of fowl which was followed by cakes, pies, salads and all that a hungry appetite could crave.

Rev. R. B. Grobb's Lecture

Following the excellent supper, the Rev. Mr. Grobb, of Peterborough, gave his illustrated lecture on the Passion Play, which he himself witnessed last year. The lecture was illustrated by official, beautifully colored slides, which will linger long in the memory of those who had the privilege of attending. The story concerning the play was given by the lecturer, a portion of which follows:

"Nestling in the Bavarian Hills of Central Europe, is the little German village of Oberamenagau. In the sixteenth century a plague broke out in that section of country, taking a daily toll of hundreds of lives. The little village was immune for some time until a workman coming over the hills to his home in the village brought the dread disease from which a day or two later he died. Within a few days eighty lives were cut off. When the villagers in great alarm sought refuge in prayer, the plague abated; they registered a vow that once every ten years they would live the life of Christ, His sorrow and suffering leading up to the crucifixion. The vow has been faithfully kept and the interval of years between is spent in living the life of the disciple or character to be represented. No artificial make-up is allowed, consequently the men taking part have to grow long hair and beards to represent the men of early bible fame. Tourists from all over the world gather at this little village once in ten years, to see the Famous Passion Play, which takes eight hours to deliver and of which the lecturer gave such a graphic description.

The play is a religious ceremony with the players and although offered by the United States $1,000,000 for film rights last year the offer was refused. Fabulous salaries have also been offered to the character playing the part of our Saviour, as well as to the man who played the part of Judas, but the answer was "No, I am a man of God." The greatest ambition of the residents of this little village is to be chosen as a character in the production which will again be given in the year 1930.

The characters taking part in this extraordinary production are all working people of the village and all of a very religious type. The music for the production was written by a priest one hundred years ago.

The Rev. Mr. Grobb, who gave the lecture, is a fluent speaker and his interesting discourse on Monday night was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $235.

Catarrh Of The Stomach Is Dangerous

"Thousands Have It and Don't Know It," Says Physician. Frequently Mistaken for Indigestion—How To Recognize and Treat.

"Thousands of people suffer more or less constantly from furred, coated tongue, bad breath, sour burning stomach, frequent vomiting, rumbling in stomach, bitter eructations, gas, and and stomach acidity, and call it indigestion when in reality their trouble is due to gastric catarrh of the stomach," writes a New York physician.

"Catarrh of the stomach is dangerous, because its mucous membrane lining of the stomach is sickened and a coating of phlegm covers the surface so that the digestive fluids cannot mix with the food and digest them. This condition soon breeds deadly disease in the fermented, unassimilated food. The blood is polluted and carries the infection throughout the body. Gastric ulcers are apt to form and frequently an ulcer is the first sign of a deadly cancer.

"In catarrh of the stomach a good and safe treatment is to take before meals a teaspoonful of pure Bisurated Magnesia in half a glass of hot water as hot as you can comfortably drink. The hot water washes the mucous from the stomach walls and draws the blood to the stomach, while the Bisurated Magnesia is an excellent solvent for mucus and increases the efficiency of the hot water treatment. Moreover, the Bisurated Magnesia will serve as a powerful but harmless antiacid which will neutralize any excess hydrochloric acid that may be in your stomach, and sweeten its food contents. Easy, natural digestion without distress of any kind should soon follow. Bisurated Magnesia is not a laxative, is harmless, pleasant, and easy to take, and can be obtained from any local druggist. Don't confuse Bisurated Magnesia with other forms of magnesia, milk of citrates, etc., but get it in the pure Bisurated form (powder or tablets), especially prepared for this purpose.

COULDN'T SLEEP HEART WAS BAD NERVES A WRECK

Mr. H. A. Reid, Upper Musquodoboit, N.S., writes:—"I am very thankful fro the benefit I have received by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

When I came home from overseas, in 1920, my heart was very badly affected by concussion, and my nerves were a dreadful wreck. I was very short winded, and could not possibly sleep at night, in fact, I was in such a condition I felt as if I did not wish anyone to speak to me. I thought I would try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and before I had taken two boxes I could enjoy a good night's rest as well as anyone.

There are lots of returned men who are suffering the same as I did, and I feel sure that if they would only try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they will receive the same relief that I have."

Price 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto.

Anniversary Events Mark Street Church.

At the board meeting on Tuesday evening, with the pastor, Rev. R. Bamforth, in the chair, very gratifying reports of the church's progress were given. The attendance and finances of the church are steadily on the improvement.

Next Sunday the anniversary of the church is to be held, and the board wish to thank the pastor for his influence in securing Prof. Joliffe of Queen's University, Kingston, one of Ontario's ablest speakers, to conduct the services on that occasion. The choir will also render special music. Miss M. Sucie will sing at the morning service, and Mr. V. Boorman in the evening.

Then, for the Monday following at 5 o'clock, a fowl supper is arranged for. Not a stone has been left unturned to make this the best on record.

To crown these two great days, the board is to be congratulated on securing the Trinity Sunday School orchestra, which, under the direction of Mr. R. Gliddon, will no doubt live up to its high standard of efficiency. It is expected that many will be the handshake of old and new friends of the church, who will come and help make this the crowning anniversary of Mark Sreet Church.

USE SULPHUR TO HEAL YOUR SKIN

Broken Out Skin and Itching Eczema Helped Over Night.

For unsightly skin eruptions, rash or blotches on face ,neck, arms or body, you do not have to wait for relief from torture or embarrassment, declares a noted skin specialist. Apply a little Mentho-Sulphur and improvement shows next day.

Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation. The moment you apply it healing begins. Only those who have had unsightly skin troubles can know the delight this Mentho-Sulphur brings. Even fiery, itching eczema is dried right up.

Get a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

COMMUNITY FUND CAMPAIGN

A Community Fund should preferably be established by a federation of contributors as they are more directly interested in who, how and where should the finances be raised, collected and distributed.

The contributors should be more interested in the slogan "One campaign—One Appeal—Once a Year" —"Give Once, But Enough For All."

In cities where Community Funds have been established it was found the average cost of the campaigns have been 2½% of the amount raised as compared with 15% in conducting individual money-raising campaigns under the old plan.

It has been argued that personal interest is lost by contributing to a common fund. No one need forego his special interest in any particular philanthropy. In almost every Community Fund a designation privilege is allowed, whereby a contributor may designate his or her contribution to any particular organization. Experience has shown, however, that very little advantage is taken of this privilege. The common welfare depends on a generous support of all these social service organizations. Why divide the community into classes, each struggling to support its certain work. Under the Community Fund plan interest in these various organizations is broadened.

Contributions to any Community Fund is made by the signing of a pledge by the contributor for a definite amount payable in cash or so much each week or month or quarter, or in any way preferred by the contributor.

With one contribution for the year to the Community Fund no other call would be made for additional subscriptions to social service work unless it be to some particular creed or organization to which the person belongs, or to some building fund.

Taking it for granted that the readers of these articles have been interested, consideration will be given in the next article on Thursday to the organization required for a Community Fund.

LAWYERS UP AGAINST IT

LONDON—Quill pens must go in Southwark county court. They're too old fashioned, the treasury says. For nearly 150 years they've proved effective weapons in cross-examining reluctant witnesses.

THE REAL SITUATION REGARDING CHURCH UNION

To All Presbyterians:

Do not be deceived by misleading statements to the effect that Church Union is settled — for it is not finally and rightly settled and cannot be, until settled by the people who constitute the Church.

The General Assembly is not the Presbyterian Church. It is a court of the Church, constituted for the continuance and maintenance of the Church only.

The Church has been refused the right to consider the question, or to vote upon the proposed legislation. The last vote was taken in 1915 and showed an increase of 23,000 against Union and an increase of only 600 for Union. The bills have never been submitted to the people for their judgment. Union leaders are afraid to submit the whole question to the people to-day. These bills are coercive and unjust. They ignore the votes of 73,735 members of the Church and the votes of hundreds of congregations recorded against Union. They violate the pledges given by the General Assembly in 1905 regarding the necessity of practical unanimity and in 1916 regarding the rights of those opposed.

These bills must be opposed in the interest of justice and liberty. Do not be lulled into inaction by statements that the consummation of Union will make no change in your congregation.

DO YOU KNOW?

that under Church Union congregations are deprived of the right of calling their ministers as under the Presbyterian system. The right of appointment rests with the Settlement Committee, which has full power in the matter. This is one of a number of important changes which would be put into effect under present plans for Church Union. Do you want to retain the right to call your Minister?

Members of the Presbyterian Church: It is necessary for you to act at once, if you want the present Church to continue. Organize and demand the right to consider and decide your own Church relations.

PRISON GUARD DENIED CHARGES AND ACCUSED WARDEN WITH ENMITY

Kingston Investigation Brought Statement From Twigg That Ponsford Was Trying to "Get" Him—One Convict Had Morphine.

DENIES SMUGGLING

KINGSTON, Oct. 8.—Absolutely denying the allegations that he had been engaged in carrying letters out of the penitentiary, or of receiving dope, Arthur Twigg, suspended guard of the penitentiary, gave evidence in his own behalf yesterday in Police Court, and in the course of his statements said that there was a leak in the hospital, where convicts secured dope. He also stated that the Warden of the Pentientiary had been trying to "get" him, and that he had been warned by Superintendent of Penitentiaries Hughes through a third party to watch himself as they were trying to "get" him at the institution. He stated that not only had he received no letters from Toronto or written any, but that he was not in communication with any convict. The evidence for the Crown was concluded, and the case was adjourned.

Postman Called

Abel Blomeley, letter-carrier, was the first witness called and said his route covers Chatham Street district. He has been on the route since April. He said accused lives at 26 Chatham St., but had lived at 28 Chatham Street for some time previous.

"I delivered mail to both addresses," said witness. "I recall delivering a letter in October to that address."

"Were you instructed to make a note of it?" asked Mr. Rigney.

"No. It was handed to me not in the regular way. I was not asked to observe the letter. I did not take any record of the date, but by way it was handed to me. I thought there was something peculiar. I just saw that it was delivered. I was given no special instructions about the letter. The postmaster gave it to me to deliver. He didn't say anything about the letter that I know of.

"Were you aware something was unusual?"

"Yes, I had an idea. Mr. Twigg being in trouble, I thought I should pay more attention that it be delivered all right."

"Were you asked if you delivered it on Oct. 18?"

"No. I haven't been questioned either regarding the evidence I was to give to-day."

"How many letters did you deliver addressed to Kirkwood?"

"I don't remember; there might have been several. I remember one letter, an English letter, which I remarked."

Cross-Examination

To Mr. Day witness said Postmaster Stewart handed him the letter. He remembered the letter was addressed to 26 Chatham. He opened the door of the house and set it on the chair.

"What trouble was Mr. Twigg in that you refer to?"

"I thought he was arrested before that."

"But he wasn't arrested till the 22nd as a matter of fact, wasn't it because he was a guard in the penitentiary?"

"Well, I suppose so."

In reply to Mr. Rigney, witness said he did not know police were investigating the post office. He thought something was amiss when investigation was being made.

Stuart Robertson

Stuart Robertson, an officer of the R.C.M.P. said on the afternoon of Oct. 17, at his suggestion, a letter was sent by a Toronto woman to Arthur K. Twigg, 28 Chatham street, Kingston. In the letter it said 'I have a chance of getting more stuff cheap in Montreal, and is it all right to send it on?" It went on to give a Toronto address.

"Was it mailed?"

"I mailed it myself about 10.30 same evening. A reply was received and it was handed me by Inspector Guthrie on Oct. 20.?"

"Was it opened?"

"Yes. I read it and it said, 'Hello kid, everything is O.K.' It also said, 'thought you were gone west.' The letter was signed Kirk."

Witness identified the letter and envelope produced.

Kept No Copy

In answer to Mr. Day witness said he did not keep a copy of the letter because he didn't think Twigg "would be such an idiot as to reply."

"The woman who wrote it said she had received the letter."

Stamp Disappeared

"Did the letter have a stamp on it?"

"Yes, there was when I handed it to Sergt. Ramsay."

"Where is it now?"

"I don't know."

"Was there any necessity for this letter to go back to Toronto?"

"That was up to Twigg to answer."

"The letter has no stamp or no Toronto postmark?"

"I can't tell that."

"Did you suggest that Toronto police write the Postmaster?"

"I wired to Sergt. Ramsay, 'letter mailed Twigg: do not interfere.'"

"Did you know the woman who wrote the letter?"

"Not personally, but I knew her husband was in the Penitentiary at least once. I know nothing about her."

"Did you know anything about the Green letter?"

"Mr. Ponsford told me about it in Toronto about Oct. 9 or 10. The letter was here before the convict's wife made her visit here. I think he said he kept it because he had suspicions about the defendant."

"Both women deny they were in the dope business, don't they?"

"Yes. I don't think either was in the business."

"Yet they knew where to get it?"

"What were they convicted on in Toronto?" asked Mr. Day.

"I don't know."

Jas. Kirkwood

John Kirkwood, a brother of Mrs. Twigg, said he came to Kingston on Sept. 10. He said he did not know the two women who gave evidence, and had no correspondence with them. In answer to Mr. Day, witness said defendant's son (20 months old) is Arthur Kirkwood Twigg.

"Not writing yet is he?" remarked Mr Rigney.

"No," said Mr. Day, "but he's apparently receiving letters."

Witness said he has received several letters at Chatham Street from Scotland.

C. Gay Shannon

C. Gay Shannon, assistant postmaster, was shown the letter which was sent to Toronto in October, and said letters are not back-stamped in going into a city.

"Do you see anything about that letter that shows it ever went to Toronto?" asked Mr. Day.

"No, I don t. There is no way of proving it ever went to Toronto."

This concluded the evidence for the prosecution.

THE DEFENCE

Arthur Twigg, the accused, was the first witness placed in the witness box. in the defence, and he stated to Mr. Day that he had been suspended on October 22nd. He had entered the employ of the penitentiary on September 22, 1921, remaining there till May, 1922, when he left to play baseball. He later returned to the penitentiary in August, 1922, remaining until he was suspended. He stated that he knew of the Toronto man in question who is serving time in the penitentiary.

"It is alleged that you wrote letters to the women who gave evidence on Monday? asked Mr. Day.

"I did not.

"You are charged with taking letters into the penitentiary.'

"I did not. I did not receive any drugs either from Toronto or any other place."

Didn't Handle Dope

"You are charged with taking dope into the penitentiary."

"I did not. A guard doesn't need to; there is a leak in the hospital. I know that Convict Miller, who was an orderly in the hospital, was caught with 100 morphine tablets. He got thirty days in the prison of isolation for it. It is a known fact that they could get dope in the hospital.

Witness said that he was at the prison of isolation on duty in December last. He was off duty until January 19th with a broken ankle, and remained out two days over his leave, as he had his ankle in a cast and could not walk.

"Trying to Run Place"

"When I went back," said the accused, "I had to report to the warden. I saw him in his office and he wanted to know why I was two days late. I told him I wasn't in shape to report for duty. He said I was trying to run the place, but that he was boss, and was going to get me out of there. I asked him if he had anything against me, and he said he had not. I had been informed through General Ross that he had something against me. Gen. Ross sent me word that the warden said he had the goods on me for trafficking. I was told this while I was sick at home. That's why I asked the warden about it."

Witness was shown the chart of employment, and stated that from May until the end of August he was on duty at the quarry the most of the time.

"The women said that they received several letters from you. Is that right?"

"No. I did not write any letters to them, nor receive any, nor drugs, nor money."

Worst Place in Canada

"Do you know the asylum dungeon at the penitentiary?"

"Yes, it's the worst place in Canada. There is no light in it, and I was told that it had been condemned."

Witness stated that he lived at 28 Chatham street until May 20th of this year when he moved to 26 Chatham street. He stated that he could not come in contact with convicts while locking them up, without being seen by other guards.

Cross-Examined

To Mr. Rigney witness stated that he could not say if there was a constant demand for drugs on the part of the convicts. He knew that there were a number of drug addicts in the penitentiary, the guards geing cautioned to search those who were known to be addicts.

"Are the guards watching for dope as much as anything else?"

"Yes, they are more keen on dope than anything else. Addicts receive close scrutiny." He stated that the prisoner in question is a very clever convict, and is supposed to be one of the best pick-pockets in Canada, who would stand watching by everyone, and then fool them. Witness stated that the warden had told him he would "get him," when he was in his office on January 23rd. To the Magistrate he stated that the warden was hostile towards him, and impressed him as though he was determined to get rid of him.

"What was his reason?" asked Mr. Rigney.

"He claimed I wrote Superintendent Hughes over his head, saying that I was not being properly treated at the penitentiary."

Didn't Know Former Convict

"Do you know this woman?" asked Mr. Rigney, pointing to a former inmate of the penitentiary who was in court.

"No."

"Did you take a letter out in December from her?"

"No."

"Did you give Fireman Tolhurst a note to be given to a female prisoner?"

"No."

"Did you ever write a note to a female prisoner?"

"No."

"What if this woman says you did?"

"I'd say she is a liar."

Witness also denied that he had taken out a letter from the woman and given it to Guard Trotter. He stated that he had been on duty in May, 1922, at the female prison.

Dope Could Be Planted

Regarding dope, witness said that it was possible that it could be planted at the quarry or dock, and that it would be a simple matter for the convicts to get it, and bring it into the penitentiary as the search of them before entering the prison from outside was not very thorough.

In connection with the letter alleged to have been sent from Toronto in the first part of October, witness stated that he did not receive any such letter. He said that he was home with an ulcerated jaw on October 15th, 16th and 17th. Regarding the statement of the women on Monday that he had written a letter asking the convict s wife to meet him in Oshawa, witness stated that he wrote no such letter and did not go to Oshawa. Neither was he in Toronto. The letter which was received in Toronto was shown to him, but he stated it was not in his handwriting. He identified the records made out by himself at the penitentiary

Told to Watch Step

"Different officers told me to watch my step as they were trying every way to get me, said the witness,mentioning the names of some guards who had warned him. "They all knew that the convict s wife came down here and was trailed by the police, and that I was the guard she was supposed to see. This I learned some time after. I never sent out any letters and had not access to this man in question.

"How do the letters get smuggled out?

"It is figured that guards take them out, or convicts smuggle them out when they are released. I don t think the women could have received so many smuggled letters, for I don t see how the convicts could get so much paper.

In reply to Mr. Day witness stated that the guards get wise to who are dru addicts by the hospital books, and also several times when one convict will tell a guard that a certain convict is a dope fiend.

"Isn t It gossip that more people than convicts take dope? '

"Yes."

"Does Tolhurst live near you?"

"Yes. About six guards live within a few blocks of me."

"Wasn't there a house on First street that the police had to visit several times this summer?"

"Yes."

"Were the inmates neighbors of these guards?"

"Yes."

"Who was the closest to this house in question?"

"Tolhurst was. The house was in his back yard."

"What was the trouble?"

"It was supposed to be a red-light house."

Mr. Day then asked witness regarding the statement that the warden was trying to 'get' him and asked how this information came out.

Again Cautioned

"General Hughes told a third person, said the witness, "to tell Arthur (myself) to watch himself, as they at the Penitentiary were trying to get him. Warden Ponsford was angry because I was supposed to have written General Hughes, but I wrote no letter to him. I wanted to see him personally.

"The matter started when I broke my leg last September. Dr. Anglin, the Penitentiary doctor, said my leg was only badly bruised, and I could go to work. I saw another doctor, and was taken to the General Hospital, where it was found my leg was broken. I thought Dr. Anglin would book me on sick leave, but he didn t and I was mulcted four weeks pay, and that was my complaint. The Warden said that if it hadn t been for Mr. Givens and Dr. Ross I wouldn t have gotten back on the job. He didn t want me back.

Questioned regarding the escape of the prisoners a few weeks ago, witness said that he had given evidence at the investigation on October 20th. He said that he was the one who first saw McMullen hiding, and immediately caught him, but the warden hollered to shoot him. "McMullen," said the witness, "asked what was the use of shooting when he was badly wounded."

"Do you know a man named Earl Jenkins at the penitentiary?"

"Yes."

"Do you know Harry Filson?"

"Yes, Jenkins is a guard, and Filson a senior officer."

"What is Jenkins' reputation?"

Rogers After Jenkins?

"He's a knocker, and had the reputation of a rat and a squealer. He is what is known as a stool-pigeon for the warden and Deputy Warden. Some of the convicts he knocks down. It is a well-known fact that Leo Rogers was coming back to Kingston to "get" Jenkins. Neither one of those men has a friend in the institution."

Carrier-Pigeon in Pen

"Was there any other means of communicating messages?

"There was a carrier-pigeon in the prison for three months.

It was kept by the prisoners and flew back and forth. A little nest was made for it in the coal box in the prison yard. It went away shortly after the escape and was never seen again. It was mentioned to Chief Keeper Walsh, but he never djd anything about it."

Accused's Wife on Stand

Mrs. Jean Twigg, wife of the accused stated that since May there had been three letters brought to her house, but they were addressed to other people, and the postman was told not to leave them. She could not remember to whom they were addressed. Asked by Mr. Rigney she said she was not sure if the name was Emmett.

Mr. George Laturney, who has had considerable experience in hand-writing was then called, and he examined the hand-writing on the records made out by Twigg, and also the letter which is alleged to have been sent by him to Toronto. He stated that the letter was written in a different style of writing than that on the records. In the records the vertical style of writing was used, and in the letter there was a Spencerian style. Differences were also seen in the manner of the making of the capital F.

At this stage, while Mr. Laturney was still giving evidence, the case was adjourned.

IMPROVEMENT IN THE WEST IS SEEN.

Union Bank Official Predicts Steady Expansion and General Prosperity.

TORONTO, Nov. 8.—A distinct brightening in the general outlook of a character which boded well for steady expansion and general prosperity was reported by James Hamilton, general manager of the Union Bank, who was in the city en route from Winnipeg to Montreal.

A feature of western rehabilitation, Mr. Hamilton remarked, was the steady elimination of the 'land miner' and his replacement by the real farmer. The 'land miner' was the type of man who, attracted by war prices for grain, bought large tracts of land, often at twice their actual value, put up a rude shack, sowed wheat and then went to California for the winter with the proceeds. He bought all his food in cans from the general store so long as his money lasted, and then drifted. The successor to this type of wheat grower, Mr. Hamilton said, was the real farmer who built himself a home and really settled, doing a little mixed farming to carry him if wheat was bad, and steadily improving his position. Farmers of thi stype, he said, were the bank's best customers. They were frugal and independent; their credit was good for they had come to stay. Mr. Hamilton regarded his bank's franchise in the West as particularly valuable on account of the steady business it had with this type of settler.

With regard to the crop, the general manager of the Union said that broadly speaking it had been good. In the more easterly provinces the grade was in many cases dirty, but the spectacular showing of Alberta, where his bank had some 68 branches, brought the average well up. "The Alberta crop needed to be seen to be realised," he said. "In places the growth was so strong that one could almost lay a blanket on the wheat and rest on it. The wheat was moving well and while much still had to be paid for, farmers were showing a disposition to meet their obligations at the bank. "Collections," Mr. Hamilton said, "were distinctly better than had been expected and the whole situation was encouraging throughout."

Referring to the situation in Winnipeg, Mr. Hamilton said that the city was more or less in the pangs of a transitional period just now. Winnipeg was the gateway to the West, but its share in the west's business was not so great in comparison as it once had been. The city was gradually working out its salvation as a manufacturing centre, he said. It has abundance of power, as cheap, if not cheaper, as could be obtained elsewhere, and steps were being taken to locate plants there to manufacture western requirement. He anticipated great expansion along this line in the next few years.

WOMEN DON'T LET FLAPPER DICTATE ANYTHING TO YOU

By MARIAN HALE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—"You who are past 40, look into your mirror and count 10 before following the fashion dictates of the girl of 16."

This is the advice given to women by Mrs. Albert H. Hildreth of Syracuse, N. Y., former president of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs.

The sixteen-year-old is the arbiter of fashions today, she believes, and in spite of their experience and their accumulation of wisdom, women of middle age are easily wheedled into fashions by the flapper—just because they don't think.

Mrs. Hildreth believes that the beauty of the woman of 40 is as distinctive as that of the sub-deb, but the sartorial requirements of the bud and the blossom are different.

"The woman of 40 need only be as firm about what she wants as the girl of 16 is," she states, "to get a fair deal from Fashion.

"Youth doesn't compromise. The flapper flatly accepts or discards a fashion. She makes her demands so insistent that she hammers them into the consciousness of fashion designers.

"Older women know what they want just as well as the flapper does but they accept substitutes."

Mature women may note the dictates of the young girl in dress, but they should use discretion in following them, Mrs. Hildreth thinks.

"But don't go to the other extreme," she cautions, "and say that every style dictated by the young girl is foolish. This is poor sportsmanship. Saleswomen tell me that the average young girl, allowed to select her own frock, will inevitably select a simple one. It is the mothers who want the frills and the furbelows.

"The young girl keeps a knowing eye on line and color effects. She knows how to give a certain individual touch to any frock.

She's Right.

"The flapper is nine-tenths right in her adoption of simplicity, but mother must remember that this can be overdone, particularly if the figure has lost its slenderness.

"New shades are very fascinating, too, but they also call for discretion. Love-apple red, for instance, is not for mother.

"The rule of the young girl in dress is here," she concludes, "let us be good sports and face it, but let us not be too submissive.

"We can make ourselves a power, too, if we take our stand."

CITY DENTISTS HELD LUNCHEON

Address on Dental Etiquette by Dr. Mason of Toronto — Cheap Dentistry Condemned.

Dr. A. D. A. Mason of Toronto, was the special speaker at the luncheon of the Peterboro Dental Society in the Empress Hotel to-day. In addition to the members in the city there were several visitors from Lindsay, who were welcomed by the President, Dr. C. H. Fulford. Maurice Park, the well known Peterboro soloist, entertained the society very acceptably.

"Dental Etiquette" was the topic discussed by Dr. Mason, who spoke of it from the viewpoint of the ordinary practitioner. Underlying the discussion throughout was the ideal of the Golden Rule, and he wove into his talk an appeal for a more general application of this rule, which he said was framed in spirit by Confucious three thousand years before the birth of Christ.

Dr. Mason appealed for a broad view of etiquette. We are not finished with what we do in this life, he said, but we will meet our fellow practitioners and patients in another existence. "I believe it would be easier to face a man with a dispute in this period of life than in another existence."

Human beings, and especially dentists, cannot live to themselves alone. People living a lonely life go out of their minds because they cannot come in touch with other minds to keep them well-balanced. Dentists cannot act alone, but must have someone to back them even in the little operations in dentistry. "We rely on one another, and out of this arises the need for a code of ethics."

Every man has two parts in his nature, physical and spiritual. The physical requirements of men's bodies must be supplied and out of this need arises fear, bringing sorrow and suffering and perhaps death.

Little is known about the spiritual nature, but no one will argue against its existence. Out of the spiritual side grows kindliness, love, fair dealing, sacrifice, faith and forbearance. These are the virtues on which the ethics of the Dental Profession are founded.

The Golden Rule is the only thing to give the best in life, but team work is needed to help the individual to carry out the requirements of the rule. The real test of a man's ability to carry out the Golden Rule comes with the approach to the dollar bill, the speaker said.

Advocates Co-operation

Dr. Mason warned against belittling the work of other professional men. Many medical men display ignorance of diseases of the mouth, he said, but they look toward the Dentist as an expert in that class of ease. When a dentist is approached by a medical man the physician should be given only an intelligent diagnosis of the condition of the patient. "You must not be dictated to by medical men," the speaker declared. "You will be asked to extract teeth and do other things that are not the best for the patient in your opinion. The patient is the other party with you to the Golden Rule. My advice is don't do what you believe is not for the best interest of the patient."

Sometimes physicians come to you and say "This man has rheumatism and I want you to pull all his teeth.' They want you to say whether or not extracting the patient's teeth will cure the rheumatism. When I am approached in that way I simply turn the question back on the physician. I say, "This man's tonsil's are bad, aren't they?' Will his rheumatism get better if his tonsils are cut?' Then they see it."

Dr. Mason urged greater co-operation between the practising dentist and the specialist. He does not approve the man who comes straight from college and sets up as a specialist, but commends the man who has had experience and has found himself adapted to one thing more than another and is able to do it better. It is the duty of the dentist to refer the patient to a specialist or to ask an expert for help when he himself has not mastered the last ditch in the subject. The man who is, by natural selection, the best fitted to do the work should be a part of the service rendered patients. Patients cannot be helped by half service.

"Don't be too critical of the work of your confreres," Dr. Mason urged. "Be sure the work you criticize is not the very best that can be done under the circumstances."

Advising his hearers to leave alone the cheap shoppers, who are satisfied so long as they have no toothache," the speaker said, "They don't appreciate good work it ought to be forced on them. If you can deliver the goods don't lower your price and skimp the work."

Stealing of patients, depreciation of another's work, and egoism were discouraged by the speaker.

Referring to fees charged by dentists, Dr. Mason said they are entitled to such remuneration as will eliminate the need for worry as to where their rent and food are coming from. They should be unhurried and unworried in their work, but this cannot be if they must think about their living expenses. "But surely we are entitled to a little bit more than our clothes and our food!" the speaker exclaimed. "We should be entitled to a certain amount of leisure and pleasure and aesthetic. We are entitled to good music and travel. The fees for everyday work should be along that line. We do not want a rate card on the walls of our offices."

LEMON AS BLEACH.

Lemon is an excellent bleach, and if you rub a half of one over your pastry board and rolling pin it will remove any spots and keep the surfaces white and new looking.

DON'T MISS THIS MUSICAL EVENT

Kiwanis Club Will Present "The Garden of the Shah."

The presentation by the Kiwanis Club of "The Garden of the Shah" on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, November 20 and 21, under direction of Kiwanian M. B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., in the Grand Opera House, promises to be an interesting event in the early musical comedy offerings of the season. There is quite a sturdy plot to the gay little production, and plenty of musical numbers, that include such numbers as "My Persian Rose," "I am King of My Desert Throne," "Song of the Three Wise Men," the "Bell Song," "Noah's Ark," and "This Wonderful Hour."

The first part is staged on the Sans Souci plantation, on the banks of the Mississippi, the home of Pilot Farley, where the love story of Rose, the heroine, unfolds. The second part shows the Persian "Garden of the Shah," where Canadian mining engineers come to work the Shah's gold mine. The two fall in love with Persian maidens, and the nurse of the Shah's daughter, Nowobah, pursues Sam, their colored body servant, thinking him her affinity in some other incarnation.

Those taking part in the production include Mrs. Walter Buyers, the Misses Mathild Masson, who plays the part of the Shah's daughter Zohdah, Ernestine McManus, as Rose, Greta LeBarr, and Messrs. H. Snelgrove, J. Dewart, A. M. Irvine, J. Marshall, J. McKone, C. E. Clark, J. Wearing, R. Mackey, S. Gordon, V. Morphet, H. Huffman, J. Green, H. M. Niven, A. Dick, D G. Melto, W. Byers, J. Jeffries, G. Henderson, Walter Kidd and a number of chorus men and maidens. Kiwanians Joe Wearing, George Henderson and Walter Kidd are the "three wise men" of the production.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

Miles Sheridan has just learned that the girl with whom he has been taking a yacht trip, under the impression that she was

Juliet Divine, the Million Dollar Doll, a beautiful show-girl, is, in reality

Teresa Desmond (Terry), Juliet's innocent half-sister, whom the Doll sent to masquerade as herself. Miles is madly in love with Terry and is eager to divorce his wife.

Betty Sheridan, who is infatuated with

Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian. Salvano has now deserted Betty for

Rose Callahan, a somewhat ordinary young heiress, travelling in Europe with her father. Betty, learning of Paul's desertion is not anxious to lose her husband also, and goes to Algiers where Miles' yacht is lying.

Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek, long in love with Terry, has almost succeeded in persuading the girl that her only course is to marry him.

Miles and Terry are enjoying a brief sojourn at Bousnada with Miles' servant Mrs. Harkness as chaperone. Miles is preparing to rejoin his wife at Algiers.

Terry prepares to give up Miles for his own sake.

Mrs. Harkness, now aware of Terry's real identity is amazed to learn that Juliet Divine is her half-sister.

Terry, persuaded by Harky's eloquence, decides to wait for her Prince who is on his way to Algiers.

Betty, on board the yacht, heatedly insists on her maid's occupying Terry's room.

Paul arranges to meet Betty at night on board the yacht so that no one will know.

In reality Paul has married Rose, and when he first saw Betty on the terrace, he realized he must play a part. Furious with Betty, he asked leave from Rose, to speak to Betty.

CHAPTER LXXXVI.

Paul's Treachery

Salvano had lied to Betty. He and Rose Callahan were married. But even if Mrs. Sheridan had not come to Algiers with her letters and her threats, his position would still have been insecure.

Callahan, delighted at first with his title, had taken the precaution of making enquiries before allowing things to go too far. He had expected debts, but not disgraceful debts, and the affair with Mrs. Sheridan was not the only one that had started scandal.

The old man would have liked to secure the right kind of a prince for a son-in-law, but it looked as if Salvano weren't the right kind. Not only that, but there were plenty of better princes where Salvano came from, and in various other countries. Callahan resolved to take Rose where these princes were, And where Prince Paul di Salvan was not. But he made one error of judgment. He let Rose and Salvano see too clearly and too soon what was in his mind.

Rose knew her father well. She had been in love before—though not like this!—and Pop hadn't "cottoned" to the men. He had been right in those cases, because they weren't good enough for her, but this one was. She adored Paolo, and meant to have him. It was she, therefore, who warned Salvano of danger, and suggested a secret marriage, because "Pop would have to come round in the end."

The Prince, being Italian, would not have dared propose it, for the simple reason that such a marriage would not in fact be legal, and he might be accused of deceiving the girl. He explained in a half-hearted way, that there were difficulties. Without the parents' consent a marriage would not hold in his own country; and there were besides all sorts of formalities which must be observed. Still, they could be married according to American law, if his sweet Rose trusted him enough for a secret wedding. Then, if her father consented later, the whole thing could be gone over again in the proper way before outsiders knew the story.

Rose was sure her father would consent. Why, he'd have to! So a license was bought by the girl herself, and the two were married one afternoon at Jamaica, Long Island. Rose wrote to one or two friends, cautioning them not to tell; but she was in a mood not to care, really, whether they told or not. This mood changed somewhat, however, when the confession to Pop had been made, (by her, not Paolo) and she had seen how he took it.

As she explained to Salvano afterwards, Pop behaved more like a mad bull than anyone's kind old Pa. He roared home truths about the Prince's morals, and said he'd break the marriage—which wasn't a marriage anyhow, by Gad!

Rose cried so much, however, that eventually Callahan relented. He talked with the bridegroom, and put him on probation. Salvano wasn't to consider Rose his wife, and must prevent the truth about the secret marriage from leaking out. The pair would be permitted to call themselves engaged, and Salvano might follow the father and daughter abroad, where Callahan had already planned to travel. If the Prince behaved himself for six months, and if meanwhile Callahan heard no worse tales than he had heard already, there might be a real wedding—in Rome, perhaps, after a meeting with Paolo's parents.

With this concession Salvano had to be content, on the principle of half a loaf being better than no bread, and on the understanding that—for the honour of the family—his most pressing debts should be paid immediately. Also, Callahan was willing to advance money for Salvano's travelling and other expenses.

The arrangement was humiliating; but Callahan was a millionaire several times over. If Paolo could "keep on Pop's good side," as Rose pointed out, all disagreeables would soon be forgotten. Pop was like that! He couldn't bear malice. Consequently, Salvano was at present extremely busy in keeping on that good side. He hoped sometimes, that he was succeeding, though Callahan remained gloomy and morose, suspicious every time that his son-in-law looked at any woman except Rose, or accepted an invitation to play bridge.

Betty Sheridan's letter had been almost a death sentence. Salvano had glanced it through, crumpled it and the envelope into his pocket, and thinking quickly, had walked in the wake of the Callahans, on to the terrace. He shuffled his thoughts like a pack of cards, and as a result allowed Rose to sit facing Mrs. Sheridan whom he saw as he passed through the doorway.

It would be useless, he knew, to try and prevent the girl or her father from seeing the newcomer. Such an attempt would fail, and excite the suspicions of both, though Salvano had long ago "had it out" with Rose about Betty. He'd explained that the affair had been the merest flirtation, that Mrs. Sheridan hadn't been precisely backward; and that their position in society had led to exaggeration. Rose had believed him; but he mustn't let her suppose for an instant that Betty's appearance in Algiers was in any way connected with him.

"There's that stuck-up cat of a Sheridan creature," was Rose's comment as her eyes singled out the charmingly dressed woman whose bright hair glittered like gold in the afternoon sun.

"Really!" Salvano exclaimed. "You mean Mrs. Miles Sheridan? What a small world, isn't it? I mustn't look now, or she'll know we're talking about her, but I will in a minute—as if by accident. I suppose she has come to take care of her husband. Apparently he needs it—if what I hear is true."

Presently he did look, bowing to Betty, and half rising from his chair. "How she has gone off!" he murmured to Rose. "Out of doors in the sunlight, which makes you so lovely, she's quite haggard. Trying to keep down flesh works the deuce with a woman, they say! Shall I go over and speak to her, or— —"

CHAPTER LXXXVII.

Betty is Deceived

"'Yes, go," decided Rose, delighted with Paul's criticism. "If you don't, she'll think I'm keeping you away because I'm jealous, and I'm not a bit—never was."

"There was never any cause," said the Prince, while the letters that Betty held over his head as a threat loomed perilous as Damocles' sword. "I'll come back as soon as I can escape from her without being rude."

He was sincerely anxious to get back, for Rose—whom he might lose—had never seemed so attractive, and he actively hated the woman who had the power to ruin him. If a wish could have killed, Paul di Salvano would have shot on invisible arrow straight into Betty Sheridan's heart.

As he threaded his way between tables, until he reached hers, Paolo hastily planned his campaign. By the time he had pressed her hand, gazed into her eyes, and sat down beside her, he had seen a way to save himself. It was a terrible way, but he could think of no other, and he would take it. The thought of what must be done made him feel slightly sick. But he had not been through the war for nothing.

At midnight, Betty was sitting on deck, wearing white, so she had told Paolo that she would do. She had chosen a white evening gown of "shadow lace," sewn all over with little sparkling crystals. There was an underdress of silver tissue, and her slippers were silver, with big buckles of old paste. A band of brilliants streaked her forehead and pale hair with light, and the cloak flung over the chair-back was of silver brocade lined with ermine. As the moon flooded her figure she glittered from head to foot, and it seemed to her that she must be very beautiful.

She compared herself with Rose Callahan, shrugging her shoulders, and watching her dress sparkle as she moved towards the rail to watch for Paolo's boat.

It was coming. Betty saw the Arab rower, and the black form in the domino. All the romance in the world seemed to be moving silently towards her across the still waters. She drew in a deep breath, holding the shinny silver of her cloak across her breast, and felt like a woman of medieval days, engag in a wonderful love intrigue.

Betty was romantic only on the surface. Such depths as she had were devoted to love of self, and money to make that self happy and beautiful; but all the romance her shallow nature held, had been awakened for the first time by Salvano's yes. She cared more for him than she had ever cared for any man. But when after seeing him today, she had weakened in her resolve to marry him if he were free—weakened for such an irritating, inadequate little reason that she could almost laugh at it.

Nazlo had told her a good deal about Teresa Desmond; and when Betty had heard that the girl came from the Blue Moon Inn on Long Island, she had realized with a shock that Miles' love was the child of the Silverwood caretakers, whom she had caused to be discharged. In the furious disgust that her husband should be caught by a brat of the servant class—a little wretch she had slapped, and sent out of the house in disgrace—she felt a fierce impulse to hold Miles.

A thought had run through her brain that she might remain Mrs. Sheridan, live abroad a good deal, and keep her friendship" with Paolo, married to Rose. This temptation she flung from her, however, with a spasm of virtue. If she could snatch Paolo from Rose, he must be hers by the law, and in that case she couldn't prevent the Desmond brat from taking her place as Mrs. Miles Sheridan. But she could prevent the new Mrs. Sheridan from finding a place in society.

She would tell everyone that the girl had been a servant; that her sister was notorious, and that the father kept a disreputable Road House on Long Island. There wouldn't be much of a welcome for the bride in the Inner Circle after that story had gone round.

Betty turned her mind from Teresa Desmond, as she might have turned off a flickering jet of gas, and focussed upon Paolo. He was close now, almost under the side of the yacht, and the oarsman—bribed of course to caution—made scarcely a sound as he propelled his small boat through the water. Betty bent over the rail with the light sending out a long ray from the diamond hair band, and ten thousand flashes from the crystals of her cloak. Above, the moon was a greenish silver lamp hung in a sky of luminous mauve. What a night for lovers

Five minutes later the black figure in a domino was drawing the white vision into the shadow of the awning. Not far away from the slooping yacht the little boat waited. Nobody had seen or heard the domino come on board.

"Well?" Betty murmured, looking up into a pair of dark eyes, her small fingers half crushed in strong hands that were feverhot.

"It is well" Paolo answered. "I have got out of all that tangle of trouble—got out of it for you. Betty, I've lived in a nightmare A woman I trusted told me you didn't care for me any more—you'd been only flirting—you had confided in her that you really meant to keep your husband. I mustn't tell you who she was. I swore I would not. Like me, you'd never forgive her. I hardly knew what I was doing, after that. I felt deadly ill. I thought of killing you and myself as well. But just when I was most desperate, I was thrown with R . She liked me. I drifted into an engagement. I was too unhappy about you to care much—even when I heard the reports that Rose and I were married. I hoped they'd reach your ears. Yes I wanted to hurt you."

"They did reach my ears. They did hurt me," whispered Betty. "I tell you frankly, Paolo, I would have held Miles in spite of everything, if you'd betrayed me—if you were married. But I had to see you first, before I decided. I'm so thankful now"

"And I" said Salvano.

BAD BLOOD PIMPLES AND BOILES

Banished By

Burdock Blood Bitters

Miss Irene A. Matthews, Stayner, Ont., writes:—"I thought I would write and tell you of the experience and benefit I have derived from Burdock Blood Bitters.

Some few months ago I was troubled with bad blood which broke out on my face in the nature of pimples, boils and ring-worm, and I got so bad I really did not know what to do.

I was ashamed to go anywhere, and the itching and burning caused such a terrible sensation I could get no relief day or night.

One day a friend advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters. I used one bottle and felt quite a relief, and by the time I had taken 3 bottles I was completely relieved.

I cannot praise B.B.B. enough and I hope anyone afflicted like I was will get the same benefit I received."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Sir: The Alberta newspapers all say that Prohibition was beaten because it is impossible for one part of a population to put another part in gaol with the lid and handcuffs on when not guilty of any offence against either God or man. That spirit produces revolts sooner or later whenever a manly independence still exists.

But don't fool yourself about this province. Women have learned to make home brew, and to drink it. It is good stuff, with a sleep in it too, and it's cheap. But the government is going to put in a clause in the referendum to abolish home brew stronger than soft water, and the women may kick at that, like native wine manufacturers who now send out stuff as strong as lye. But all that will defeat repeal. The women want liquor, but don't want the men to have it. Now watch how she comes out. I'm tellin' ye. The Bootleggers' Trust of America spent money like water in Alberta, and they have appropriated a million, it is claimed, to defeat the repeal of prohibition in Ontario. Who is running this province? It looks as if it was the Devil, the way things is goin'.

Sir,—Some time ago we were flooded with movies in which Americans were always glorified and Britons more or less ridiculed; but public opinion expressed itself so strongly that British films were introduced.

It is a question whether the present state is not worse than the first, as the pictures which have been shown so far seem to deal, not with the more pleasant aspect of life in the Old Country, but entirely with the slums.

England always did poke fun at its own weaknesses, but it is poor business to advertise them by films which only arouse disgust in the minds of outsiders, who already think that England is a country of lords and costers and castles and slums.

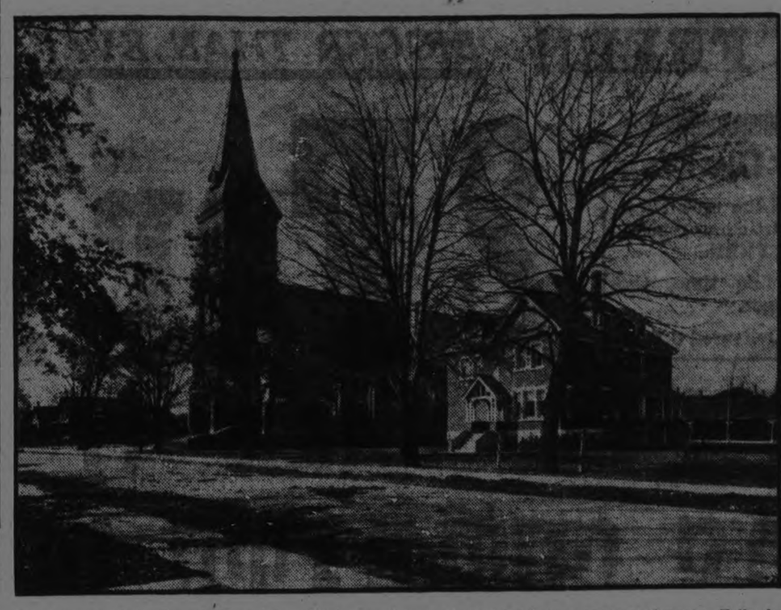
A Thriving Parish in South Ward



The Church of the Sacred Heart, the second Roman Catholic church to be erected in the city of Peterboro was formally decidated and opened on November 21, 1909. The corner stone was laid on June 14th 1908 and on that occasion the sermon was preached by Rev. N. Roche C. S. B. of Toronto, Provincial of the Basilian Order. The bell was blessed on November 14th 1909, by the late Rt. Rev. R. A. O'Connor, D.D., Bishop of Peterboro, who formally dedicated and opened the church on the Feast of The Presentation of Our Lady in the Temple on November 21, 1909. The Most Reverend Archbishop Gauthier of Kingston, later of Ottawa, now deceased, sang the solemn High Mass, and the sermon was preached by the late Archbishop McEvay of Toronto. Bishop Scollard of Sault Ste. Marie was the preacher of the evening.

The late Bishop O'Connor appointed Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D. now Bishop of Peterboro, as the first pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, with Rev. J. V. McAuley, now parish priest of Ennismore, as assistant. On October 5, 1913, the present parish priest, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, took charge, with various assistants up to the present time including Rev. Father McAuley, Rev. L. E. Gorman now of Cardinal, Rev. K. Corkery of Cobourg, Rev. J. J. Garvey of Lakefield, Rev. J. McHenry of Parry Sound, and Rev. P. P. Butler the present curate.

Rev. J. J. O'Brien recently celebrated his silver jubilee anniversary at the Church of the Sacred Heart, after twenty-five years' service in the priesthood which includes three years spent at Sturgeon Falls, four years at St. Peter's Cathedral, six years at North Bay, two years in Lakefield, and the past ten years in the Sacred Heart parish.

The Church of the Sacred Heart is of the Romanesque type of architecture. It was built under the supervision of the late Mr. John E. Belcher, and has been kept in the best of condition. In 1920, the interior was re-decorated throughout in the color scheme of cream, white and gold and in 1914, a splendid organ of the Cassavant Freres make was installed.

The handsome rectory adjoining the church was commenced on May 3rd., 1922 and opened on January 9th of this year, Mr. W. A. Holmes of Toronto acting as architect, the contractors being Messrs. R. Sheehy and Sons, who also had the contract for the church.

Chatham Magnet For Oil Experts Lay Pipe Line From New Gusher

CHATHAM, Ont., Nov. 7.— Oil prospectors from Oklahoma and Texas continue to arrive in the city for the purpose of investigating the possibility of developing this district as an oil field, which was thought some years ago to have petered out.

One of the latest arrivals is C. A. Shepperd, of the Canadian-United States Oil and Refining Company, with headquarters in Texas. He is reporting to his company that there is no doubt that a great oil boom has been started with the big oil gusher at the Shanks farm in Romney township. Following his visit to the gusher to-day, Shepperd stated that the well being sunk by the Union Natural Gas Company several miles nearer Chatham gives better promise than even that on the Shanks farm.

Indications are that Chatham will be the headquarters of numerous prospectors and the companies they represent, and advices are at hand that at least a score of experts will be here within the next two weeks. A pipe line is being hurriedly laid from the Shanks farm to Stevenson's siding, where tank cars will be filled with oil for shipment to the various refineries. In the meantime the oil flow is being collected in temporary tanks at the farm.

So Writes Woman After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Jamestown, N.Y.—"I was nervous, easily excited and discouraged and had no ambition. Part of the time I was not able to sit up as I suffered with pains in my back and with weakness. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, both the liquid and tablet forms, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash for inflammation. Today I am real well and run a rooming house and do the work. I recommend your medicine to every woman who complains, and you may use my letter to help any one else. I am passing through the Change of Life now and I keep the Vegetable Compound in the house, ready to take when I feel the need of it."—Mrs. ALICE D. DAVIS, 203 W. Second St., Jamestown, N. Y.

Often some slight derangement may cause a general upset condition of the whole system, indicated by such symptoms as nervousness, backache, lack of ambition and general weakness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine for such troubles. In many cases it has removed the cause of the trouble.

TO PROVE THE HONESTY OF DRECO METHODS WE PUBLISH HOME TOWN TESTIMONIALS

Your friends and neighbors whom you can 'phone, write or call on to verify the statements made regarding great benefits received from "Dreco."

Could anything be fairer, more honest or convincing? Then why don't you also begin taking Dreco and improve your health as thousands have done?

How many times have you read the testimonials of some persons from a distant city and thought to yourself "I don't believe a word of it, that's too far away?" Most people are just like yourself, they think advertisements of that character are not true.

For that very reason, the published testimonials endorsing "Dreco" are from people right at hand. Your friends or neighbors whom you can easily call upon to verify or deny them. Could we do anything more convincing than that?

Dreco is one of the most widely known herbal medicine on the market today. Thousands upon thousands of bottles have been sold and we have letters of praise for it, from nearly every city in Ontario, but we publish the ones close at hand.

Here are a few selected from the many we have in Peterboro, all telling of their gratitude for the grand relief Dreco has given them.

WIFE WELL ON ROAD TO RECOVERY

Dreco works wonders for Mrs. McEwen. She eats and sleeps well and no longer has pains. Read her husband's story. Then try this grand medicine yourself.

"My wife had suffered for a long time from a very bad case of stomach trouble," says Mr. E. J. McEwen, of 20 Manning Ave., Peterboro, Ont. "Gas would form on her stomach after eating and make her miserable for hours. She would get bad dizzy spells and terrible cramps, which would leave her stomach sore for days after.

She was hardly ever free from headaches, couldn't sleep at nights and had a very poor appetite, with the natural result that her whole system suffered from lack of proper rest and nourishment.

"She tried all kinds of medicines, but could get no relief from any of them. Then we fortunately heard of Dreco and the remarkable benefit it was giving in cases similar to her own. My wife has only taken two bottles of this great remedy, but it is a fact that they have done her more good than everything else she has taken, put together.

"Her digestion has improved wonderfully, she has a much better appetite, sleeps better at nights and is not troubled with pains in her stomach or headaches.

"We are convinced that Dreco is a splendid medicine and Mrs. McEwen is going to keep right on taking it until she is fixed right up."

You can get just as much benefit from Dreco as Mrs. McEwen got. This reliable remedy has a wonderfully strenghtening and cleansing effect on stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys and purifies the blood as well. Good health naturally follows its use for a clean system, working as Nature intended, casts off all disorders. You owe it to yourself to investigate Dreco, the purely vegetable health-builder that contains no mercury, potash or habit forming drugs.

WAS ALWAYS CONSTIPATED

Peterboro lady finds Dreco a wonderful remedy and no longer needs to take harsh laxatives. General health shows great improvement as a result.

Most every day illnesses are directly traceable to sluggish, lazy bowels that do not properly clear the system of impurities. A chronic condition of this kind is, therefore, fraught with great danger and unless checked, will sooner or later result in serious disability, to say nothing of its gradual weakening effect on the whole body. Miss Helena Nixon, of 258 McDonnell street, Peterboro, Ont., proved it. Here is her experience:

"Ever since I can remember, I have been a chronic victim of constipation. I had to be continually taking harsh laxatives and many times these failed to do me good. This condition kept my whole system weak and I had a dull, worn out feeling nearly all the time. Although I was fairly healthy every other way, I was worried because I realized that sooner or later, my trouble would lead to something more serious.

"About three weeks ago, I started taking Dreco and found it to be just the thing for me. My bowels are regular every day and I haven't taken a laxative of any kind since. My entire system is in better condition than for years and I naturally am very grateful for what Dreco has done for me. After trying everything for many years, I feel that I have found a real medicine at last."

Dreco is prepared solely from the pure extracts of herbs, roots, bark and leaves, known through the centuries for their medicinal value. These juices soothe the bowels and stimulate them to action in a natural way and benefit all the other organs of digestions as well. Dreco contains no mercury, potash or habit forming drugs.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. Go there to-day and ask for Mr. Vaughan, the Dreco Expert, and let him explain the merits of this great remedy. There is no charge and he will tell you honestly if he believes Dreco will benefit you. Dreco is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, in Campbellford by J. E. Birks, and by a good druggist everywhere.

EARACHE

Have you ever stopped a moment to consider that almost everything in life, customs and habits changes except the use and misuse of the old-fashioned nieghborhood remedies? The cure of earache is clearly one of these. The ear plug of cotton, usually accompanied by the "dropping in" of sweet oil and laudanum, in spite of all that shall ever be said or written against it, will be continued. Roasted onions and hosts of similiar substances will no doubt be used to the end of time.

Whatever the cause or remedy, earache requires careful treatment to afford relief. Neuralgia is rarely, if ever, the cause of earache. Careful examination by a physician can alone determine the real cause. Beware of "ear-drops" for relief. If you try a number and the last one affords relief, that's it. I mean, look out for it.

Earache is caused by scratching or by irritation and infection of the auditory canal. This slight infection may produce a small boil which causes temporary pain. The scratching and infection in most cases are the result of amateur attempts to remove ear-wax. Sometimes, when this ear-wax has been tightly pressed against the drumhead of the ear, earache will result, but not usually.

Again, earache may be caused by catarrhal conditions. This so-called serious catarrh is a disease of the drum-cavity. It is very common in children who are not properly cared for and sometimes is the cause of running ear and small blisters on the drumhead. Slight deafness will also result from this cause.

Earache may also be caused by nasal douches used improperly. Violent or improper nose blowing sometimes carries fluid where it irritates the ear.

No remedy is more useful or easy to apply in slight cases of earache than boiled water cooled down to a temperature the ear can stand, about 125 degrees Fahrenheit. The ear drops only give heat and hot water can do it better. Protect the ear carefully from external influences. Use a night cap if you wish; it will do no harm and often does good.

Severe cases of earache are not for the layman to fuss with. Call your physician, as it may be a serious complication.

Ensures Sound Sleep

DO you enjoy a real night's sleep, waking rested and refreshed? Or do you lie awake for hour after hour, tossing restlessly, so that you rise in the morning feeling more tired than when you went to bed?

Sleeplessness is usually due to one of two causes.

The first cause is digestive. It is a mistake to eat a heavy supper late at night. It is equally a mistake to go to bed hungry. In both cases the result is disturbed, restless sleep.

The second cause is mental. Anxiety, worry, and over-work result in mental activity at a time when the brain should be soothed and quiet. To ensure sound sleep you need a light beverage which will satisfy the cravings of hunger without causing any digestive activity, and which will soothe and rebuild the worn nerves.

There is nothing to equal a cup of "Ovaltine" for this purpose. This delicious beverage is rich in the restorative food elements which soothe and rebuild the nerves. It is easily and completely assimilated. It ensures sound, natural sleep. "Ovaltine" contains the concentrated nourishment extracted from Nature's Tonic Foods—ripe barley malt, creamy milk and fresh eggs. It contains no drugs.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

SALLY SALAMA NDER'S LESSON

Won't you show me how to chang e around the way you do, Charlie?" the Twins heard her say.

One day Nancy and Nick came upon two funny little lizards in Dixie Land.

One was called Sally Salamander and the other was called Charlie Chameleon, and they looked almost exactly alike. Only Charlie could turn almost any color he wanted to (except pink or sky-blue or lilac), and Sally couldn't. She had to stay an ugly yellow with black shoe-button spots all over her, and she got tired of having only one dress.

"Won't you show me how to change around the way you do, Charlie?" the Twins heard her say.

"There's nothing to it at all!" answered Charlie. "All you've gotta do is just wish. See!" And he turned from a beautiful pea-green to a lovely tomato-red.

Sally almost did change color at that. She almost turned green with envy.

"I'll give you a lesson," said Charlie generously. "Try to turn the color of whatever you happen to be on. It's a good way to learn to hide if you're in danger. Now we're on brown earth so try to turn brown. Like me!" And the little chameleon turned to a lovely mud color.

"Now close your eyes and wish," he said.

"I'll try! I'll try!" said poor Sally obediently. So she closed her eyes and wished so hard she thought she would burst. But alas! When she the same ugly old yellow color she opened her eyes again she was still had always been.

"That's not the way!" scolded Charlie. "Mister Moccasin Snake could see you with his eyes shut, and so could Mister Pelican and Mister Duck and everybody. Mebbe you can turn red better.

But like the wolf in the piggy story, "for all her huffing and for all her puffing," Sally stayed yellow, and "her spots would not go in!"

Suddenly the Twins heard a flapping of wings, and there stood Mister Wild Duck.

Like a yellow streak, Sally Salamander flopped into the water and swam away.

But poor Charlie! He couldn't swim and had to stay where he was. He turned every color he knew how, but it was too late. Mister Duck had seen him.

"Say, Sally," called Nick. "Some people know some things and other people know other things. Everybody can't know everything. You ought to be satisfied to know how to swim." And he shooed Mister Duck away and saved Charlie.

CROP REPORT

The following is a summary of returns made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Since the rains of a week ago there has been a good deal of fall plowing done, and a considerable acreage will yet be turned under.

Many of the best herds of dairy cattle are now in the stable for the season, and are responding to winter feeding much better than those that are on the grass.

Fall wheat is still looking well, and except where sown very late has a fine top for the winter. Essex states that a quantity of O.A.C. 84 and Berkley Rock has been sown this year to provide seed on a larger scale next year.

The season has been most favorable for sugar beets.

Essex.—The sugar beet harvest is nearing completion and good crops are reported. The average will run some 10 tons to the acre with 17 per cent. sugar.

Kent.—We expect to see the end of the sugar beet harvest within a few days. Adverse weather conditions have delayed operations considerably. As previously stated, the beets are yielding and testing high this year, and are one of the most paying crops in the county.

Middlesex.—Apples are bringing from $3.50 to $4.00 per bbl. for domestics on the local market. About nine thousand bbls. have been shipped out of the county by Co-operative Association, bringing from $4.00 to $4.50 per bbl. for No. 1's, $3.50 for domestics and 75c per hundred for culls.

Northumberland.—The chief interest in marketing in this district is now centred around apples. Demands and prices have both been adversely effected by a very marked decline in prices on British markets. There has been a considerable movement of low grade apples in bulk. These have been marketed at cider and jam factories, evaporators, canning factories, and also for domestic consumption, prices f.o.b. Brighton for this class of trade have ranged from 25c to 30c cwt. for cider stock, 35c for jams and 50c to $1.00 per cwt. for hand-picked apples roughly graded as to size, suitable for domestic consumption or for canning factory use.

Victoria.—A considerable quantity of good quality alfalfa seed has been produced in the county this year. There has been a healthy revival in the interest in this crop during the last two years. Alsike is rather hard to sell at present, the market being dull. Sweet clover, however, seems to have recovered somewhat from the slump of the last three years, and is approaching the price of alsike.

Lennox & Addington.—Producers are taking a keen interest in the egg grading regulations, and they are beginning to realize that in time these regulations will be of great benefit to them financially.

Eggs and poultry are attracting much attention in Grey County. It would seem that a radical change is about to come in marketing conditions.

Bruce.—A number of Russian-German laborers are being brought into this district from East Prussia. They are experienced farm laborers who are in more or less destitute circumstances in their own country. Rev. Carl Gretzenger of Mildmay is instrumental in having his fellow countrymen brought here. The farmers are advancing their transportation, which means $130, and also guarantee to pay $150 on yearly contract in wages for the first year, on their arrival. We are expecting some 32 by Dec. 10th. This is more or less of an experiment which we will be pleased to watch with interest and report upon at a later date.

Huron.—One of our larger apple growers, who has seventy-five acres of orchard built a small camp for his transient help, this year. This would house some thirty or forty men and seemed to work out quite satisfactorily from his point of view. He engaged a cook to look after the place for the men and altogether they were quite comfortable.

South Simcoe.—The increased interest being taken in sheep in this section is very noticeable, a local drover having placed 440 head of breeding ewes in a period of three weeks. The marketing of live stock was largely confined to that of hogs of which some heavy shipments were made during the week, and $8.75 per cwt. was made on the thick smooth basis.

Middlesex.—A carload of heavy horses was shipped this week, priced around $200; beef cattle and hogs are somewhat draggy.

Grey.—Considerable stock is going to market just now, but much of it is not in condition to command the top prices. Especially is this true of the cattle. A few lambs undocked and uncastrated are also going in. Some are still buying stock-yard cull rams, which is keeping the quality down to an unprofitable level.

WON FIGHT IN SECOND ROUND

Chilean Aspirant For the Heavyweight Title Now Ranks Third in France.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—Quintin Romero-Rojas, a Chilean fighter, last night removed another obstacle from his chief objective, the French heavyweight championship. He sent Henri Eluere, France's ranking number three boxer, crashing to the canvas with a pile-driving right to the jaw after thirty seconds of fighting in the second round of what was to have been a twenty round contest.

Only Marcel Nilles and Georges Carpentier now stand between the Chilean and the top of the list.

Romero stands six feet one inch. His weight was announced at 198 pounds. The Chilean carried the fight to the Frenchman from the sound of the gong. In the first round the men stood toe to toe slugging for a while.

In the second Romero rushed from his corner like a wildman. Both men swung rights which landed at the same time. Romero took the Frenchman's blow, but the Frenchman went down like a log. He managed to regain his feet at the count of nine, but the Chilean sent another right to the jaw as the sponge was thrown into the ring. Eluere had dropped under the impact of Romero's fist, however, and was dead to the world.

LOCALS PREPARING FOR CRUCIAL CLASH

Oshawa Play Here Saturday to Decide Who Will Meet Kingston For Eastern Honors.

The local Collegiate twelve are fully aware that they are up against a hard proposition on Saturday when they meet the crack rugby team of the Oshawa High School. The motor town crew, although they have not yet taken part this year in any league game in the Interscholastic race, are thoroughly versed in the gridiron game having played about five exhibition games in the last few weeks. They have been getting good coaching and have many of tht stars of last year's team which gave the P.C.I. such a stiff run for their money then.

But the P.C.I. are practicing hard. Since their game last Saturday they have had a couple of workouts and have developed some new plays which they hope will fool the Oshawa line. In every practice the backfield get in some good work in passing the ball at lightning speed from one to the other while on the run. This form of rugby is good to watch and the fans will get an eye full Saturday. Tonight and tomorrow night the P.C.I. team will practice. The local crew are confident that when the Oshawa team line up against them at Riverside they will sure know that they are going to have a real rugby battle on their hands.

The old P.C.I. yell "Hikety-Chick" which for years has urged the P.C.I. teams on to victory will sweep across the field at Riverside Park on Saturday. Everyone in the city who is a follower of the college game should be out to give the "garnet and grey" their moral and their financial support.

JOHNNY DUNDEE ON BIG MILLING TRIP

Eleven Bouts in Ten Weeks Through West and South.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.— Eleven bouts in ten weeks is the busy programme outlined for Johnny Dundee, world's featherweight champion, by his manager, James J. Johnston.

The series ,which begins at Frontenac, Kas., November 14, when Dundee meets Jimmie Benning, will take the champion through the Middle West and South Atlantic States and will end in Portland, Oregon, January 27.

In addition to Benning, Dundee's list of opponents includes Joey Fox, Harry Mendelsohn, Joey Sanger, Joe Gorman, Bobby Harper and other less formidable boxers.

PROPOSE SESSION OF UNION LEAGUES.

International and Pacific Coast Invited By the American Association.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—An invitation to the club owners of the International and Pacific Coast Leagues to meet in joint session with the American Association here December 10, was issued to-night by Thomas J. Hickey, president of the latter organization.

The annual meeting of the American Association club owners will be held that day and President Hickey suggests a joint meeting of all Class AA. Leagues for a conference prior to the session of the major and minor leagues two or three days later. Commissioner Landis has called a joint meeting of the major leagues to be held here December 12.

President Hickey said a number of important subjects concerning the Class AA. Leagues, among them the draft issue, should be considered before the club owners go into session with the majors.

The three big minor leagues at present are opposed to the draft, but the sentiment in the Pacific Coast League is said to be in favor of restoration.

HOCKEY TEAMS CALLED EARLY

Both Intermediates and Juniors Will Start Workouts Next Week.

Peterboro's hockey season opens next week with preliminary conditioning workouts for both the intermediate and junior candidates.

Lou LeBarr, Sr., and Walter Jackson are taking charge of the juniors and are arranging for practice quarters.

In a day or two definite announcement will be made of the place where the second squad will start to get into shape, and it is confidently expected that there will be a big turnout of candidates for the first setting up.

Joe Dwyer will handle the intermediates and on last winter's performance and the general impetus local sports have received from the summer's successes it is believed that the older players will be just as faithful as the juniors in taking up the work that will precede the opening of the rink. Both teams would be well advanced in physical fitness if the gymnasium preliminaries are entered into seriously and consistently.

Billy Evans Says

Playing the Races.
Tough Proposition.
Freak Experiment.
Public Is Bunked.

"Who wants the winners? Get my best bets of the day. I had four winners yesterday, three of them long shots." That cry is familiar to any race track enthusiast who has ever attended any of the meetings at Laurel, Havre De Grace, Pimlico or Bowie. As you board the train, whether it is in Baltimore, Philadelphia, Washington or New York, the cry of the turf expert is constantly heard.

There are scores of turf experts who are selling their opinion in a daily form sheet to the unsuspecting public, always anxious to get the inside dope. Most of the experts have fat bank roles. They dope the races, sell their expert opinion in a sealed envelope at a price anywhere from two-bits to two dollars, collect the revenue and keep it by not betting on the horses. It's great sport to watch them go, and make a bet if you can afford to lose, but it's a tough way to try and make a living. It just can't be done.

A Boston paper in an effort to demonstrate that betting on the races is a losing game has started a very unique experiment. Daily it gives a list of seven selections made at the Latonia track, picked by a man who knows nothing about the racing game. He is called the "Blind Picker." The selections made by the "Blind Picker" have no merit or knowledge behind them. Only pretty sounding names of horses being considered.

In the first four days of the experiment, the showing of the "Blind Picker" based on a $2 bet on each race, was far better than many of the turf's leading experts, nationally known for their racing knowledge. So far the best showing made by the "Blind Picker" in six starts, one of his selections being scratched, was two firsts, two seconds and one third. Only one of his horses finished outside the money, and one of them, Best Love, paid $13.90 for $2.

The running horses furnish great sport. There is always a big thrill as they come down the stretch. The Boston paper isn't trying to belittle the sport as an amusement, instead it is merely trying to make the common folks realize they are a lot of suckers if they feeel they can beat the races. Regardless of the outcome of the experiment, betting on the ponies will probably continue to be a favorite pastime. Was it Barnum or Bailey who said a sucker was born every minute?

FIRPO PREPARES SPRING PROGRAMME.

Arranging For a Dozen Fights Before Meeting Dempsey.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Luis Angel Firpo will return to North America next spring for a series of about 12 fights in various parts of the United States and Canada, leading up to a return match with Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight title, which probably will take place in New York around Labor Day.

This announcement was made tonight by William McCarney, who with his partner, Hugh Gartland, will conduct Firpo's tour.

Firpo is expected to return in April and start boxing early in May.

TEN PINS COMING BACK STRONG.

Business Men To Start League.

The coming season will see one of the best and largest leagues in ten pins the city has ever seen as the Business Men's Ten Pin League is to be played at Solomon's Alleys. At present the entries are: DeLaval, C.G.E., Crescents, High Rollers, Quaker Oats, Lawn Bowlers, Belmont Club, Kiwanis and several other teams will enter before the week-end.

NO FORM, YET THEY ARE CHAMPIONS

DUNDEE AND GREB IGNORE TEACHINGS OF OLD MASTERS AND CLIMB TO FAME

BY JOE WILLIAMS.

Of course, it's best to have "form." Willie Hoppe has it in billiards and is a master. Bobby Jones has it in golf and is called America's most notable contribution to the sport. No ball player ever had better form than Nap Lajoie in field or at bat. Lajoie will always rank with the immortals.

So if you play your favorite sport according to Hoyle—meeting the demands of a specific technique—you are on the right track.

If you don't—well, maybe you are on the right track anyway.

No golfer ever had worse form off the tee than Ted Ray, the giant Britisher, who won the American open championship at Toledo in 1920. He tore at the ball with a lash and smash that was startling. At the end of his swing he would be teetering perilously on the tip of his left toe. You expected to see him go tumbling to the earth, flat on his expansive beak. But he didn't. His drives sailed through the air with tremendous force and unwavering accuracy. No other player drove better, or as far. Yet he was utterly without form, as form is known in golf.

Form in the Ring.

You are supposed to respect the teachings of form in the prize ring. Most all the champions have been finished performers in this respect. Jim Corbett had beautiful form, and set the style for Americans. Abe Attell, Willie Lewis, Packey McFarland, Mike Gibbons, Jack Britton and Johnny Kilbane were interesting performers in action. Neat punchers, deft blockers, flashy footworkers. They did their work well—and properly.

Form is not without its enthusiastic supported in the ring today. You will travel a long and circuitous road before you find a more formful boxer than Benny Leonard, and, as a hitter, Jack Dempsey has matchless form. We never saw a fighter who could get more power behind a short blow. You never hear that Dempsey has hurt his hands. That's proof of his correct hitting form.

Now for the boys who have no form at all and yet are on top.

Johnny Dundee is the featherweight champion of the world. Dundee ignores all the established fundamentals. Does nothing according to Queensbury. Hs a clownish style and is what is known as a bad hitter. Yet he's a world champion. And a deserving one. Ten years ago he was good enough to hold his own with Kilbane when the Cleveland Irishman was in his prime.

"Formless" Champions.

Harry Greb is another world champion who disdains the accepted canons of the cauliflower trade. The Pittsburg middleweight is just as much of a freak as Dundee. In some respects they are somewhat alike. Eternally aggressive, their winning chance lies mainly in a ceaseless attack. The old-timers frown on Greb. "He can't hit. He doesn't know what a counter is. He has no defense."

Possibly. Yet he's the world champion middleweight.

Pal Moore, southern bantamweight, also belongs to the freak class. Moore never held a title, though he whipped four bantamweight champions, Kid Williams, Johnny Ertle, Pete Herman and Joe Lynch. Moore was an acrobatic buffoon in the ring. His penchant for bouncing off the ropes at the slightest provocation added to his uniqueness.

Moore's ring mannerisms were even more pronounced than those of Dundee and Greb. He got his ideas about fighting from watching negro roustabouts go through their comicalities in free-for-all fights down in Tennessee.

Form? Moore always imagined it was something that made girl shows popular with toupee wearers.

FOOTBALL LEADS ALL IN SPORTSMANSHIP SPIRIT

Ethics of Gridiron Game Considered Higher and Appear to Be More Respected Than in Other Sports.

By HENRY L. FARRELL

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Sportsmanship is not confined to any particular line of activity on the field. Ethics of some sports are considered higher and are more generally respected and observed than in others.

Tennis, polo and golf, the more fashionable sports, are generally looked upon as those sports in which the competitor always grants the advantage of the doubt to his opponent.

Baseball permits judgment on only two doubts—in case of a question give the batter a hit instead of an error to the fielder and in a close decision on the bases favor the runner.

Ethics are carried to extremes in some sports. Bill Tilden, as the leader of tennis, went so far in being a sport that he tossed away a whole set in the recent Davis Cup matches to Jim Anderson because Tilden thought he had been given a break by a bad decision of a line judge.

For all around sportsmanship, for the general prevalence of "square deal" and gentlemnly conduct, collegiate football will rank with any of the popular American sports.

Little contrasts cropping out from time to time make some other sports suffer in comparison to the greatest of all college games.

Rowdy days are supposed to have passed in professional baseball, the so-called national pastime. There are few pitched battles on the field, instances ot slugging under the grandstands are widely scattered since the type of player engaged in the game began to be elevated, but the spirit back of the players still carries a little of the old flavor.

"We'll cut that bird down if we get a chance," one of the Giant players said during the world's series about Babe Ruth.

Ruth, the Yankee star, had been charged by the Giants with going into the bases with his feet up. In baseball that is considered an overt act.

The Babe was not "cut down" during the series. Perhaps it was because the chance was not afforded, because Ruth was on the bases often. It might have been that Ruth is rather large and capable with his fists and the player who resorts to "cutting down" is ordinarily not of the type that is willing "to go" in open combat.

It is not unethical in professional baseball for a competitor to take advantage of the physical weakness of an opponent. Neither is it that way in boxing. The stakes are too high in professional sports for the competitor to think of anyone but himself.

Dempsey Forgot.

Dempsey did not have to resort to the foul tacts that he used agains Tommy Gibbons and Luis Firpo. He is too great a fighter to step to the boundary lines. Dempsey, however, was not trained on any particular ethics. The rule of the ring is to do everything you can to the other fellow and get away with it.

Two years ago Harvard and Yale were meeting in their annual football game. Yale treasures more than anything in the world a gridiron victory over Harvard. Yale hadn't won from Harvard over a long stretch and if there were not ethics in football, Yale might have felt justified in doing most anything to get the victory.

Charley Buell, the Harvard Quarterback star and the brains of the whole team, was in bad physical condition. He had been injured in a previous game and he was hardly able to get out on the field.

Under the same conditions in many other sports, the main idea would be to take Buell out of play as soon as possible. Wally Pipp was in bad physical condition all during the world's series with a wrenched ankle, but when he started a slide for second base in one of the games the bag was blocked against him and he was badly injured again. Of course, ethics of sport being so widely different, it would have been considered as a "mollycoddle" trick if Frank Frisch had given away to him. The rabble in the grandstand might have called Frank Frisch yellow had he done it.

But in that Harvard-Yale game, instead of "taking Buell" out on the first play, the Yale backers "let up" on him. They spared him. When they could have charged into him and brought him down heavily they blocked him off and spared him a hard fall.

Buell remained in during the entire game and he was one of the prominent factors in Harvard's victory over Yale.

HE'S A RING ARTIST

JACK KID SKELLY

By NEA SERVICE

ST. PAUL, Nov. 8—You've heard of ring artists. Meet a real one. Jack Kid Skelly local bantamweight. Skelly swings a wicked left jab. Likewise a mean cartoonist wing. Out of the ring he is a professionatl artist. In the ring he is a profession al artist. His business is drawing. In the ring, however, he does not care to draw. "Draws are so unsatisfactory," he explains. "I prefer to prefer to get the decision." A poor pun. Skelly rates higher than that as a boxer. Under the tutelage of Jack Reddy he is coming fast. He is a co usin of Italian Joe Gans, well-known welter-weight. From Gans he learne d his boxing technique.

Sport News

There is a strong possibility that the Interprovincial-Intercollegiate playoff will take place in Toronto on November 17th. That means that thousands of faithful supporters of the Queen's team will be deprived of seeing the game of the year. We do not say it is true, but it would be no surprise to find that the Queen's authorities favor the Toronto grounds. It would mean more money for the clubs competing—and cash has been the ruling deity up around Queen's this year. They say this state of affairs cannot be helped and perhaps they are right. More probably the whole thing will be blamed on the C.R.U. In any case it is regrettable.—Kingston Whig.

Kingston looks for the Eastern Canada title, the Dominion title, the junior and intermediate intercollegiate championships year, besides the senior intercollegiate championship which Queen's won on Saturday. Time will tell whether they get them all or not.—Kingston Standard.

Argonauts have some of their "head" knocked off and will now get down to serious business. They are a better defensive team than Tigers and this fact will stand them in pretty good stead.—Ottawa Journal.

Where will Buzz Wetzel be next year? The man who has won three pennants in the M.O. League and who was a bang-up second this year, has announced that he is through at Saginaw, and as yet has made no plans for 1924. He will likely find a berth when the National association meets in Chicago, for a man of Wetzel's type does not have to go begging for work. A class AA club had its eye on him and it looked for a time as if he was booked for promoton to higher company, but the club has since decided that its present manager is worth another year's trial. Wetzel is a present employed at Battle Creek, where he coached a semi-pro. team for a few weeks, but he does not intend to remain there long.—Hamilton Spectator.

Tex Rickard is understood to be ready to match Stribling with Johnny Wilson, of Boston, former middleweight champion, or to sign the Georgia youth to substitute for either Mike McTigue or Gene Tunney in case either of the latter is unable to go through with their world's light heavyweight title bout scheduled December 10.

FARMERS' GATES WERE MISSING

But Only a Few Around Downeyville Were Whisked Away By the Witches.

DOWNEYVILLE, Nov. 7.—The Hallowe'en pranks were not indulged in to any great extent the weather being too cold, but a few of the farmers, however, had the pleasure of hunting for their gates which were removed during the night although they were keeping a close watch on them.

This section had their first snow fall Wednesday and the ground is white with the beautiful snow which reminds us that King Winter is here in all his glory.

The ground is frozen quite hard and those who wished to plow had to wait a few hours for the frost to come out.

Quite a number from the surrounding district attended the oyster supper at Dunsford, Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Dorgan attended the fowl supper at Reaboro on Tuesday night, and report they enjoyed a wonderful meal and splendid programme.

Carroll—O'Neill

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Luke's church this morning (Tuesday) at 7.30 o'clock, when Miss Kathleen O'Neill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick O'Neill, was united in marriage to Albert Carroll, son of the late Thos. and Mrs. Carroll. The bride was dressed in a brown suit with hat to match, while the bridesmaid, Miss Carmelita O'Neill, cousin of the bride, was attired in a blue suit and hat. The groom was supported by his cousin, Clare Harrington.

The church was prettily decorated for the occasion and the wedding march was played by Miss Carmelita Morrisey, cousin of the bride. After the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Father Galvin, the wedding party repaired to the home of the bride's parents where dinner was served to the immediate families only. The bride and groom left on the 10.40 train for Columbus, Ohio, on their honeymoon, and will visit the groom's brother, Dr. Joseph Carroll.

OSHAWA HUNTERS SHOT BLACK BEAR

Second in Three Years For Young Club—Got Quota of Deer.

OSHAWA, Nov. 8—(Special to the Examiner)—Members of the Oshawa Hunting Club arrived home this morning from their two weeks trip in the north, with a full quota of venison, partridge and a black bear which tipped the scales at 185 pounds dressed. Bruin was bagged by ex-alderman Art Germond and his brother Lou on the return journey while in company with ex-mayor Jack Stacey, and Bill Armour, who were portaging a deer shot by the latter. This is the second black beauty captured by members of the local club since its organization. Three years ago, and according to precedents it by ex-mayor Stacey who shot a bruin in 1921 the Germond brothers will entertain the local club to a bear supper when those present will ask ex-alderman Germond to allow his nomination for mayor at the municipal elections.

COBB BELONGS ON HONOR ROLL

Memorializing of Great Figures of Baseball Should Not Start With 1922.

By HENRY L. FARREL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(United Press).—As a matter of fairness, in addition to the motive of making it historically accurate, baseball heads should not start with the year 1922 in memorializing the outstanding heroes of baseball.

The American League is about to erect a monument to the national game in the national park at Washington. This monument will display prominently a tablet upon which is to be inscribed the star players of the league.

The first name on the monument will be that of George Sisler, the great first baseman of the St. Louis Browns, who was voted the most valuable player of the American League for the 1922 season.

Below the name of the Brown star will appear that of Babe Ruth, the great Yankee outfielder, who received the highest possible vote as 1923's most valuable player.

There is no reason why the names of those two great players should not appear on a monument which is designed to hand down to posterity the record and fame of the game's outstanding stars.

Sisler, beyond doubt is, or has been, one of baseball's greatest players; and Ruth, if not the greatest of them all, surely has been the most spectacular.

However there are reasons too obvious to mention and too numerous to recount why the list should not start with the star of 1922.

If the United States Gvoernment should decide to erect a national monument as a memorial to its great war leaders, it most certainly would not start with General Pershing. It would not head the list of foremost statesmen with the outstanding national figure of 1922. It would not pass by the name of Lincoln simply because the appropriation for the monument and the motive which inspired it came after his day.

The American League monument never will live up to the purpose for which it was designed if its tablet does not bear the name of Ty Cobb.

Memory and the record books are not necessary to recall the deeds of the great Cobb, whose record over a long stretch of years is the greatest in baseball.

Technically, the American League board of directors might feel that it has not the province to dig into the past and pull out dusty names for embellishment, but it does not have to go down deep in the archives for proof of Cobb's right to a ranking with the greatest of all stars.

It is safe to assert that if the question of Cobb's right to a place on the tablet would be put to a vote of every baseball writer in the country. Cobb's name would get on the tablet without a negative ballot.

Perhaps it would be courting trouble to go back in history on the quest of deserving names. Napoleon Lajoie would get a lot of votes and many other stars of yesterday would also be advanced as worthy candidates, but Cobb should not be made to suffer through the fear of discrimination against others.

Tris Speaker, that valiant leader of the Cleveland Indians and regarded by many as one of the greatest of all outfielders, certainly deserves some recognition and the American League monument never will be complete, representative or official without him.

Speaker was more than a player. His personality helped greatly to give character to a game and standing to a profession that was not always looked upon as good sport for a young man.

Eddie Collins, greatest of all second basemen and an outstanding figure in the modern game where brain has been pushed to the front as a big factor, deserves recognition.

Perhaps Collins should be among the great for the simple reason that he was one of the few who remained clean in that bad scandal of 1919.

That year will be a tough one to get over in putting down baseball's history, and nothing would help more to erase the record of that dark spot than the name, "Eddie Collins," and the date, "1919," after it.

From recent statements made by John A. Heydler, President of the National League, the older organization this winter will approve an appropriation for a similar monument to perpetuate the name and fame of the National League's outstanding stars.

Unless the National League should decide to recognize the bygone greats, its monument will be even more historically inaccurate and more unfair than the American League's memorial because there is a bare possibility that the list may not be started until 1924.

Mr. Heydler gave it as his opinion that it would be possible to get a vote on the league's most valuable player for 1923 at any time during the off season as the memory of the baseball writers would still be fresh enough to give a fair decision.

Just as it would be obviously unfair to slight Cobb in the American League, so would it be grieviously wrong for the National League to pass up a chance to pay tribute to that grand "old" Hans Wagner. So also would it be ingratitude to reward Christy Mathewson with a practical admission that his name or his fame was not worthy of being held up as a character of credit to baseball.

The pioneers of baseball, especially the patriarchs of the National League, should not be crowded out by names of modern players who are not deserving of such prominence.

DAVID BELASCO AND GEORGE M. COHAN

SAYS: "Gertrude Atherton has created in her latest novel, 'Black Oxen,' a vivid story, tremendously appealing in its searching penetrating analysis of modern life. ... Her people live and grow and are real and the emotion of romance pervades the book. It has the charm of the past and the fascination of the present."

AGREE that "BLACK OXEN" is THE worth while novel of the year.

SAYS: "It has been quite a number of years since I have been fortunate enough to get hold of a story so worth while as Mrs. Atherton's 'Black Oxen.' One cannot find anything modern which is better."

AT THE ROYAL.

RACING CLASSIC FORMS THE BASIS FOR FILM PLAY

"The Kentucky Derby" Now at The Royal—A Romance of Kentucky

Aristocratic blood is pretty likely to be hot blood. And hot blood is frequently as apparent in a son as in the father.

A clever characterization of a Kentucky mint julep Colonel and his "chip-off-the-old-block" son may be seen in "The Kentucky Derby," the Universal-Jewel all star feature showing at the Royal Theatre tonight.

But bigger than that from the standpoint of popular interest is the staging of mammoth scenes in Kentucky, the home of the Derby. The actual Derby classic was filmed for the major scenes in the story. The entire Universal unit under King Baggot's direction went to Louisville and Lexington, where estates of the famous Kentucky racing world were turned over to the film unit for use in the picture.

King Baggot directed "The Kentucky Derby" from George Hull's adaptation of a story by Charles T. Dazey, seen several years ago upon the stage as "The Suburban," one of the most successful melodramas of all time.

Reginald Denny, the dashing, romantic appearing young star, enacts the featured masculine role in "The Kentucky Derby" as the spirited scion of an old family. Lillian Rich, demure and sweet, is the girl his father educated out of charity and who married the old man's son in spite of being a stableman's daughter. Lionel Belmore, Emmett King, Gertrude Astor, Walter McGrail, Wilfred Lucas, Harry Carter, Pat Harmon, Bert Wodruff, Bert Tracey, Anna Hernandez and Verne Winter have roles in support and commendably portray them.

FOUR PERFORMANCES AT ROYAL SATURDAY

In addition to the regular matinee and two performances on Saturday night at 7 and 9, a special children's performance will be given Saturday morning at 10 a.m. "The Kentucky Derby" is clean and wholesome and an exciting horse-race always has a special appeal to the kiddies as well as grownups.

SPECIAL HOLIDAY PROGRAM AT ROYAL

"The Abysmal Brute" With Reginald Denny Starring, Coming to Royal Next Monday

Most people who have read Jack London's books extensively are familiar with that master's use of the phrase, "red corpuscles," and similar terms. He wrote only of he-man heroes. He had a strong personal dislike for the men of soft parlor-made manners and mambypamby characteristics. He instinctively made his men more at home outdoors than in the drawing room, because he was like that himself.

Jack London traveled the world over, and he traveled in adventure style, which is to say in "side-door pullmans" or on tramp steamers. He never hesitated to rub against the rough edges to see how they felt. He hated the feeling of pampered luxury and there wasn't a drop of silk-pillow blood in him. His life history, compiled from personal notes by his wife, Charmain Kittredge London, reads like the adventures of a Crusader whose crusade is against ease and luxury, a war royal upon the easy things of life.

It is altogether fitting that the he-man hero of Jack London's famous novel of a rough-cut man, "The Abysmal Brute," should be played on the screen by Reginald Denny, an actor noted for his utter masculinity. In his private life Denny is a lover of outdoor sports and has just about as strong a dislike for the "soft life" as the adventurous London.

AT THE GRAND.

"THE MAID OF THE MOUNTAINS"

Local theatregoers will soon have the opportunity of seeing what is commonly known as the "World"s Greates Musical Comedy" the "Maid of the Mountains" which comes to the Grand Opera House on Monday, November 12 as a special holiday attraction for a special matinee and evening performance has stood the test with them all for ten years and has not been found wanting. During and after the war this delightful musical comedy played at Daly's Theatre, London, for over five years thereby creating the world's record uninterrupted run. It is in London that this musical comedy play became so well known to our overseas boys. They all had a duty to perform while on leave and that was to see the "Maid". It's popularity with the soldiers of Canada was largely responsible for its tremendous success in Canada three years ago.

Mr. Stanley T. Vermilyea, the well-known composer and producer at the urgent request of all theatre managers in Canada is responsible for bringing this beautiful musical play back to us. Mr. Vermilyea is surrounding Theresa with a high class cast of forty well known favorites and production that will surpass if anything the company that played 3 years ago. We now have a chance to see something really worth while and it should be folly to miss it, possibly our last chance to see this the most delightful of all musical comedies.

BUCK JONES LATEST MELODRAMA AT CAPITOL

Powerful in emotional appeal, the climax of "Second Hand Love," the Charles Jones star vehicle which opens at the Capitol to-night scores with great reaction from the audience.

Deceived by the villian, locked up in the town jail because of his false evidence, Andy, played by Charles Jones, escapes and pursues. He catches Dugg, the unscrupulous dastard, and proceeds to punish him roundly for every sin he had committed against law and mortality.

But Andy, unfortunately, still bears the handcuffs, an insurmountable hindrance. He is being worsted when his dog arrives, trips up Dugg, who falls into the river, and jumps in after him.

ZEV-PAPYRUS RACE ADDED FEATURE AT CAPITOL THEATRE

The much-talked about Zev-Papyrus race in which the famous Papyrus, English Derby winner was defeated by Zev at Belmont Park a short time ago, is an added attraction at the Capitol theatre the last three days of the week. The securing of this attraction so short a time after the actual race had been run is only another example of the progressive and up-to-the-minute policy of Peterboro's leading theatre.

ROBERT W CHAMBERS "THE COMMON LAW" COMING TO CAPITOL

Robert W. Chambers' famous novel "The Common Law" will be the attraction at the Capitol Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. This great story tells vivid romance of a wealthy artist and his model. The cast is headed by Corinne Griffith, Conway Tearle, Doris May, Phyllis Haver and Harry Myers.

AT THE REGENT.

JONES COMING IN FOX "BELLS OF SAN JUAN."

Patrons of the Regent Theatre are to have a real treat when the William Fox production, "Bells of San Juan," starring Charles Jones, opens to-day. Charles Jones, who has been called "the most convincing actor on the screen," is said to be at his best in this Western story of romance and adventure.

Jones, who is cast in the role of the Sheriff of San Juan, is fast becoming one of the leading screen heroes. His feats of daring are especially noteworthy.

The story is one of wild and Woolly Westerners, in which Jones won his fame. He plays the part of a young Westerner who is elected Sheriff to succeed his father who was murdered. He swears to avenge his parent. The keeper of the local dance hall and saloon is suspected and the son of the murdered official brings him to justice.

A pretty love theme is wound through the story. Fritzi Brunette, in the role of a lady doctor, is said to do exceptionally good work.

All in all, "Bells of San Juan" comes to the Regent Theatre with a good box office record and that tells the story. With a goodly amount of praise from press and public in other cities it is bound to please here.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

Those who believe Satan's lie, "Thou shall not surely die," Gen. 3-4, consign countless numbers of men and women to endless torments, and a few to endless bliss. To them the resurrection truth can't be looked upon as glad tidings, seeing they have settled mankind's destiny at death. The scriptures tell us that death, the penalty for sin, has passed upon all men; and that Jesus has paid that penalty in full, by giving himself a ransom for all. 1 Tim. 2.6. It is surely glad tidings to know that all mankind has been redeemed, that all shall live again. It is glad tidings to know that man after being resurrected will not die the second time on account of sin committed in this life. We are given to understand that after being resurrected he shall have ample time and opportunity to turn from sin to righteousness and it will only be after that, that the penalty for sin, the second death shall take place, from which there is no resurrection.

The swimmers have made such wonderful progress that "the best exhibition yet" is looked for on Friday night.

Races will be one of the main events of the evening; 14 pretty prizes have been donated for the different contests. A special silver cup donated by Miss E. Morrow will be the championship prize for the evening for the greatest number of points. Four silver spoons have been donated by Mrs. E. E. Harvey, and the other prizes were donated by the swimming pool committee.

Among the races will be the open race long plunge, relay race, life saving race, racer's back stroke, style swimming (including breast stroke, side, back and crawl.

Diving, including straight dive, running straight dive, side dive, back dive, jack-knife dive.

BUSINESS STIMULATED

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(United Press). —Wall Street was treated overnight to one of the most stimulating business developments occuring in recent months since the first of October, shares of the steel companies have been freely sold on talk of a sharp drop in production, naturally the official figures of the American Iron and Steel Institute, showing an estimated production of 3,547,966 tons of ingots in October, compared with 3,316,166 in September, was a surprise including working days only, the daily average production last month was only one per cent below September. The Ingot is the basis for finished steel production and is a much better barometer in guaging the Steel industry than pig iron one thing is evident from the October figures, earnings of the Steel Companies in that month should compare favorably with September

Steel common scored a fractional gain in response to this expectation and the whole industrial list showed a strong tone in the early dealings. Congoleum made a new high at 170, up 35 since its listing on the stock exchange. Final earnings for the year are expected to be about 18 a share on 240,000 shares of common outstanding. All plants are running at capacity and are sold well ahead. The completion of extensions will increase capacity next year forty per cent.

LOYAL BERLIN GOVERNMENT TROOPS CAPTURED LUDENDORFF AND HITLER FOLLOWING ONE DAY OF CIVIL WAR

Monarchists' Victory Was Short-lived, Ending With Surrounding of Former Kaiser's Chief of Staff and Wounding of Hitler—Bavarian Coup Abortive.

BERLIN THREATENED

LONDON, Nov. 9.— (Special.)—Official advices received by the British Foreign Office from Berlin confirm the press reports that Adolph Hitler has declared himself Chancellor of Germany, with General Ludendorff as Minister of War and Commander in Chief of the German Army.

The members of the Cabinet are in continuous session in Berlin and are determined to protect the Republic. It is believed in the capital that the Reichswehr will remain loyal to the Central Government.

A Wolff Agency message received here, says that Hitler, in his speech of yesterday, in which he announced his intention of directing the "Provisional Government of the German Empire," declared:

"To-morrow will see the constitution of a Nationalist Government in Germany, or it will see us dead. There is no middle course."

Adoph Hitler has issued a statement declaring Munich "henceforth will be the seat of the Germ... Imperial Government," a despatch from the Bavarian capital said to-day.

Against Jew Government.

The Bavarian Monarchists movement is "directed against the Berlin Jewish Government," Adolph Hitler said when he seized power in Munich last night, a News Agency despatch from the Bavarian capital said to-day.

Hitler entered a hall where former Preimer Von Kahr was speaking, the despatch said, escorted by a strong detachment of armed men, and announced the new government.

The despatch quoted Hitler as saying the new government would break existing treaties.

"To-day begins the National revolution," Hitler asserted. "To-morrow will find in Germany a strong National government."

Communications Cut.

Communiction between Berlin and points in Bavaria were blocked soon after the Monarchist coup, though newspaper representatives talked with persons in Nurnburg early to-day.

From the conversation over the

STILL ANOTHER FRENCH NOTE

Explains Position Toward Proposed Conference of Experts on German Reparations Question.

PARIS, November 9 (Special to The Examiner). — The French Foreign Office to-day published a note explaining the position of France toward the proposed conference of experts to determine Germany's capacity to pay reparations.

The note reiterated France's position that the conference is useless if it is to consider the poverty or prosperity of Germany in the future, as that cannot possibly be determined.

The note said the proposed conference should first deliver to the Allies a statement of Germany's resources at home and abroad, and then indicate what part of these resources can be used for the payment or reparations, and how.

Finally, the note said, the experts should determine how Germany can restore her financial situation.

Any plan of the experts, the note made clear, must not include the possibility of long term payments by Germany, nor an effort to settle the whole problem of reparations immediately.

TO JAIL FOR THANKSGIVING

Such May Be the Fate of Nine Directors and Officials of Home Bank.

TORONTO, November 9. Canadian Press. — Immediately following the refusal of Mr. Justice Smith, presiding in the Criminal Assize Court here to-day, to grant them a speedy trial or conspiracy charges preferred against them in connection with the suspension of the Home Bank, ten directors and officials of that institution placed themselves in the custody of the sheriff of York County, and through their counsel asked that they be placed on trial.

Application was first made to Judge Denton but he declined to exercise any jurisdiction in the mat.

Request was Refused.

Judge Emerson Coatsworth also refused to accommodate them or to renew their bail, with the result that they will remain in custody until bonded by a High Court Judge.

It is probable that the bonds cannot be arranged before Tuesday, so that the defendants may eat their Thanksgiving dinner in jail.

Adapting themselves to circumstances the defendants communicated with their relatives, informing them of their position and had luncheon sent to their quarters adjacent to the courts at the city hall.

Special Crown Prosecutor D. L. McCarthy left the court soon after Mr. Justice Smith traversed the trial of the accused until the January assizes, and was not present when defence counsel made their applications to County Judges for a speedy trial. It will be necessary for him to appear with other counsel engaged in the case before a High Court Judge in order that bail might be renewed.

Nine Defendants.

The nine defendants who are in custody at the courthouse are: R. P. Gough, S. Casey Wood, W. J. M. Stewart, F. J. B. Russill, directors, O. G. Smith, Chief Accountant, Sidney H. Jones auditor, and E. A. Calvert, General Manager, all of Toronto; G. A. Barnard and Lieut.-Col. Clarence Smith, directors, of Montreal.

H. J. Daly, President of the Home Bank, who is the tenth defendant, did not appear in court owing to illness.

CRADLE OF GERMAN REPUBLIC STILL ROCKS BADLY

Centre of all political thought in Germany is the Reichstag. Here is where the Cuno government fell, and where the Stressemann government is struggling to keep a young government alive, a task which many believe hopeless. Before the Reichstag stands the statue of Bismark, Germany's greatest individual hero.

KIWANIS CLUB HEARD ADDRESS LAND PROBLEM

Land Settlement Policy May Be Changed to Meet New Conditions That Crop Up.

MUST HELP SETTLER

Major E. J. Ashton of the Soldiers' Settlement Board Ottawa was the speaker at to-day's Kiwanis Club luncheon. Major Ashton gave an interesting talk on the settler problem as its effects Canada and intimated that in a few days word would come from Ottawa concerning some changes to be made in the present policy of the government In view of the huge railway deficits, said the speaker the country canont afford any more settlement extensions that will take the settler away from the existing railway lines. The question of settlement is a changing problem that can be divided into three phases. The first phase was the pioneer stage. Here the speaker referred to some of the early efforts at settlement and the hardships endured. The same difficulty that existed in these days exist to-day to a large extent. One of the chief problems is to bridge the gap between the time the land is first broken and the crop is harvested. This is where the settler needs help, said Major Ashton.

The speaker was one of a number who many years ago settled in the northern part of Saskatchewan when money and conditions were better than they are to-day. Even under these conditions it was a difficult proposition for green settlers to make their home out of the wilderness. In 1917 the Soldirs' Settlement Act was passed and in 1919 a new act was passed. Settlers are placed in three classes according to their qualifications. The day of the free land is gone. Land that is now free is too far from the railways or is no good. At the present time there are six millions acres of free land within fifteen miles of railways but it has been picked over by the settlers who came out years ago and they did not leave the best. The years 1901 to 1911 represented a wonderful era of development and settlemnt of Canadian lands. At the present time every effort is being made by the department to keep the settler on the land. The speaker favored an influx of the British races in preference to newcomers from central Europe. The latter in many cases made good citizens but many difficulties stood in the way of satisfactory settlement. The chairman today was Kiwanian Frank Dawson and to-day's guests were Dr. N. H. Sutton and Mr. C. H. Pennefather.

TRAFFICKING CHARGE AGAINST JAIL GUARD REACHED END HEARING

Female Ex-Prisoner Claims She Gave Letters to Twigg—Guard Declares He Never Gave Her Tobacco — Magistrate Refused Women's Evidence Without Corroboration.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

KINGSTON, Nov. 9.—Claiming that she had given Guard Arthur Twigg several letters and notes and that she had received tobacco, papers and matches from him, a woman ex-prisoner of the Portsmouth Penitentiary was called in rebuttal evidence in the case against Twigg, that of trafficing, yesterday. She stated further that these communication with Twigg were carried on for some time but the accused, on being placed in the box flatly denied the allegations. The evidence for the crown and for the defence was concluded yesterday, and after Magistrate Farrell had intimated that he would not accept the evidence of women of the stamp of those who were called by the crown, he told both counsel that there were phases of the case which he desired to review and that he would let them know of his decision .

Geo. Laturney

Mr. George Laturney, hand-writing expert, who was giving evidence when the court was adjourned on Wednesday, was again on the stand yesterday. He continued his statement regarding the differences he saw in the reports made out by Twigg and the letter alleged by the prosecution as having been sent to Toronto by him. He referred to a difference in the formation of the Capital E, and also in the Capital T. and felt that the documents were written with different pen-nibs. Witness stated that in his opinion a different person addressed the envelope than the person who wrote the letter.

Regarding a memo alleged to have written in February or March by on of the women in Toronto witness said that in his opinion the writing was comparatively fresh and the ink had not faded as much as would be looked for had the memo been written some months ago.

This concluded the evidence for the defence and Mr. Rigney then stated that a witness he had summoned had not put in an appearance This was due to the fact that she had to come some distance to the city, and Magistrate Farrell adjourned the court for a few minutes to allow her to get to court.

Ex-Prisoner on Stand

After a wait of about fifteen minutes the witness appeared and court re-opened.

The witness stated that she was in the penitentiary for over two

Increased Activity in Grain Movement Is Expected Shortly

LINDSAY, November 9. Special. — The grain shipments over the C. P. R. and C. N. R. lines through Lindsay and Peterboro, have been fluctuating during the past several days, but this condition is only temporary. From now on there will be increased activity on both lines until harbors at the terminals freeze up and put an end to lake navigation. The boats are making every minute count, and the first prayer of the railwaymen is that navigation will keep open for some weeks yet.

PRESENT JEWELS TO ODDFELLOWS OF LOCAL LODGE

Bros. A. J. Johnston and D. H. Moore Get Tangible Testimony for Fifty Years' Membership.

Last evening the Peterboro Lodge No. 111, Independent Order of Oddfellows, held their regular meeting, which was marked by various presentations to members, including jewels awarded to Bro. A. J. Johnston and Bro. D. H. Moore, both of whom have finished a continuous half-century of membership in the Order, twenty-five-year jewels to seven others, and gifts to departing members.

Presentations were made by Bro. T. C. Elliott, P.G., and suitable replies were made by the members. Bros. Johnston and Moore, along with their fifty-year jewels, were also presented with gold-headed canes, suitably engraved.

Twenty-five-year jewels were presented to Bros. F. Brown, Dr. J. H. Eastwood, Geo. Evans, Wm. Gibbs and Jas. Long. Bros. Geo. Duncan and E. Kendry, both of whom are also twenty-five-year veterans, were absent from the city.

Bro. Elliott, on behalf of the members of Peterboro Lodge, also presented to Bro. F. Read, P.G., and Bro. W. H. Barry, P.G., both of whom are leaving the city soon to reside in the United States, with a gold-filled fountain pen and an Eversharp pencil, expressing regret at losing members who had been active workers in all branches of the Order, ready and willing at all times to do their share in the work of the Lodge.

Bro. N. King, on behalf of the members of Mount Hebron Encampment, presented Bro. Read and Bro. Barry with sets of military brushes.

Bro. F. Read and Bro. W. H. Barry replied, thanking the members for the beautiful gifts and the kindness shown them, and for the good wishes for their success.

The Lodge closed and adjourned to the dining-room, where a banquet was served by the ladies of the Rebekah Lodge, Bro. T. C. Elliott acting as chairman. A short programme of speeches and song concluded with the singing of the National Anthem. A feature of the banquet was the presence of four members who have been for the past

TO SUE FOR SALARY OF POLICE CHIEF NEWHALL LOCAL DIVISION COURT

Then Carry Friction Between City Council and Police Commissioners to Court of Appeal--This is Contemplated Course to Be Pursued

WILL POLICE CITY

While not retreating one foot from their position adopted with regard to expenditures by the Police Commission, Council, or at least members of its Legal Committee, recognize that this city must have police protection after November 15, when the police department's appropriation of $25,000 will have been overdrawn by about $100. In fact, from the impression conveyed by an informal discussion of the situation by the city's Legal Committee last night, there seems no doubt but what the police force will continue on duty as heretofore until the end of the year, pending a ruling on the existing friction between the Police Commissioners and Council by a court of appeal. For, as Ald. M. J. Maher put it, there is no acrimony entertained against the force in general, but Council feels that the Commissioners have not been judicious in their expenditures, which the former believes they have a right to control.

Although no definite action was actually proposed by committee, and while varied views were exchanged, it seemed to be finally understood, in majority, that some arrangement should be made for paying the police for the last six weeks of this year without prejudicing Council's position.

Chief's Salary Short.

In the meantime, R. R. Hall, acting for the Commissioners, will not carry the dispute before a single judge in the Supreme Court of Ontario, demanding a mandamus that Council advance money needed for police protection from November 15 to December 31, but he will sue in the Division Court for Chief Newhall's salary, and then the case is to be carried to the Court of Appeal.

Such are the proceedings now in view, it is understood, after November 15, when Council's appropriation for the police will fall short of some $100 for paying police salaries.

What appears to be a rather inconsistent feature of the Act governing this situation, is that it provides that while policing the city shall be assured by its Council, still that body cannot hire a police force. At least such was an interpretation of the act offered in committee last night.

Of course, Council is perfectly alive to the fact that the Police Commissioners have no funds with which to pay the force when Council's appropriation for payment is exhausted, but they hope to have the whole issue between them and the Commissioners thrown wide open in a Court of Appeal, resulting in judgment giving future city councils

WILL ENLARGE GARBAGE AREA

New Properties Added to List on Petition of Owners—Council's Property Com. Met.

The city's property committee, of which Ald. Malcolm McIntyre is chairman, authorized last night the advertising for tenders for removal of garbage and other refuse during the year 1924.

On motion by Ald. Nagel Phelan and Joseph Crowe committee decided that:

The following properties be added to the garbage collection area. On Aberdeen Avenue, from Benson Street to Aylmer Street and residence No. 788 Aylmer Street; Aylmer Street from Aberdeen Avenue to Manning Avenue; and Manning Avenue (north side only) from Aylmer Street to Benson Avenue; also Nos. 365 and 369 Edinburgh Street.

This extended area was petitioned for by ratepayers.

Deputy M. O. H.

Committee did not accede to M. O. H. Dr. T. W. H. Young's request that his daughter, Dr. Phyllis V. Young, be appointed deputy officer of health, at no expense he said and to the advantage of the commission.

Ald. Fife contended that council's acquiescence in Dr. Young's request would mean shifting responsibility on to council which it should not incur.

Ald. Morrison differed with Ald. Fife and could see nothing wrong in the request which seemed to him like simply investing Dr. Phyllis V. Young with the power of an attorney so to speak.

Ald. Fife—"He can have her services without our appointing her."

The chairman agreed with this view.

On motion by Ald. Fife and Crowe Dr. Young will be advised that committee cannot see its way clear to recommend such appointment.

Comfort Station

In response to the Board of Health's recommendation that a comfort station be provided for women somewhere in the centre of the city committee decided that on motion by Ald. Crowe and Phelan the chairman look into the matter of cost and location and report.

While all recognized the need of such a convenience for women funds are so low that it seems hardly likely that this station will be provided for by this year's council.

Sanitary Conveniences

A recommendation from the Board of Health that several houses be fitted with sanitary conveniences on the instalment plan for payment of cost was laid over for future consideration.

The spirit of the by-law providing that where necessary sanitary conveniences be installed by the city to be paid for by owners of the properties in

THE NATIONALIST COUP IN BAVARIA CASTS LUDENDORF AS THE SUPREME HEAD OF THE NEW GOVERNMENT

LLOYD GEORGE RETURNING TO MANY CHANGES

Changing Political Situation May Give Him Dominance — Series of Welcomes on Homecoming.

WITH FREE TRADERS.

LONDON, Nov. 8. — Lloyd-George will return to Great Britain tomorrow to find an entirely new political situation and one investing him with far greater political experience and curiosity than he could possibly have forseen when he started on his tour to Canada and the United States.

Moreover, it is a situation which may easily give him dominance to which he has for a long time been a complete stranger.

At Southampton where he lands, and also in London, plans accordingly are all prepared to give the former Prime Minister a warm welcome which will accentuate his revived importance in political affairs. Mr. Lloyd-George will be presented with the freedom of the city at Southampton and the ceremony will be made the occasion of a great gathering of his political adherents, which his progress from the railway station in London to his Chelsea home will be in the nature of a triumphal procession.

Back to Politics

Plunging forthwith into the political whirl Mr. Lloyd-George will dine to-morrow with Sir Alfred Mond, who was a minister in the Lloyd-George Cabinet, and meet Winston Spencer Churchill and other national Liberal Party leaders.

It is only a bare fortnight since Premier Baldwin at Portsmouth announced his belief that the remedy for unemployment was a protective policy and only a year when Premier Bonar Law, at a time when unemployment was as bad as, or worse than it is now, gave a pledge that there should be no change in the country's fiscal policy during the life of the present Parliament.

Now although the Cabinet includes some free trade ministers, an active campaign is being waged all over the country for and against protection and the air is full of rumors of a coming general election to get rid of the pledge given by Mr. Bonar Law and so aid the strong protectionist party within the Conservative ranks to push their policy.

Whether a general election will come quite soon as general gossip assumes is a moot point. The Premier himself has said nothing to justify such expectation, nor has he very clearly defined his protective policy, except to admit that it cannot include duties on meat or wheat.

With Free Traders

It is this new situation which gives vast interest to the two personalities Lloyd-George and Churchill who have been for a long time out of the immediate political field. Protection will be fiercely fought by both Liberal and Labor Parties, and both Mr. Lloyd-George and Mr. Churchill are expected to be found on the free trade side.

Added interest arises because this brings up the possibility of a reconciliation between the two opposing wings of the Liberal Party, led respectively by Mr. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd-George. Should this conciliation materialize it will have a tremendous influence on the political struggle bringing two first class platform fighters to the ranks of the Government's opponents while the Govenment itself is notably weak in good platform orators.

Parliament will reassemble next Tuesday and events in the coming weeks will be watched with intense interest. Present indications point to general elections in January, but nothing is likely to be definitely known until parliament meets.

Want One Year As Mayor's Term

CHATHAM, Ont., Nov. 8.—The Ontario Legislature will be asked to amend the City of Chatham bill to reduce the term of Mayor from two to one year if the plan of Alderman-elect E. C. Briscoe is successful. Mr. Briscoe said to-day that he would bring the matter to the attention of the new council at the first meeting. Although the two year term has only been in vogue for the past two years there is considerable criticism of the scheme. Last year, with no mayoralty contest the aldermen and school board were elected by acclamation. This year there were keen contests for aldermanic seats as well as for the Board of Education. It is felt that one year term for mayor will create more interest in the elections and will also give aldermen aspiring for the mayoralty honors a better opportunity.

FRANCE SENDS WARNING NOTE OF OPPOSITION

Will Not Agree to the Establishment of Military Dictatorship in Berlin — Would Repudiate the Reparation Debt.

FOCH WATCHING.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—France warned Germany yesterday that this government cannot remain a disinterested spectator in the event of an attempt to establish a military nationalsit dictatorship in Berlin.

The representtations presented through the French Ambassador in the German capital, were communications aspiring dictators were told to keep their hands off.

France has no intention of interfering with Germany's internal affairs, it was said at the Foreign Office to-night, but a return of the militarist party to power in Germany would mean the almost certain repudiation of the Treaty of Versailles. It is believed here that the opposition of the Nationalists to the succeeding German Republican Governments has been due to what they regarded as the lukewarmness of these governments in their resistance to the execution of the treaty.

Repudiate Debt.

The advent of a military dictatorship in Berlin would make useless any more discussion as to experts' committee to investigate Germany's capacity to pay, as the policy of the new regime would be absolute repudiation of the reparation debt. Hence, the French Government decided upon the warning not only as being opportune, but necessary.

It is known that Marshall Foch, who is closely watching developments in Germany, has come to the conclusion that a new tide of Pan-Germanism is rising. He has said that there is coming in Germany a Nationalist movement comparable with that which followed the downfall of Napoleon, when Prussia was given the post of watchman of the Rhine, and that the Allies would be stupidly blind if they failed to see and provide for it.

Troops Not Called.

The question has been a subject of discussion among the military advisers to the Inter- Allied Council of Ambassadors, but extreme rumours circulated here to the effect that France is arranging to call out two contingents of troops are declared preposterous in official circles.

Prevent Calamity.

NO PERMANENT EXECUTIVE OF EMPIRE GROUP

One Important Question Apparently Evaded By Imperial Conference — No Central Body Is Formed.

"Unseen" Work Useful.

LONDON, Nov 8.—(By the Associated Press).—The Imperial Conference is expected to complete its labors to-morrow. It has however, again evaded one important question namely, the constitutional question of the relations of the dominions and colonies to the motherland and to each other; hence, there will still be no central body maintained in London to represent the conference permanently or carry out its political or economic recommendations.

Presumably the conference will, as heretofore, meet in London at stated intervals in a purely advisory capacity. All its decisions and recommendations will need to be submitted to the various parliaments concerned. Some of its resolutions will be kept secret and the stated proceedings will be printed in two volumes, one, confidential for the governments concerned, and the other for the public.

Preference on Wines

The details of the British Government's new proposals relative to preference on wines were presented at the economic section to-day. The first doubles the existing preference of two shillings on the duty of six shillings per gallon on wines exceeding a strength of 30 per cent. Thus the empire rate will be two, instead of six shillings. The second proposes an increase of from 30 to 50 per cent., in the preference on the surtax of 12 shillings six pence, on sparkling wines. Thus the empire surtax will be six shillings three pence instead of 12 shillings 6 pence.

The Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin, testifying before the Conference to the Home Government's gratitude for the help received, expressed the view that the "unseen" work of conference has been extra ordinarily useful.

An official report of the speeches, issued to-night, shows that the British Government made a further promise to the conference that if any further duty was placed on malting barley or hops Empire, products would be given a preference of one third.

Australian Disappointment

Premier Bruce of Australia in his speech laid stress on the great urgency that something should be done for Australia's beef industry and evidently was disappointed at Mr. Baldwins promise that there should be no tariff on meat or wheat. He insisted that this was a matter of first class concern to Australia, which wanted to insure a British market for Empire products. Mr. Bruce said there was a strong belief in Australia that the only effective means for obtaining that object was a tariff with preference, and in this connection, since the British Government had ruled a tariff out he thought it a pity that the conference committee had ruled out the alternative methods of subsidies, import licenses and the stabilization of prices. He believed these alternations deserved longer discussion than the committee had been able to give them.

Mr. Bruce, continuing, said he foresaw the possibility in the not distant future of Russia revivjng and sending huge exports of grain abroad, whcih would be a new danger for the dominions and Great Britain with their higher standard of living than obtajns in Russia.

Forestall Crisis

Dilating on the serious condition of the world today debarred from natural markets through the war and with tens of thousands, even millions, of men out of employment, Mr. Bruce warned the conference that things might reach such a crisis for the whole Empire that it would become urgent to put through some revolutionary remedies. Surely, he said it would be better to try to avoid this today by strenuous efforts to find means for marketing Empire productions.

Mr. Bruce believed that in the present urgent situation proposals which a few years ago would have been considered utterly impossible now would be listened to. The entire speech of the Australian Premier voiced desire to see a protective tariff with preference to the dominions.

Premier Massey of New Zealand, fully supported Mr. Bruce's views He expatiated on the urgency of finding means to compete with the Argentine and South American beef trade.

LEADER OF BAVARIAN FASCISTI PROCLAIMS NEW ADMINISTRATION

Adolf Hitler at Head of 600 Troops Announces Overthrow of Government Is Political Adviser to Ludendorf.

DRAMATIC SURPRISE.

MUNICH, Nov. 9.—(Canadian Press)— The Bavarian Government has been declared overthrown by Adolf Hitler, the Fascist leader, and the administration placed in the hands of General Ludendorf, as Commander-in-Chief.

Dr. von Kahr, the military dictator in Bavaria, had just finished addressing a patriotic manifestation in the Burgerbrau yesterday, when Hitler entered at the head of 600 men. Hitler announced that the Government had been overthrown and was replaced by a new Government with General Ludendorf as Supreme Head, and Hitler as political adviser.

Former Chief of Police von Poenter has been named as Administrator of the country and General von Loessow, Minister of War.

Military Demonstration.

After Hitler's declaration his troops drew a cordon around the Burgerbrau. About ten o'clock last night troops of the Oberland and Empire flag organizations concentrated on the Burgerbrau and occupied different quarters of the city, chiefly the squares.

Conferences are being held within the Burgerbrau and it is reported that Dr. von Kahr is attempting to negotiate a settlement wih Hitler. The attitude of the police and the Reichswehr has not yet been disclosed.

Those who gathered in the Burgerbrau, which is a famou Bavarian beer cellar, where members of Nationalist patriotic organizations, to whom Dr. von Kahr read a manifesto to the German nation denouncing the principles of Marxism. The reading of the manifesto was greeted with applause, and Hitler's sudden entry with strong forces was something in the nature of a dramatic surprise.

Seize Telegraph.

The troops of the Oberland organization, which occupied numerous strategic points in the city, carried the colors of the Reich. Meanwhile the Bavarian police occupied the telegraph offices, while some of Hitler's men took possession of the office of the Neueste Nachrichten.

General von Lossow, who has been named as War Minister, is Commander-in-chief of the Bavarian Reichswehr. The Central Government recently demanded his withdrawal from his impost as commander, but Bavaria refused to oust him.

QUIET IN BERLIN.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—There was no sign of the Bavarian Nationalists on the Berlin horizon to-day; their threatened descent upon the Reich Capital may have been delayed for a day or two, or abandoned entirely, the latter belief seeming to prevail here. All indications point to the fifth anniversary of the republic tomorrow passing as quietly as previous anniversaries, when the predicted dramatic events never materialized.

Not a single shot was fired through the Reich to-day, and, curiously enough, no disorders of any importance were reported, which is an usual occurrence in modern Germany.

Begin Offensive

From Paris comes the news that Adolph Hitler's troops have begun an offensive movement toward Berlin, according to despatches to Paris morning newspapers from Berlin. Same despatches say that Hitler has proclaimed General Ludendorff dictator and himself Chancellor of the whole of Germany's Reichs.

Played the Races Even in Poorhouse

LONDON, Nov. 9.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Suspecting the prevalence of betting in Westminister Workhouse the master of the institution carried out a raid on Cesarewitch Day and confiscated several pounds, principally coppers, found in the possession of an elderly inmate and various punters. The guardians resolved that the proceeds of the raid should be devoted to the purchase of mince pies for the inmates at Christmas.

WINNIPEG CHURCHES PLAN AMALGAMATION

WINNIPEG, Nov. 9.—(Canadian Press)—Negotiations for the fusion of Central Congregational Church and St. Stephen's Church, Presbyterian, two of Winnipeg's largest churches, are now under way, it was announced yesterday. The amalgamation plan is being considered by special committees who will report to the official boards of their respective churches, following which the congregation will be asked to decide for or against the union.

Damp Cotton Caused Fire Aboard Vessel.

HAVRE, Nov. 9.— The British steamer Hannington Court, which reported by wireless Tuesday that she had a fire in her cotton cargo, reached port yesterday. Firemen were called upon to assist in extinguishing the fire, which is in only one hold. The fire is said to have been due to spontaneous combustion. The cotton is declared to have been damp from the rainfall when the steamer was loaded at Galveston, Texas.

The agents of Llyod's announ that they will not be able to estimate the damage done to the cargo until later, probably Saturday.

Takes the Place of Medicine

Taking medicine for constipation is harmful, because it is unnatural. Nature's corrective is bran. It keeps the internal organs working regularly. Tillson's natural Bran is the one effective bran because it is the one pure, natural bran. It is not treated or cooked in any way.

MOVING TOO FAST.

The Moderation League of Saskatchewan is endeavouring to rush that Province back into the "wet" column, but is not likely to succeed in its present programme, which calls upon the Government to establish a policy of Government control at once without the formality of submitting the question to the people by way of a referendum.

There would be no justification for any such step.

The verdict in Alberta may be construed as an indication of the fact that a referendum in the sister Province would have a similar result, but the Legislature would have no sound reason for accepting that construction as a mandate to proceed with the substitution of Government control for the present prohibition policy.

The Saskatchewan Moderation League will have to justify its name by showing moderation in its requests.

The first step should be to convince the powers-that-be that a referendum should be submitted.

But it is asking a little too much to ask the Government to overthrow prohibition without giving the people of the Province a chance to state their opinion.

And the Government is certain to take that view of the situation.

LABOUR'S ENTRY.

The announcement that the Trades and Labour Council will hold a meeting shortly to endorse candidates for the civic elections will add spice to the municipal campaign.

In fact, it is the first concrete sign that the elections are drawing near, and that it is time for the citizens generally to show some interest in the question of the personnel of the city's board of management for next year.

Labour has had its ups and downs in municipal politics, and the present attempt to come back on a large scale cannot fail to impart more interest than usual to the annual election.

It will also serve to bring out a larger field of candidates, and for that reason will be welcomed even by those who cannot see any reason why representatives of any particular organization should be candidates as such.

Peterborough needs renewed interest in her municipal elections, and if the Trades and Labour Council by throwing its hat into the ring helps that interest, it will have been of considerable public service.

There will be a mayoralty contest this year as well as elections for the Council, Utilities Commission and Board of Education, and it should be the aim of every citizen who has the welfare of Peterborough at heart to do what he can to secure the candidature of men who are capable of transacting the city's business efficiently, economically and with vision.

THE POPPY DAY CAMPAIGN.

Tomorrow is Poppy Day and the Great War Veterans Association is asking the people of Peterborough to co-operate in making the day a complete success.

The use of the Flanders poppy as the "flower of remembrance" in connection with the celebration of the anniversary of the armistice is multiplying this year for it is expected that a number of the city churches will decorate their honour rolls with the little red emblem.

It is suggested too that householders should use the poppy much as the service flags were employed during the war, in the front window as a sign that the inmates have not forgotten the men who gave up their lives overseas.

The large sized poppies are suitable for the purpose and it would be a very effective tribute to the memory of the city's heroic dead if the "flower of remembrance" was to be seen in window after window along the residential streets of Peterborough over Armistice Day.

Another feature that should be remembered by the public tomorrow is that the artificial poppies which will be sold have been manufactured by seriously disabled veterans and that if the distribution this year throughout Canada is sufficiently successful these men will be given employment continuously at this work.

Therefore by buying poppies from the Great War Veterans you are honouring the memory of the men who gave up their lives for the Empire and at the same time for providing employment for disabled veterans and are assisting the G.W.V.A. to look after the ex-service men who need help.

THE ONTARIO SITUATION.

In newspaper interviews Hon. G. H. Ferguson has made it plain that the Ontario Government does not consider the verdict in Alberta sufficient reason in itself for the submitting of a liquor referendum to the people of Ontario.

That is that there will be no referendum in Ontario until the Government is convinced that there is a sufficiently strong public sentiment in favour of such a step.

This official statement by the Prime Minister is not likely to please several of his Toronto followers, who are pressing for the abandonment of the Ontario Temperance Act, but will be accepted by the majority of citizens as a fair and logical position for the Government to take.

If public opinion in the Province is in favour of a referendum that opinion will speedily manifest itself so strongly that the Government will be justified in preparing for a vote of the people on the liquor problem.

On the other hand, if the sentiment in Ontario is lukewarm towards the question, a referendum would not be necessary.

The first step in the campaign, therefore, will be the task of showing the Government that a large percentage of the people want an opportunity to vote upon changes in the method of dealing with the liquor traffic.

The circulation of petitions on a large scale will be the beginning of such a campaign, and it will not be surprising if the dry forces adopt a similar plan, and if, when the Legislature meets, there are presented largely signed petitions from both parties, one asking for a referendum, the other opposing such a step.

MR. JUSTICE MacLEAN.

In politics Mr. A. K. MacLean never quite achieved the position to which his talents and his capacities entitled him. When he first entered Parliament—away back in 1904 he had all the fiery partisanship of youth, plus the Nova Scotia tradition, says the Ottawa Journal. With Mr. Frank Carvell and Mr. E. M. MacDonald he became one of that militant Liberal trio which earned the title of the "Blockers Brigade," with "my party, right or wrong" as his creed. But "A. K." was too much of a philosophic bent of mind to long retain such narrowness. Wide reading, travel, a love of books and leisure, combined with a genius for friendships, soon took him far beyond the circumscribed orbit of partisanship.

In 1917 he was a Unionist. It was patriotism on no easy terms, for in Nova Scotia the man who changes his politics is still pretty much in the class of the man who changes his ligion; but he never flinched from duty. In the Union Cabinet he was a sort of utility minister. He was put up in the House to make ministerial statements; he was chairman of the Economic and Development Committee of the Cabinet; he looked after the Civil Service; and for nearly six months (while Sir Thomas White was ill) he acted as Minister of Finance. If he did not shine resplendently in any of these tasks he at least won recognition as a knowledgeable, able efficient minister.

In the present Parliament, although back in the Liberal fold, Mr. MacLean spoke like an Independent. Progressives sometimes held, indeed, that he spoke like a crusted Tory. Certainly the mere idea of change for change's sake was not a part of his creed.

Personally "A. K." is among the most popular figures in public life. He is quiet and cautious in his manner; and while he seems a little shy and cold he is a most delightful companion. He is a clear, rather arresting speaker, with a faded voice and no convincing gestures; but analytical, softly persuasive, quietly ironical and cool-headed.

He is not of the stuff of which political leaders are made. He is not aggressive. he is too much a philosopher, he is neither militant nor dominant, and he has little vitality and consequently no fire. Undoubtedly his place is on the Bench, interpreting with calm judicial fairness, rather than in the Commons, wearing ideals and convictions to the foibles and follies of politics.

WHO ARE CAPITALISTS?

The Metropolitan press of the United States is marvelling at the increase of life insurance in that country, and we might well do the same thing with regard to Canada. The figures for last year were amazing on both sides of the line. Their significance lies in the fact that insurance is very definitely a form of saving; so that, as the amount invested in policies rises, there is almost an equal gain in concrete capital. This was made apparent during the recent flotation of a very large Dominion loan, when the insurance companies were the principal purchasers. In fact, the belief is gaining ground that the financial power of these companies may soon exceed that of the banks.

The social aspect of the matter really rises above the economic. In a very large sense, those who provide the premiums are the real owners of the money invested, the insurance companies being merely trustees; and from that point of view it will be seen that the accumulation of savings in that form during the past two decades runs into hundreds of millions of dollars. Having realized that much, it follows somewhat logically that holders of insurance policies must be classified as capitalists. They are in the aggregate the potential owners of a vast volume of bonds and other commercial securities.

Karl Marx would have found it impossible to leave these policy holders out of the ranks of capital, and yet the very foundation of his hectic theories is in the declaration that capital is irreconcilably arrayed against the workers—the "proletariat" as he loved to call them. It happens, however, that a very high percentage of the people who carry life insurance are working men, whose right to be so described could not be disputed. They are by every test the very body and backbone of the proletariat; and to clearly grasp that fact is to at once see the absurdity of assuming the natural and inevitable hostility of capital to labor. Every man who owns an insurance policy, a bond, or a savings account is a capitalist, and he could not very well be an enemy to himself.

The buying of insurance has kept pace with education and popular wealth. When we speak of wealth nowadays, however, the word has completely lost the narrow meaning once assigned to it. It no longer denotes the holdings of the few who were recognized as rich. It means the combined possessions of the whole people; for we must all frankly confess that there is not a single enterprise of large proportions, no matter what may be its nature, in which ownership is not shared in considerable degree by the so-called industrial classes, by virtue of their holding of either stocks or bonds. If for no other reason than that they are investors in insurance that would be true, but it is also true in the specific sense.

The time has come when a good deal of the rubbish that is being uttered by professional agitators about capital and labor should be silenced by a calm appreciation of the truth in the matter. There is no such thing as a division of society into those two narrow classes—at all events, not in Canada. Probably there is little of it anywhere, except in the fervid imagination of certain long-haired orators who live by preaching the gospel of discontent rather than by productive toil. Ninety-five per cent. of the capital invested in Canadian enterprises of one sort and another is owned by men and women who work. They do not necessarily wear overalls in every instance; yet they are workers by every fair test. All are capitalists who hold life insurance, and that takes in over seventy per cent. of the population at large.—Ottawa Journal.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Nov. 8.—Confronted with Monday's holiday the efforts of commission men to clean up the market at the Union Stock Yards were quite successful. With 2,200 cattle on offer on Wednesday the sales for the day were a few over 1,800. A few stray loads came in this morning with 88 cattle, 1 calf, 194 hogs and 46 sheep and lambs. Concessions all round made Wednesday's market and a few quick sales were made along the same lines this morning. One load of western butchers steers over 1,100 lbs. each went to a packer at 5 cents a pound and another load of reasonably good heifers, mixed western and Ontario's, at 3 1-2 cents a pound.

There was no market in calves as there was a delivery of only one and a few that came in off the road.

Lambs were also in light receipt. Kit Waugh bought one deck at 10 1-2 cents. The bucks in these weighed about 110 lbs. each and the ewes around 95 lbs. Choice lighter lambs on this basis were thought to figure about 10 3-4 cents.

Wednesday's hogs were sold generally at $8.25 a cwt. f.o.b. and this is expected to rule over the week end despite the efforts of packrs to get the quotation down to $7.75 a cwt.

MONTREAL, Nov. 8. — There was increased activity in the cash grain market here to-day. The flour market showed no change. A fair trade continued in millfeed and rolled oats. Prices for baled hay were firm. A good tone prevailed in the egg market and the potato market was steady. A fair business is passing in eggs. The tone of the cheese market continues easy.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, Nov. 8. — (Canadian Press.)— The situation in the egg market is unchanged. Dealers are working out their storage stocks as there is a general feeling in the trade that United States refrigerators must reach lower levels. WINNIPEG LIVE STOCK.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 8. — (Dom. Live Stock Branch.)—Receipts, 2,250 cattle and calves, 1,200 hogs and 600 sheep and lambs.

There was a poor demand for the general run of offerings on the cattle market this morning and sales were completed at prices twenty-five cents to fifty cents lower than the opening of the week.

The hog market declined 25 cents with packers bidding $7.75 for thick smooths.

The sheep and lamb market opened with a weaker tone, good lambs being priced around $10.00 and sheep from $5.00 to $6.00.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Corn soared to-day to a new high price record for the season and brought about a rally in the wheat market. Wheat, after showing a setback most of the time closed unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 1-2c. higher, December $1.08 1-8 to $1.08 1-4 and May $1.11 1-8 to $1.11 1-4. Corn, influenced by smallness of receipts, finished 1-4 to 1 5-8 and 1 3-4c. up, oats with an eighth to 1-4 and 3-8c. gain, and provisions varying from 5c. decline to 12c. advance.

Wheat started with a downward tendency as a result of lower quotations at Liverpool ,and of British plans for tariff action likely to hamper United States' trade. The fact that wheat was excepted from the measures which were proposed in British plan failed to prevent traders here from putting a bearish construction on the tariff news. Besides, predictions which were current that the United States visible supply total would show a liberal increase Monday counted further as a handicap on bulls.

Throughout the day, however, the notable strength in the corn market operated to check wheat declines, and just before the close was powerful enough to lift wheat prices to a level that averaged a little higher than was the case 24 hours previous. Additional incentives to wheat buyers at the last came from the New York Stock Market advance as well as from the new rise in cotton.

Bulls had things much their own way in the corn market, and selling was confined chiefly to profit-taking on the part of holders. The Government crop report as to corn turned out to be bearish, but many traders were expecting the opposite, and the Government figures were unavailable until after the day's business was ended, and December corn had touched 79 1-4c. a bushel. Oats, like wheat, were steadied by corn.

Provisions were firm in sympathy with corn. Lard attained new high prices for the season.

FRANCE SENDS

the French Government to-day to warn Grmany that it would not tolerate th establishment of a military dictatorship in Berlin, says:

"Should Chancellor Stresemann be replaced by a military dictatorship more or less camouflaged, the new Government would be faced with the problem of finding resources with which to pay its army, the police and the railrooad workers. It would have to resort to a foreign loan, as the interior revenue are insufficient in Germany, thus contracting another foreign debt and thus increasing taxes, the rigid enforcement and military collection of which would cause unrest among the population, leading to revolution.

"A European war or a revolution in Germany would probably be the consequences of a German Nationalist dictatorship. France is acting wisely in attempting to bar the route to these two calamities."

MASQUERADE BY FARM YOUNG FOLK.

Sixty-Five Merry-Makers From Peterboro District in Attendance.

The regular monthly meeting of the U.F.Y.P.O. was held on Tuesday evening, November 6th. It took the form of a masquerade, about sixty-five of the young people of the surrounding district being present. The evening was pleasantly spent in games and music, after which everyone enjoyed varieties of homemade candy.

Before the close of the evening the matter of electing officers for the ensuing year was dealt with. To the delight of all the members Mr. and Mrs. Shields, who have been such a help in the past, and who have always been willing to assist in every way possible, consented to again act as leaders.

The members regret that Mr. Roy Sanderson could not find his way clear to act as president for the coming year, but the club will have an able successor in the person of Mr. Earle Petrie, who was elected by acclamation, with Mr. Gordon Hancock as vice-president.

After much discussion it was decided that Peterboro Club would again participate in the district debates during the coming season.

Delegates elected to attend the convention which is to be held in the W.O.W. Hall, on Saturday, November 10th, at 1p.m., are: Mr. Earl Petrie, Mr. Gordon Hancock, Miss Mae Bennet and Miss Gladys Lewis.

Mr. Earl Petrie was elected to attend the Provincial Convention to be held in Toronto on December 12, 1923.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

MARMORA MIDWEEK CHURCH AFFAIRS

Anglican and Methodist Activities — Arranging For Bazaar.

MARMORA, Nov. 9.—The regular monthly meeting of the A.Y.P.A. was held on Monday evening. The members were divided into two groups for a discussion. This finally took the form of a debate on the question "Is a lie ever justifable?"

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church met on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. Rose. The main item of business discussed was the bazaar which is to be held on December 8. The Ladies are all busy preparing articles for sale. A very dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

The Young People's League of the Methodist church met on Wednesday evening and in spite of the inclement weather there was a splendid attendance. As it was Consecration service a number of new members were received. Miss Myrtle Kennedy read a paper on "The Light of the Bible." When all the points in the contest were counted up the Whites under the leadership of Miss Effie Knox, were considerably ahead.

Master Norman Sopha, the youngest son of Mr. P. Sopha is very ill with pneumonia, developed from whooping cough.

On Wednesday afternoon November 7, at the Methodist parsonage the marriage of Miss Leona Gifford of Peterboro and Mr. Roy Walker of Madoc was solemnized by the Rev. D. R. Clare. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Joseph Willman of Spry's Settlement and the groom by Mr. James Willman.

The Misses Myrtle and Reta Kennedy and Mr. and Mrs. Alec Kennedy motored to Lindsay for the week-end.

The Misses Dora and Edna Reid spent the week-end in Gilmour.

Mr. Lummis, Mr. Inkster and Mr. Sanderson left on Monday morning for a week's hunting at Lake street, Peter, north of Maynooth.

Word came this week that Mr. Riley Jones, who is in Toronto for medical treatment had suffered a stroke.

STIRLING MAN ACCUSED OF THEFT OF $150.00

Found Barricaded in a Room Where He Has Been Living Alone.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 9.—Barricaded in a room, where he has been living alone, a Stirling professional man gave considerable trouble to Provincial Officer N. Maker who was assigned to arrest him on a charge of theft of $150. When Maker motored out to Stirling he could not locate the man, but on returning at night found him barricaded. With little difficulty, the door was forced, and the man taken into custody, and brought to Belleville. Accused who has been drinking heavily, according to rumors, was intoxicated when taken into custody.

It is alleged that a merchant of that town gave accused $150 to deliver to a County official here, but it is claimed that he mis-appropriated the money.

When he appeared in police court Magistrate Masson remanded him to jail until Thursday next. If he can raise $100 bail he will be liberated in the meantime.

WEALTHY JEWS ARE LEAVING BERLIN

Such is Aftermath of Recent Anti-Semitic Disturbances.

BERLIN, Nov. 9.—(United Press)—Curious crowds visited the Jewish quarters to see the aftermath of the anti-Semitic disturbances but although there was much grumbling about "food hoarders" no large scale disorders occurred. An exodus of wealthy Jews is quietly under way, however.

Twenty-five hundred recruits have been added to the Berlin police to cope with further outbreaks and it is learned that 500 arrests have been made in the last few days.

A ironical feature of the hunger and unemployment situation is that, while thousands are starving many of the larger stores are closing down, not caring to sell valuable good for money that may be worthless tomorrow.

KINGSTON SEES INDUSTRIAL BOOM

Only Dye Works in the British Dominions to Locate There.

KINGSTON, Nov. 9.—Kingston is on the eve of having the only dye factory in the British dominions located here, and if the electors vote favorably on the proposition, Dr. F. W. Atack and his associates will immediately commence the building of factories which will house the company.

The discussion on the question arose when the report of the Industries Committee was presented to the City Council as follows:

"That a bonus by-law with an agreement appended between the corporation and Dr. F. W. Atack be submitted to the ratepayers at the time of the municipal election."

Ald. Laturney, chairman of the industries Committee, outlined the agreement with the corporation in which the city is to give the land bounded by River, Orchard and Cataraqui streets, and the water, for the company, and to grant exemption from taxation for ten years. Part of the land is owned by John Richardson, youngest son of the late Senator H. W. Richardson, and the city will have to purchase this. The company will spend $50,000 in buildings, with $25,000 being expended the first year. They will manufacture dyes and pharmaceuticals. The company will have a payroll of $120,000 a year when in full operation.

Dr. Atack stated that he proposed to start on a reasonable scale and work up until a capital of $2,000,000 is attained.

Prof. Arthur Neish, of Queen's University, stated that if his 25 years as teacher was any qualification, he felt that Kingston is on the eve of a great industrial boom by the coming of the company to the city. On the face of it other cities had offered greater inducements, but the presence of Queen's University proved a great advantage to Dr. Atack. "I have always felt," said Prof. Neish, "that Kingston is an ideal place for a dye factory. We have been buying dyes for many years, and paying through the nose for them. Collie's, Ltd., are paying four times what they should for dyes, while the Dairy School pays $4 for butter color, which Dr. Atack can make at $2 and make a handsome profit also. Better dyes are made today in England and the United States than Germany ever thought of making and you can see that when Canada imports over $2,000,000 worth of dyes annually, the new company, if it secured only a quarter of that trade, would have a splendid business. If this company is accepted by the people, it will be the only factory of its kind in the British Dominions.

LARGE CROPS IN UNITED STATES

Preliminary Estimates of Country's Harvest Exceed Five-Year Average.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Large crops of corn, potatoes, apples and tobacco have been grown in the United States this year, preliminary estimates of production issued today by the Department of Agriculture showing each to be better than their five-year earnings.

Corn is a three billion bushel crop for the fifth time and at November 1, farm prices, its value exceeds $2,500,000,000. Production is placed at 3,029,192,000 bushels, or about 140,000,000 bushels more than last year's crop.

Potatoes showed much improvement resulting in an increase of 15,298,000 bushels over the forecast in October. Production is estimated at 416,722,000 bushels, which is about 35,000,000 bushels less than last year's crop.

The apple crop is 193,855,000 bushels, or about 8,000,000 bushels less than last year. The commercial crop is placed at 33,522,000 barrels.

Tobacco production showed a decrease from the crop forecast a month ago, with a total of 1,436,738,000 pounds, or 112,000,000 pounds more than produced last year.

A single teaspoonful of DR. CALDWELL'S LAXATIVE SYRUP PEPSIN Will restore good humor

Mothers! Apply Common Sense

THIS is the era of the prevention of disease and sensible people do not wait until sickness has actually come before remedying the trouble. The crowded hospitals everywhere are sad examples of the results of neglect. Be especially watchful of children. Restlessness, lack of normal appetite and feverishness usually indicate constipation. Stop it that instant with a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin and you will have prevented real sickness. Mrs. C. S. Bungay, 19 Chatham Av., Halifax, N. S. and Mrs. W. F. Hunter, Biggar, Sask., seldom have illness in the family because of their prompt use of Laxative Syrup Pepsin.

A Great Family Laxative

It may be difficult to decide just what medicine to use out of the many that are offered, but it would not be if you knew the facts. There are laxatives, cathartics, purgatives and physics, and they vary in their reaction on the system. Naturally, the stronger the medicine the more it shocks the system, so wise parents never give anything but a laxative to children. Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin is a mild laxative, a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and desirable aromatics, and so appreciated that it is now the largest selling preparation of its kind in the world, over 10 million bottles being used annually. The formula is on every package.

Three Rules of Health

Purchase a bottle of Laxative Syrup Pepsin at a drug store and always keep one in the family medicine chest. Give it to anyone from infant to grandparent, for it is safe, and the cost is less than a cent a dose. You can keep a family healthy with just this simple medicine. Give it for constipation, torpid liver, indigestion, biliousness, headaches, colds and other evidence of bowel obstruction. Dr. Caldwell, who was a practicing physician for 47 years and who originated this formula, had three rules of health that he found very effective among his patients and which you can follow with great benefit: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open.

For Inter-Allied Military Commission Officers in Carrying on Work in Germany.

LONDON, Nov. 9. It is reported here that the German Government in its reply to the recent demand of the Inter-Allied Council of Ambassadors tha t Germany make known what measures it intended to take to insure the functioning of the Inter-Allied ilitary Commission, says it will be unable to guarantee the safety of the Commission.

Germany's negative reply to the French demand for facilities for the InterAllied Military Comission says carry on its work in Germany has caused no surprise in British Official circles where the difficulties of the German authorities under present chaotic conditions are fully realized.

It is the British view that neither Chancellor Stresemann's Cabinet, nor any other German Government, could undertake to give soldiers considering the disturbed and inflamed state of mind of the German people.

Beyond Berlin Control.

Officials here admit that a large part of Germany has got beyond the control of the Berlin authorities and that the Cabinet would be unable to prevent the distracted population from taking things into its own hands. The British Government will officially support the Council of Ambassadors in any further steps it may take to force compliance with its demands, but inwardly the British Government feels it would be futile to try and force protective measures in a country where protection for its own nationals scarcely exists.

VOICE OF PEOPLE IN ALBERTA VOTE

May Make Many Laws But Have Facilities to Repeal Or Amend Them

OTTAWA, Nov. 9.—The Ottawa Citizen said editorially to-day: "There is one aspect of the Alberta liquor referendum as also of the recent one in Manitoba, that deserves note. That is the political significance of the vote. In Canada the people have the final voice in matters of Government. Its constitution gives to the public full liberty to decide its own laws. In few countries could such a vote have been taken with the same facility for recording the opinion of the populace. We may have too many laws, but not many nations have such easily obtainable opportunities to repeal them or amend them.

Found Not Guilty of Death After Quarrel.

MONTREAL, Nov. 9.—After deliberating for ten minutes, the jury in the case of Gerald McAleer charged with man-slaughter in connection with the death of Vincenze Lavoro returned a verdict of not guilty in the Court of King's Bench here yesterday afternoon. It was shown in evidence that Lavoro might have died of injuries sustained when he slipped or was tripped as he passed a runway on the sidewalk on Wellington Street this city. He had been in a dispute with McAlleer who threw him face down to the pavement, but the fractures was at the back of the skull and it was shown he had fallen a second time after the fight was over.

INDUSTRIOUS HEN NOW TRYING A NEW STUNT.

MILTON, Nov. 9. — (Canadian Press). — Walter Dixon, of Nelson, has a hen which is not satisfied with laying exceptionally large-sized eggs but is trying a new stunt. Yesterday she laid an egg which is a freak. Inside the large outer shell, which was very thin, and filled with a watery albumen, floated a second perfect egg with a heavy shell and larger in size than the ordinary hen's egg.

NO STATEMENT IN WASHINGTON

United States and French Views On Conference Reported Still Far Apart

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9. —Final decision as to whether the United Sttaes will find it impossible to participate in an expert inquiry into the reparations situation limited to the present capacity of Germany to meet her obligations apparently still awaits completion of conversations between Secretary Hughes and Ambassador Jusserand.

There were no further developments in relation to the project in Washington yesterday, so far as known. The situation was said authoritatively to be exactly where it was last night when the French Ambasador left the State Department after his second interview with Mr. Hughes for the purpose of explaining Premier Poincare's attitude.

It was learned that officials expect definite developments any moment. The interpretation generally placed upon this expectation was that further instructions to the Ambassador from his Government were necessary before the Washington Administration could decide whether it would approve of the calling of a conference restricted as desired by the French Premier.

In some quarters where there probably is definite knowledge as to details of the Hughes-Jusserand exchanges, it was said that the French and United States viewpoints still were far apart. The impression prevailed that the advices received yesterday by Ambassador Jusserand from Paris and on which his amplification of Premier Poincare's attitude was based in his subsequent talk with Mr. Hughes, had not furnished the Secretary with the exact understanding of the French limitations that the Washington Government feels it must have to guide its actions.

BELIEVED LINDSAY TOOK OWN LIFE

Dying Man's Story of Being Held Up is Frankly Discredited.

HAMILTON, November 9. Canadian Press. — Unless new clues develop it is likely that the officials investigating the shooting of Homer C. Lindsay, will advance the theory at the continued inquest on November 14th that Lindsay took his own life.

Many and startling clues have been in existence since the watch and revolver were found on the mountain side. While many of these leads have proved useless, some of them served to prove, the police state, that Lindsay was beset with troubles and worries.

Provincial Inspector Miller investigated every clue that he thought worthy of investigation. These however have not produced anything tangible enough, it is learned, positively to prove that Lindsay was murdered.

Lindsay's story of being held up by one lone gunsman is frankly discredited.

Declare Freight Rates Are Stifling the West.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 9.—Declaring that high freight rates are stifling the development of western Canada members of the Board of Trade who last night reviewed the case for equalized freight rates, assured the provincial government of continued support in the fight until discriminations have been entirely removed.

The hope of Western Canada was in educating the rest of Canada, members asserted in letting the railway companies understand that the people were "on to them" and in an appeal to the Privy Council to change the laws, if it was finally found that the railway commission as interpreting them correctly.

FIELDING URGES STRICT ECONOMY

Appeals to the Cabinet Ministers to Confine Estimates to the Necessary Outlay.

OTTAWA, November 9. Canadian Press. — An urgent appeal has been made to the Cabinet Ministers by Right Hon. W. S. Fielding to include nothing in their estimates for the year which is not absolutely necessary in the public interest, Hon. J. A. Robb told an Ottawa deputation which waited upon him yesterday with a request that a retaining wall should be constructed along the part of the Rideau Canal passing through the city.

The deputation interviewed Mr. Robb in his capacity as acting Minister of Railways and Canals in the absence of Hon. George P. Graham. Mr. Robb told the civic representatives that they had failed to convince him that the work suggested was of urgent important to navigation, which was the only phase of such a situation that the Department of Railways and Canals would be directly interested in. He suggested that the Ottawa Improvement Association might give consideration to the proposal.

CROSS ARCTIC BY AIRPLANE

U. S. Naval Aviator Will Accompany Amundsen Next Spring.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—A United States' naval aviator will participate in an attempt next summer to traverse the Arctic regions by airplane, the Navy Department announced here. Lieutenant Ralph E. Davison will pilot one of the three planes, making up the convoy which will be commanded by Captain Raold Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer.

Plans do not contemplate a non-stop flight. The expedition will be transported on ships to Spitzbergen in May and an adequate base will be established there. When ice conditions permit, the flyers will be carried by ship to a point about 450 miles from the North Pole, from which the final "take-off" will be made.

Planes of special design will be used, equipped to permit landings on ice, snow or water. Each will be equipped with radio sets for communication with the depot ship at the [illegible] which in turn will have wireless apparatus strong enough to relay the explorers' reports to the world.

The desires of Captain Amundsen to have the United States' Navy represented was declared at the Department to be "an echo of the friendship which existed between him and Rear Admiral Peary," discoverer of the North Pole.

It was suggested that the steamship Maud, which has been drifting in the ice pack two years, may establish contact with the planes by sending out a party to intercept the line of flight.

Paolo switched off all the shaded lamps in the boudoir, leaving only a dim pink night-light in the state-room adjoining, the door of which was ajar. For another moment he stood in the dusk and thought. Then he unlocked the door which led to the deck, opened it resolutely, removed the key, locked the door on the outside and threw back the key through the open window It landed on the divan, close to Betty's side; for Paolo was quite a good shot. He was satisfied with his aim—satisfied indeed with everything, since these things had to be. And when he had contrived to pull the window along its grooves until it was within an inch or two of being closed, he went away softly as he had come.

Sitting on the bottom step of the ladder that was washed gently with the tiny waves, he signalled to his boatman with a lighted cigarette.

CHAPTER LXXXIX

The Third Telegram

Sheridan had not been long gone from Bousaada, when a telegram arrived for him. It was put out of sight until he should return; but when (after his meeting with Nazlo) he rushed back unexpectedly for an hour, in slipshod, oasis fashion, the telegram was forgotten.

Later, when the landlord chanced to remember the folded slip of blue paper, he could do nothing save shrug his shoulders. Le Monsieur should have asked if there was anything for him. He must not expect busy people to keep his affairs at the top of their brains Besides, the message was probably unimportant. These rich Americans and English telegraphed to each other about nothing at all, to save the trouble of a letter And in any case, le Monsieur had said at the very last that he expected to come back next day.

The azure oblong would have remained where it was, for the night, if Madame la Patronne, being consulted, had not advised that it be sent to the room of Mademoiselle. A knock at the door brought forth the duenna. There was a moment's discussion within. Then the sleepy waiter with the telegram on a tray was bidden to take it away again. Monsieur Sheridan alone had authority to read the message addressed to him.

When Miles reached Algiers at the early dawn, a day and a half had passed since his wife's arrival. She had appeared on board "Silverwood" about noon one day; had lunched, rested, gone out for the afternoon; had come back for dinner, had sent her maid on shore, to a charity ball, and had remained up, promenading the deck or sitting in the moonlight till after midnight. She had been seen once or twice, moving about, in her glittering white dress, and had then vanished into her own quarters. It was natural that, after a tiring day and a late night, she should sleep through most of the next morning, and Estelle—who had danced till the small hours—knew better than to disturb her mistress unless she rang.

Even when noon passed, and there had been no sign from Mrs. Sheridan's state-room, Estelle did not go to the door. Madame sometimes consoled herself for abjuring the piqures of morphia or cocaine, (Estelle was in that secret) by taking veronal. Only eight grains, because of her heart, which had been weakened by the anti-fat treatment: and with a light dose like that, Madame often dropped into her best sleep towards morning.

At luncheon time, however, Estelle became vaguely uneasy. Madame dieted herself severely, and with courage, but she was fond of her first dejeuner, small as it was: coffee, and hot, thinly buttered toast. Now, two meals must be combined in one.

Softly the Frenchwoman tiptoed to the window of Madame's bedroom; but it was nearly closed, and the silk curtain within hid the room. Estelle listened, and could hear no sound, though Madame breathed rather heavily when she slept, especially these last few months since she had been worried and unwell.

"I will give her half an hour more and then knock," the maid decided.

So it was half-way between one and two o'clock when the telegram went to Bousaada, bidding Sheridan to start at once.

Just about the time it was sent, by an odd coincidence, Miles' car was spinning away from the hotel door, when Terry stood and waved her hand. If he had gone straight on, he might have reached Algiers at nine o'clock that night. He would then have gone on board "Silverwood" soon after. But he met Nazlo, who had set forth early in the day, long before Estelle thought of wakening her mistress, and consequently long before there was news from the yacht. Sheridan had turned back towards Bousaada, as it happened, instead of going on. He did not leave the little oasis town for the second time, until the hour when, otherwise, he would have been already in Algiers.

The rush through the desert in the night of stars was glorious, and the joy of it went to Sheridan's head like champagne. He was exhilarated, rather than tired by the journey, though his chauffeur looked haggard at the end, till he grinned over his "tip." Again and again Miles had lived through his parting scene with Terry, as a man might order the same reels of a favorite film play to be repeated many times. He had been almost drunk with his own happiness and his memories of the girl—her beauty, her sweetness, her dear innocence—the miracle that she should be his little Cinderella of the past—and that she had forgiven his many sins against her. Betty's figure had been pushed to the far background of his mind. Despite all that Nazlo had said, and though it was certain that she had come to Algiers with some sensational if not sinister purpose, Sheridan did not believe that she, or anyone else could raise an impassable barrier to his happiness.

It was only when he stepped on board the yacht, and saw Captain Yale hastening to meet him along the deck, his tanned face preternaturally solemn, that Betty's importance in his life loomed high and dark once more.

"Well, Yale," Miles hailed the captain. "Here I am, at an unearthly hour But I couldn't get away from Bousaada till nine o'clock last night."

Yale frowned in a puzzled way, as if he didn't quite understand his employer's tone.

"I — I suppose you received my last wire, sir," he ventured with an air of doubt.

"I had two wires," said Miles. "The first told me—er—that Mrs. Sheridan had arrived on board. The second was an answer to mine in which I asked, to make certain, whether it was really you who'd sent the other telegram."

CHAPTER XC

"I didn't get it," Miles answered. The other man's tone caused him to brace himself for some shock.

"Then you don't know?"

"What ought I to know?" The question was swift as a lightning flash.

"I—Mrs. Sheridan was found to be very ill when the maid waked her late yesterday—at one o'clock it was. I telegraphed to you, at the same time we sent on shore for a doctor. He came at once—a Frenchman—but wanted a consultation. The second man was English."

"Well? . . . . Is she better — or worse?" Miles could scarcely speak through the thick beating of his heart. If Betty were dead . . . . He mustn't wish her dead. It was caddish—devilish—to wish a woman to die, to go out of the world she loved. But . . . . it was hard not to wish. Yale seemed to hesitate. Would he never answer?

"She—didn't rouse, sir. About nine o'clock last night it looked as if she responded a little to the remedies—both doctors were working over her, doing their best. If you had come then, the sight of you might have helped to keep her alive. But . . . . in an hour she'd relapsed to where she was before."

A shudder ran through Miles' body. If he hadn't met Nazlo—if he hadn't gone back . . . . . Still, it wasn't his fault. He thanked God he hadn't known at the time what hung upon his decision, because—he might have gone back just the same. He hoped not. But—he would never know now what temptation might have done with him.

"What is the matter with my—with Mrs. Sheridan?" he heard himself ask.

"Well, sir, I'd rather the doctors broke it to you, than me. But they're afraid it must have been—deliberate."

"Deliberate?"

"I mean, she couldn't have given herself such a dose of cocaine and morphia—being used to it, a bit, according to the maid—without knowing what she was about. It seems it was a tremendous dose, sir—would have killed her long before this, if she'd never taken the stuff before."

"Suicide " The word spoke itself.

"Yes, sir, must have been. She sent her maid away; bought the girl a ticket for a masked charity ball; told her not to come back before two o'clock, and to let her alone, even then, let her sleep. When she was found today—not till the maid was afraid to wait any longer—the poor lady was fully dressed as she'd been for the evening. She wasn't lying on her bed, but on a divan in the boudoir next door—locked in, and the key of one of the doors near her hand. Her gold bag was there, too, sir, with the hypodermic syringe inside, and a wee bottle with a drop or two of stuff left in it. After the doctors came, they ahd the maid got Mrs. Sheridan undressed, and put her to bed in her stateroom. But when she rallied, she wasn't conscious enough to speak."

Miles' brain was in confusion. Why should Betty travel all the way to Algiers, just for the sake of killing herself on the yacht, before she had even seen him? Was it because she hoped to give him pain, to make him pity her, in spite of all? Well, she had succeeded He did pity her, with his whole heart. A soul must have suffered deeply, he thought, before it willed to destroy its own temple. And Betty had been a pretty child, long ago—long ago Mrs' Parmalee had loved her deeply—and he had tried to love her—for awhile. She had not been the kind of woman—but there certain thoughts he must not think. They were blood-red flowers growing along the road to hell . . . . .

It might be that Betty had met Salvano, and learned that he longer cared—heard from him that he was going to marry the girl at the Hotel St. George. Sheridan would rather believe that the guilt of what she had done lay at Salvano's door, rather than his: and it was probably. But there was no suspicion in his mind against Salvano as a direct agent in Betty's death. There never would be such a suspicion in his mind—nor in that of any otaher. The Prince, true to the subtle traditions of his family in ages long gone, had known how to cover his tracks too well.

"Are the doctors with her?" Miles asked, mechanically.

"Yes, sir, they've never left her since they came," Yale answered. "Will you—"

He did not finish the sentence, for Miles had turned his back, and was on his way to the room where Betty lay.

For a moment he stood on the threshold, when he had opened the door. There was the sound of a woman's suppressed sobbing, and his heart seemed to swell. But it was the voice of Estelle, the French maid, who crouched on the floor.

"It is Monsieur Sheridan " she choked.

Two men who had been bending over the bed, turned quickly.

"She has gone," said one of them in English.

"Dead " Miles echoed.

"Dead," the English doctor repeated. "There was little or no hope from the first."

Sheridan stood quite still. He could not speak. His eyes were like empty windows, for his soul had gone away from behind them. It had gone to Bousaada, to Terry, who waited, and watched, and prayed.

TALES OF A LONDON TAXICAB DRIVER

SOME NOTORIOUS FARES

Now that justice has been done in the Bristol Taxi crime—in which my friend Jacob Dickie, the Bow taxicab driver, was so brutally murdered—it is possible to disclose certain facts told to me by a driver friend who knew Maso Dickie's murderer, and who knew also a good deal about Mason's life.

Mason appears to have had a personality which his female acquaintances found irresistible. One of these lady friends has been mentioned in the story of the crime, but a certain "Dolores"—a pretty girl of French extraction who some months ago left Mason to run away with another cavalier—has not.

The Artist's Model

"Dolores" met Mason two years ago in a Soho restaurant where she was dining with an artist for whom she was working as model at the time. Even when her real name seems to have been a mystery to all who knew her, for I do not think she was ever addressed as other than plain "Dolores," though she seems to have been fairly well-known among Bohemians both in the East and West of London.

Mason was a nodding acquaintance of the artist at whose side Dolores was sitting, and the two were casually introduced. It was in rather an exciting manner that the girl and Mason were thrown more closely together.

Sitting in one corner of the restaurant was a tall, dark man in evening dress. He was certainly handsome, and Dolores—as fickle as most of her kind—was quick to notice the fact. Presently, when the music (a piano and a violin) started, the man in evening dress having noticed the girl's meaning glances in his direction, came over and asked if she would dance with him.

It was the old story. The artist—with whom Dolores was sharing rooms, by the way—was of a jealous disposition. He was still entranced by the beauty and charm of his mistress. He could not very well refuse to allow her to dance with this stranger, but as they waltzed round the room, his glowering gaze followed them.

Mason watched, and was interested. The artist replied to his casual questions—in the course of conversation—with a certain amount of distraction.

Presently, as the dancing grew wilder, Dolores began to take a cattish delight in the jealousy she had aroused in the breast of the artist. Impulsively she drew a little closer to the man with whom she was dancing and kissed him.

Upon His Feet Like a Flash

The artist was upon his feet like a flash. Rushing up to the girl and her partner, he pulled her away and dealt the man a heavy blow on his chin.

The stranger was of the fighting kind—and so was the artist. Within ten seconds they were raining blow after blow upon each other, and it took five waiters to drag them apart. The manager of the restaurant approached and ordered the artist to leave the restaurant. He refused, and the waiters threw him outside.

Several times he endeavored to return, but when the manager sent for the police he decided that discretion was the better part of valor and asked Dolores to leave with him. The girl now enamored with her new admirer, refused. The artist became unruly again. The police arrived, and he was taken away.

At this juncture, however, the man in evening dress seemed to lose interest in Dolores. He spoke a few words to the manager, hurried into his coat and left the restaurant. Whether his real identity, coupled with the story of the part he had played in the disturbance, would have proved a matter of public interest, I cannot say. But that seems to be the most reasonable explanation of his sudden departure.

At all events he went and Dolores disconsolately went back to the table where Mason was still sitting. The pair remained in the restaurant, talking and drinking, for another hour, and during that time Dolores found it an easy matter to lead her companion into the web of her charms. She was beautiful of face and figure. Her brown hair was rich and silken—Mason was fascinated.

That night Dolores did not return to the rooms she had shared with the artist. She remained with Mason, and for some time these two went about together a good deal.

Driving Horatio

I have driven many famous and infamous "fare." Naturally, taxi drivers had plenty of odd moments on their hands when they read the papers, and study the illustrateds. In this way they became familiar with the faces of those who are very much in the "news-eye."

I was one day "crawling" along Pall Mall when I was hailed by a manservant on the steps of a smart residential block of flats. I stopped and there tripped down the steps the short, stout, unmistakeable figure of Mr. Bottomley dressed for the races, with white hat, glasses, bottonhole, etc. He was then in the very zenith of his power and prosperity, and radiated love of living. I was directed to drive to Waterloo—it was the day of Hurst Park races—and I said, "Certainly, Mr. Bottomley!"

He was very pleased at the recognition, as I have noticed most public men are.

"Oh, you know me?" he said, and smiled. "Now drive like the devil to Waterloo and it's a pound note for you and a good tip for today's racing." I got both, but the latter was a dud. I may mention that to a man the taxi drivers swore by Bottomley, and not a few put money in his Clubs. They backed his horses and read his paper, and even when he was rapidly going down I never heard any speak against the tottering idol. With taxi drivers he was prodigal. Many a time I have been engaged at eleven o'clock, have taken him from King Street to Long Acre, and have waited outside for hours. He never went by the amount on the clock, but showered treasury notes with regal profusion. I should say that of all money-pinners Mr. Bottomley was the most princely with taxi drivers; he loved taxis, and would not walk a step if he could help it.

One taxi driver of my acquaintance, while on night duty, was hailed by Bottomley after midnight, in front of a night club which Bottomley had evidently been visiting. He was evidently very tired and said to the driver:

"I'm too late for a train. I must get right away to The Dicker, Sussex. Like to take me there?" This was his country home.

Happily my friend was the owner of his cab. He had a good supply of petrol on board, and he agreed to this strange request. When he dropped Bottomley outside his fine residence just as the dawn was breaking, he received his full fare and a two-pound tip besides.

Bottomley often drove about quite merrily in London with his lady friends, and sometimes—when taking one of these women to a restaurant—he would request that the driver should lower the hood of his car.

"Let's have a breeze," he said, when making such a demand to a driver whom I knew at the time.

Tragic Memories

Once I drove the famous Billie Carlton and a friend of her's, most people will still remember the tragic events which led up to Miss Carlton's death—to a restaurant in the Strand, waited over an hour for them—it was during the theatre rush and getting a taxi was no easy matter—and then took them back to Miss Carlton's rooms. Before I drove off she asked me to call for her the next afternoon at three o'clock, and I did so. It is not in the least unusual for a taxi driver to be asked to keep an appointment a day ahead.

When she came out to the cab she was looking very pale and ill, but this only made her look more beautiful than ever. I drove her to a house in the West End and was told to call back for her in an hour, if I could.

I did, and the servant who answered my summons told me to wait. Presently she came out, looking as if she would faint any minute, on the arm of a man whom I did not know. But she was laughing hysterically — deliriously, I thought—and the man seemed very relieved when he had got her safely to the cab.

"I'll bring the packet round to you tomorrow," he said, just as I started the engine. "Two o'clock, don't forget."

When we arrived at Miss Carlton's place again her special friend was pacing up and down outside. He seemed very annoyed at something, and spoke crossly as he opened the door of the cab.

"You said you would be . . ." he began, and then looked inside the cab. I thought it strange that Miss Carlton had not got out. I looked round and saw her lying unconscious inside the cab.

I sprang out and went to his assistance. We carried her into the flat and then I was sent for a doctor. I brought a physician in my own cab and was told I might go.

"She has only fainted," he said, coming to the side of the cab as I got in. "Here, I'll pay you."

I never saw Miss Carlton again, but I read about the tragic circumstances of her death a few weeks later.

ZAM-BUK

Beats Any Embrocation In Winter Aches & Pains

Try a Box To-Day!

Whilst Zam-Buk has long been recognised as Canada's most popular remedy in skin troubles, how many know how better it is than any poisonous liniment for relieving the sharp twinges of rheumatism, sciatica or lumbago?

Zam-Buk is equally good for aching backs, stiff joints, sore muscles, cold in the head and chest, or sore throat.

Rubbed well into the affected parts, Zam-Buk's powerful pain-soothing essences soak right into the tissues, banishing soreness, congestion and inflammation. Others prefer to treat their colds so: they rub Zam-Buk between the palms of both hands and then inhale the evaporating medicinal balsams. This does the same good in another way.

DECLINES WILD ANIMALS

REICHENBACH, Silesia, Nov. 9.—(Associated Press).—Barter and exchange have replaced paper marks very largely in Germany, but this town was recently stumped when it was offered an elephant and a lion in payment of taxes. A circus which had played here did not have money enough to pay the municipal license fees and the manager offered to turn over the best animals in his menagerie to settle the debt. The town authorities declined the elephant immediately, but they debated some time about the lion, as they conceived the idea it might be used as the nucleus for a zoological garden. After they had consulted the animal's keeper and found out how much meat he eats they decided to put off the zoological garden until food gets more plentiful. Finally the manager compromised with the bailiff and his aids by giving them a car in satisfaction of their claim.

BAVARIANS WOULD GOVERN GERMANY

By J. W. T. MASON

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 (United Press).—The authority of the Berlin Government throughout Germany no longer exists in full sovereign form. Berlin is gradually becoming subservient to Bavarian influences, and there is increasing evidence that if Germany does not fly apart, two capitals will direct the destinies of the Reich.

For purposes of negotiation with the allies, Berlin will be the capital. For purposes of directing the internal forces of the republic (the capital will be Munich. Bavaria's challenge to Prussia has not been accepted by the latter. The monarachists, who have made Munich their centre, are becoming increasingly arrogant in their attitude toward the middle-class government in Berlin. The trend of events in Germany is to make the balance of power tend increasingly in Bavaria's favor.

Need Stern Rule

The socialistic-communist government of Saxony has been defied with great skill by the Bavarians to frighten the bourgeois government at Berlin. The Munich clique, headed by General Ludendorff and Crown Prince Rupprecht, have behind them the German military tradition of decisiveness and sternness in meeting sudden crises. This characteristic strongly appeals to a majority of the Germans. The Berliners, on the other hand, have exhibited a woeful lack of purpose and have shown no ability except to flounder deeper and deeper into the morass.

The Bavarians undoubtedly are becoming the most powerful unit in Germany, due to the fact that the strong men of the old regime have flocked there and the weaker ones have remained in Berlin. The Bavarians are not primarily separatists. They are far more ambitious than that. They want to make the Crown Prince Rupprecht not only King of Bavaria, but also Emperor of Germany. If they succeed in this, the Hohenzollern house will have to stand impotently aside and see the imperial throne pass to the Wittelsbach family.

But the only way the Bavarian kingdom can be established at present is for Bavaria to separate from the German Republic. Once that were done, there would be an irresistible tendency, in all probability, for the republic to break up into a number of units. Bavaria would have to reunite these parts to create the German Empire afresh and to place the Wittelsbachs on the imperial throne.

France Against Reunion

But the French Government would not permit this reunion. France attributes all of her present ills to the fact that the government of Napoleon III. allowed Bismarck to unite the German independent states into the Empire. France would work against a Bavarian Bismarck and it is practically certain there would be no repetition of the blunder of Napoleon III.

Therefore, the Bavarians may decide not to separate from the republic. Instead, if they are wise and not impetuous, they will continue to gather increasing influence at Munich. They will do everything possible to keep Germany together. Then, when their reactionaries believe the time has come, the republic will be overthrown and will be replaced by an empire, the Wittlesbachs ruling, not only Munich, but also in Berlin.

Responsibility on Lumbermen and Not on Government As In Ontario—No Political Appointments or Interference.

SPRUCE PRECIOUS.

OTTAWA, November 8. — Canadina Press. — A delegation of lumber men operating in the Ottawa Valley, and members of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association, attended this afternoon the sessions of the Royal Commission investigating the Canadian pulp and paper industry. The delegation included Dan McLachlin of Arnprior, W. M. Ross and John Black of the J. R. Booth Co., Ottawa, W. J. Smith and E. R. Bremner of the Edwards Lumber and Pulp Co., Pembroke; S. J. Fisher of the E. B. Eddy Co., Iull; J. S. Gillies and Colonel A. B. Gillies, of Braeside; and J. A. Gillies of Ottawa.

There is no such thing as insurance of standing timber, Dan McLachlan told the commission. The chief menace to forests, he said, was the destruction of young growth by fire. The only method of remedying the situation he believed was through public education and the imposition of heavy penalties for setting fires.

Likes Quebec System.

Ground rent for forests was a large large source of revenue in Quebec and Ontario, said Mr. McLachlin. In Quebec the rate was $8 per square mile. The province received about foru million dollars a year from this source and spent about $300,000 in forest administration, he said. In On tario there was a tax levied of $6.40 a square mile, and the province administered its own fire ranging.

The witness thought the system in Quebec, wheer the lumbermen themselves took care of fire fighting, was the best. There was no question of political patronage in appointing rangers, nor did politics interfere when it was necessary to dismiss an inefficient ranger.

Mr. McLachlin contended that settlers were often being allowed to take up land which was not suitable for settlement. Often they would be found in isolated positions where they were a menace to the surrounding forest. And furthermore the chance of fire in the adjacent wood made the location dangerous for settlement.

Slash a Problem.

Replying to a question by Chairman Picard, the witness said there was no practical way so far as he knew of slash disposal. It could not be burned at some seasons because of spreading fires in the bush. In the winter it would not burn because of the snow. He said that there were no government regulations in Quebec for the disposal of slash in the bush. Commissioner McLellan said there were such regulations in existence in New Brunswick, but the process was so costly that the regulations were ignored. It was brought out that slash and debris must be removed over 100 feet on each side of a railroad right of way.

The witness said that the budworm had killed off all the balsam in the area in which he operated.

He stated that in the case of pine burned over, if a fair amount of the young growth were left, it might be cut over again after 25 years.

Spruce Most Valuable.

Chief Commissioner Picard questioned him as to what he regarded as the most valuable lumber in Canada. Mr. McLachlin thought spruce the most valuable owing to the large amount of pulp it yielded, and to its comparatively rapid growth. And this precious species of lumber, commented the chairman, was being sent out of the country for $5 or $6 a cord.

The cost of burning slash was spoken of by J. S. Gillies of Braeside. On experiment his firm has carried out last year covered some five acres. The slash had been burned but the results had not been particularly satisfactory. The cost had been as high as that of cutting and piling the lumber, namely $6 to $7 per thousand feet. While it was possible that the insect pest might have been eliminated by burning this slash the fire menace had not been found to have been removed. Small trees had fallen, and a burning cigarette was as likely to start a fire there as elsewhere in the forest. Mr. Gillies held that outsiders should be restricted in the matter of walking about the forests. He claimed that the Gillies limit had been 50 per cent burned over owing to the presence of prospectors. He thought that a method should be devised by which the limit owners should receive compensation for the damage thus sustained. All the balsam had been destroyed in his area by the budworm, he said, as well as a proportion of the spruce.

Damage by Prospectors.

Walter M. Ross, of the J. R. Booth Co., also spoke of vast damage done by prospectors. His experience was, he said, that debris did not often cause fires. The fire menace seemed just as great in the green forest areas.

Mr. Ross said that his company has tried out salving balsam killed by borers or budworms, but where the tree had been dead any length of time the wood was found dry and decayed and of very little use for pulp. The borer had done little damage to spruce in his experience.

The commission will meet here again to-morrow morning for what may possibly be the last session in Ottawa. It will start sessions in Toronto next Tuesday morning.

MELBOURNE PASSES PUBLIC SAFETY ACT.

Secure Essentials of Life in Time of Disturbances.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 9.— (Canadian Press Cable, via Reuter's.)— The Legislative Assembly of Victoria passed the third reading of the Safety Bill to-day. In the course of the debate Premier Lawson announced his intention to add a clause providing that nothing in the Act be construed as imposing industrial conscription. Subsequently, however, he withdrew this clause and inserted in its steady a clause retaining the power to make regulations for the securing of the essentials of life for the community in time of disturbances. The Laborites strongly resented the Premier's action, declaring that he definitely promised to include the clause against conscription. The bill is now before the Legislative Council.

The Crow of Croup A Warning To All Mothers

Croup starts with a dry cough and rattling in the throat; after which the croup crow gives warning of the diseases. The child, after tossing restlessly about, will start up with a flushed face, protuding eyeballs, and a distressing look of terror and anxiety. There is a struggle for breath, and the expectoration of the mucous matter is so difficult to get rid of that the effort appears to threaten strangulation.

On the first sign of the "croupy crow" mothers should administer Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and thus give the child prompt and permament relief, and perhaps the life saved by taking this precaution.

Mrs. H. A. Langhorn, Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"My little boy was very bad with the croup and I could not get anything to relieve him until I tried Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I cannot praise it too highly for the relief it gave him."

UNITED STATES IS CHIEF COMPETITOR IN BRITISH MARKET

Free Entry of Canned Salmon and Apples Regarded As Opportunities of Expanding Trade

OTTAWA, Nov. 9.— (Canadiain Press).—The chief competitor in the British market, over whom Canada will be given an advantage under the proposed preference on fresh apples and canned salmon, is the United States. This appears from British trade figures available at the office of the Bureau of Statistics here, which show imports into Britain under existing conditions and the chief countries of the world from which they come.

Imports of apples into the United Kingdom for the calendar year, 1922, the latest figures available here were 4,471,000 cwt., and for the year 1921, 4,001,000 cwt. The latest figures which show the distribution of the trade among the various countries of the world are those for 1921. In that year United States shipped to Great Britain 1,712,000 cwt; Canada 1,494,000; Australia 387,800 Belgium 104.000 Netherlands 126,000 Of the total imports of apples for that year, 1,906,000 cwt. came from within the Empire; while 2,094,000 came from foreign countries were valued at £101,781 of which £89,220 came from the West Indies. They are already duties in the United Kingdom imposed upon the sugar content of sweetened fruit juices.

Of canned salmon, United Kingdom in 1922 imported 626,000 cwt. as compared with 576.000 in 1921. Of the imports in 1922, the United States sent 238,000 cwt. while Canada sent 54.000 cwt. The other largest sources of supply of salmon were Japan and Russia. Of the total imports in 1921, 169000 cwt. came from within the Empire and 406,000 from foreign countries.

Opportunity to Expand.

The situation outlined above is generally regarded as giving Canada an opportunity for considerable expansion of its exports in these two lines. In that connection attention has been called to the fact that in 1922 Canada grew 3838,000 barrels of apples, while the annual export of apples from Canada during recent years ranged about 1,300,000 barrels.

The total pack of canned salmon in 1922 was 1,290,534 cases, of which 1,290,326 cases came from British Columbia. Exports of canned salmon in turn have ranged recently from 91,000 to 93,000 cases per annum.

Honey Less Important.

The proposed preference on honey and fruit juices are not regarded as of nearly the same importance for Canada as those on apples and canned salmon. In 1921, the latest returns available, the United Kingdom imported 24,894 cwt. of honey, of which a quarter came from the British West Indies and a similar proposition from New Zealand. A little more than an eighth of the British imports of honey came from the United States. The imports from Canada are not given but the returns indicate that they were less than fifty cwt.

The preferenece on fruit juices, the opinion is expressed here, is intended to apply chiefly to unsweetened lime and lemon juice, these being the chief imports of fruit juices to Britain which are now free from duty. Of these British imports in the year mentioned above.

NATIONAL WIRES YIELD INCREASE.

Operating expenses on the Canadian National in 1923 totalled $2,818,546 as aginst $2,365,137 in 1921 while those of the C. P. R. amounted to $2,819,980 in 1922 and $3,873,-177 in 1921.

Gross revenues of all telegraph and cable lines showed a decline of $292,227 for 1922 as compared with 1921, and the total operating expenses a decrease of $202,473, making a decrease in net revenue of $89,754. Pole line mileage are increased from 52,734 to 53,096 miles, with wire mileage increased from 250,802 to 262,348 miles. The number of employees showed an increase of from 7,818 to 8,500. Land messages showed an increase from 15,013,683, in 1921 to 15,271,415 last year while the number of cablegrams increased from 1,153,787 to 1,132,053.

JOLLY PIE SOCIAL MILLBROOK A.Y.P.A.

Sunday School St. Thomas' Church Prettily Decorated

MILLBROOK, Nov. 9.—The Pie Social, under the auspices of the A. Y.P.A. of tS. Thomas' church, which was held in the Sunday school hall on Tuesday evening, proved a most enjoyble occasion, though the attendance was somewhat less than had been anticipated owing to the unfavorable weather. In the absence of the rector, Rev. Canon Allen, Mr. A. A. Smith made a capable chairman.

The room was prettily decorated with streamers of red and green crepe paper, flags, etc. and a general air of welcome greeted the incoming guests as they entered the hall. The following programme was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience, each number being heartily encored:

Piano solo, Miss Mamie Collins.

Vocal solo, "My Rose," by Mrs. D. C. King, Peterborough.

Reading, "The Village Choir," by Miss Pearl Lamb.

Piano solo, by Miss Muriel Lang.

Solo, "If I Built a House For You Dear," by Mrs. King.

Recitation, "Marmion and Douglas," by Miss Vera Weeks.

Piano solo, Miss M. Lang.

Reading, "Jean Val Jean," by Miss Elsie Weeks.

The refreshments served by the officers and members of the A.Y.P.A. who, as hosts and hostesses of the evening, were most attentive to the wants of the guests, included besides tea and coffee, a variety of delicious pies, which appealed so strongly to the appetite there was danger of eating, "not wisely but too well."

So generous was the provision a number of pies were sold at the conclusion of the pleasant social event, and the total financial receipts were most satisfactory.

Important!

Every piece imported British fabrics and some of the numbers have ranked amongst the biggest sellers of the season. No cheap, shoddy goods, but beautiful pure wool cloths that will make up into handsome wraps, dresses, or children's clothes. Do not fail to be on hand early Saturday morning as a great many pieces are of short lengths.

Visitors to the new Shelter yesterday included the general superintendent for Ontario, Mr. J. J. Kelso of Toronto, the agent from Parry Sound district, Mr. Joseph Ryder, the matron from the Parry Sound Shelter Miss McGillivray and two ladies from the auxiliary to the Children's Aid Society in Havelock; Mrs Jones and Mrs. Bullied. Last evening both Mr. Kelso and Mr. Ryder spoke briefly on the work of the Children's Aid Societies, also complimenting the local directors on their recent acquisition of such splendid Shelter premises.

In the course of Mr. Kelso's inspection of the Shelter yesterday, he spoke of a scheme tried out in North Bay, when the school children were asked to contribute two potatoes each to the Shelter's winter potato supply the result being a fifty-nine bags of the vegetables secured for the society's use. The Shelter in Peterboro consumes potatoes during the winter at the rate of a bag and a half per week.

The new premises at 151 Lock street form a very striking contrast to the old Shelter building so long occupied by the wards of the Society The new home is one of the most comfortable and attractive buildings that could have been purchased for the purpose. An attribute that is outstanding ,impressing the visitor at every turn is the eminently home like character of the whole place. There is not anywhere a sign of institutional life. The atmosphere is that of a pleasant house where little neglected children may grow up in peace and happiness, with very reasonable want gratified.

Another pleasant thing about the whole house is the abundance of light. Windows are plentiful, and the effect of clean brightness is intensified by the soft muresco wall coatings in whites and greens and greys and the fine hardwood flooring that prevails throughout the building, A good cement base forms the foundation for numerous basement sections that provide ample accommodation for coal bins and vegetable containers and preserve cupboards, and separate lavoratories for boys.

In the spacious wash room, doubt less much appreciated by the matron whose washing activities for many years were performed under difficulties, are stationary tubs and another convenience is the large linen closet on the second floor, and the wide bathroom, with plenty of glass cupboards with sliding doors for medical supplies.

There are pleasant little white beds, some of which need replacement in the boys' and girls' dormitories, and white curtains on the big windows. A pretty parlour and dining room open off the small entry that fronts on George street, with a swing door from the dining room into the kitchen, and the large vestibule at the side affords access to the winding staircase and the pleasant large room where the ladies sew.

A wide verandah faces on the larg front garden where there is plenty of space for the children to grow vegetables in individual plots, and at the rear of the house another piece of ground makes up the total of nearly two acres of available garden lot. In the rear, too are the large barns and sheds which house the Shelter's tools and its stock of hens and the two members of its pig family. Down the long walk at the front entrance electric lights have been strung at intervals, for the convenince of evening arrivals.

MONTHLY MEETING OF ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

Interesting Addresses Given by Mrs. F. E. Kerr and Mrs. Pakenham.

On Tuesday evening, Nov. 6, the regular monthly meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S., Circle Three, was held at the home of Mrs. B. McNeely, 269 Charlotte street. Mrs. W. Stevens, president of the Circle, occupied the chair.

Miss Engel, soloist of St. Andrew's, sang "I Come to Thee" in her usual beautiful voice. Mrs. Nevin read the Bible study. Miss Craw gave an interesting talk on the current issue of the Messenger.

Mrs. F. E. Kerr, 586 Gilmour street, spoke on Leprosy. There are two million lepers in the world, she said. Seventeen thousand are under the care of the Undenominational Missionary Society, and out of that number eight thousand have become Christians. There are only eighteen lepers in Canada. These are being treated in New Brunswick.

Mrs. Pakenham, 300 Boswell avenue, spoke briefly on Missionary Work and Power of Prayer. She told of the wonderful work of Miss Shearer, a Peterborough girl now at the Marion Barclay Hospital, Kong Moon, China, and of Mr. Ying Piu Ma, a Christian merchant, who is at the head of a group of merchants who are giving great financial aid. She also said in part: "The Missionary problem is a personal one. Let each one of us take his full share in striving to realize its difficulty, in taking the burden upon us and bearing it before God in priestly intercession.

The meeting, which was well attended, closed by repeating the Lords' Prayer in unison. Mrs. R. Jackson proposed a vote of thanks to the ladies taking part, this being seconded by every lady present.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour spent.

WAS AWARDED MORE ALIMONY THAN ASKED

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(Canadian Press).—Although Mrs. Elsie Coles Lescher of Rye ased for only $500 a month alimony in her application for divorce from Wm. H. Lescher of Hotel Biltmore Manhattan, Supreme Court Justice Morschauser increased the award to $1,000 yesterday in White Plains, when he granted her the sought for decree. In setting the amount at more than had been asked for, he said that Lescher drove a costly automobile and that court would take judicial notice that that costs money.

AND NOW THEY WALK ON WATER

Strolling across San Francisco Bay! Sounds incredible, to be sure. Yet D. F. Sheldon (left), of Ventura, Calif., and Rev. W. W. Reilly of Weatherville, Calif., are doing it here. Walking tandem in water skis invented by Sheldon's brother, A. N. Sheldon, Ventura rancher, the two men made the trip from shore to shore. Now they're getting ready to hike across the English Channel.

WELL KNOWN HERE PASSES SUDDENLY

Call Came Unexpectedly to Samuel B. Robinson of Orillia.

LINDSAY, Nov. 9.—(Special).—Death came suddenly to a former resident of Peterboro County, in the person of Mr. Samuel B. Robinson, of Orillia, a few days ago. The deceased was assisting in loading goods at the C.N.R. Station, and was sitting on the rear of the waggon, when he suddenly collapsed and died suddenly.

The late Mr. Robinson was born in the Township of Dummer, Peterboro County, seventy-three years ago, and resided there until he reached manhood. His wife was Jane Crowe, a member of a well-known Peterboro County family. He was a resident of Orillia for 38 years and was in the employ of the Tudhope Carriage Co. for a great many years. He was a life-long member of the Methodist Church and an Orangeman. The deceased was twice married. Three children survive. They are not sure that the Board of Health enquire sufficiently into the ability or not of petitioners to pay for such work in the ordinary way without council's assistance. Council's intention in this regard was to only lend financial aid when property owners are compelled to make sanitary improvements and cannot finance the costs without an extended term of yearly payments to the city such as provided for by by-law. These requests recommended by the Board of Health are piling up to such an extent that the committee expressed the view that the privilege may be developing into a business proposition with some petitioners.

OUTBREAK OF A FOOT MOUTH DISEASE FEARED

Among Cattle and Pigs in the West of Scotland and Elsewhere.

LONDON, Nov. 9. — (Canadian Press).—An outbreak of the foot-and-mouth disease among cattle and pigs in the West of Scotland and elsewhere has resulted in the closing of the Glasgow and Stirling markets and the suspension of Irish cattle shipments to Glasgow.

IN BLAST'S PATH.

This is the aftermath of a cotton gin explosion at Greenville, Ala. At least three men are known to have been killed. A dozen others were injured. A passenger train, with several hundred on board, passed the scene only a minute or so before the blast occurred. The track at the point was blown to bits. And parts of the boiler were hurled through a room in a nearby hotel.

JOLLY SOCIAL EVENING YOUNG FOLKS' SOCIETY

A very jolly social evening under the auspices of the Young People's Society of St. Andrew's Church was held at the manse Wednesday evening when a goodly number of the members had an enjoyable time taking part in games and charades followed by the service of dainty refreshments with an abundance of pumpkin pie doughnuts and coffee. The decorations were carried out in the conventional Hallowe'en manner with orange and black cutouts and the evening was enlivened by the presence of several ghostly figures. Weird pumpkin lanterns on the porch welcomed the arriving guests.

Officers of the society for this year are; President Miss Pearl Petrie Otonabee; vice-president Fred Batten; secretary Miss Mildred Toland; treasurer John Steinkraus.

HOCKEY BUG NOW BUZZING, OTTAWA

Outlook is That Capital Will Be Treated to Best Hockey Yet.

OTTAWA, Nov. 9. — (Canadian Press).—The amateur hockey bug is buzzing in Ottawa. The annual scramble for players has commenced in earnest, and various senior clubs are hard on the trail of the classiest of the local aggregation of puck chasers.

The outlook at present is that the capital will be treated to the best amateur hockey seen here for some time. Against nine senior teams which opened last season, only five will be in action this coming winter, and this should tend to improve the game considerably. An amalgamation has been effected between the two leagues which opened last year and one compact group will play at the Auditorium.

The Gunners, Montagnards, New Edinburghs, Royal Canadiens and Shamrocks are the five teams named, the latter being admitted this fall as Irish representatives. From all accounts each club will ice a strong aggregation, owing to the surplus of players through the inactivity of four teams.

The usual quota has been lost through migration. Roger Smith and Abbie Cox have both gone South, while Pat Byrne, Jack Roos and Kenny Dunfield, last year's St. Patricks' defence, have gone to Iroquois. Rumor has a couple of others departing, one for professional ranks.

Nearly half of the people in Japan are reached by electric lighting service.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

INSOMNIA

Insomnia is no respector of persons. If you persist in overstepping the rules of health, it may come your way.

The trouble is either functional or symptomatic. It has psychologic, physiologic and pathologic conditions and changes. The tired business man or city dweller, through mental strain or overwork, is a favorite victim. But people of the country or smaller towns are by no means immune. The poor may have their troubles, but they usually are not insomnia victims; they sleep well.

Worry, nervous troubles, indulging in improper food at the wrong time and sustained mental strain cause insomnia, in most cases. Conditions of the body itself and environment also play important parts. Do not try to go to sleep with cold feet.

To help insomnia sufferers, I would advise light eating at night. Sometimes a glass of warm milk or even other food may aid sleep by directing the increased flow of blood to the stomach during the night.

Do not resort to sedatives, sleeping potions or hypnotic drugs to cure insomnia. Their use will often work greater harm than the insomnia you seek to cure.

Seek plenty of fresh air in walks and by the open window at night. Never smoke to excess, its effects on insomnia are far reaching and well defined. A warm bath of short duration will often help greatly.

In pronounced cases of insomnia, the trouble is dangerous and must be considered a real illness and a cause for careful diagnosis by your physician.

Mrs. Vincton Tells Of Lasting Benefits

"Since Tanlac relieved my troubles three years ago, my health and strength have never failed me and I've been as happy as a lark," said Mrs. Blanche Vincton, 47 Sheaffle St., Hamilton, Ont., recently.

"Before that, my nervous system was completely shattered and I felt miserably run-down. The least little occurrence out of the ordinary would make me nervous almost to the point of distraction and at times I became dreadfully faint and dizzy. Many nights I could hardly dress myself.

"The very first dose of Tanlac seemed to help every nerve in my body and from the time I finished the treatment to this day, my nerves have been perfect. And sleep—why, it's wonderful how restfully I sleep and my housework is like a child playing 'doll house'. I will praise Tanlac always, if I live to be a hundred."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37-million bottles sold.

CASSEROLES

Do you realize and make use of the economy and convenience of your casseroles and baking dishes?

In choosing a casserole be sure that the cover fits tightly and has a large knob on top to enable you to get a firm hold without danger of burns.

For everyday use I like the casserole made of a vitrified product with a ducky, clubby handle on one side of the dish and a substantial knob on the cover. These are light to handle and as easy to wash as glass and much less expensive. They are attractive in their plain, sturdy fashion and add to the hominess of the dinner table.

A reasonable amount of thought should be used in the handling of casseroles. They should not be subjected to too great and sudden changes of temperature. For instance, when removing a casserole from the oven it's hardly advisable to put it in a cold sink to cool. Nor should it be placed directly over a gas flame to quickly melt fat or butter.

There is nothing new about casserole cookery, but the variety of goods that can be cooked this way grows all the time with experiment. The old-fashioned bean pot is nothing more nor less than a form of casserole.

The joy of having a vegetable in its sauce or a meat in its gravy all ready to serve means so much at the last minute of "taking up" when preparing a meal that this simple expedient is well worth while.

If you would serve creamed onions with your roast, cook them in a glass casserole that goes straight from the oven to the table.

Onions en Casserole

Sixteen small silver-skinned onions, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1½ cups milk, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Peel onions under cold water. Drop in boiling water and boil 15 minutes. Drain and put in a well-buttered casserole. Melt butter, stir in flour, slowly add milk, stirring constantly, season with salt and pepper and cook until thick and smooth. Pour over onions, cover and bake 30 to 45 minutes in a moderate oven.

You will like this dish better than the creamed onions cooked over the fire and you will like serving them without making the sauce at the last minute.

Round Steak en Casserole

Trim steak and cut in pieces for serving. Roll in flour seasoned with salt and pepper. Fry brown in hot fat, first on one side and then on the other. Remove to casserole. Make a brown gravy in the pan in which the steak was browned. Pour gravy over meat and cook in a moderate oven for 45 minutes.

To make a brown gravy.—Add one tablespoon flour to one tablespoon fat. Stir and cook until flour browns. Then slowly add one cup water, stirring constantly and cook until thick and smooth. If more gravy is needed increase the amount of ingredients proportionately.

Ham en Casserole

Four potatoes, 2 onions, slice ham cut 1½ inches thick, ginger, mustard, pepper.

Pare potatoes and slice very thin. Put in casserole. There should be enough potato to more than half fill the dish. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Add onions peeled and cut in very thin slices. Season with pepper. Let ham stand in water for an hour. Drain and put on onions. Sprinkle with a tiny pinch of ginger and mustard. Cover and bake one and one-half hours in a moderate oven.

"Poor Man's Pudding" is an old-time dish that was cooked in the oven.

Poor Man's Pudding

Four cups milk, ½ cup rice, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon butter.

Put cold ingredients into a buttered casserole and put into the oven. Stir often while the rice is swelling. When mixture reaches the boiling point reduce the heat and cook slowly for two hours. The pudding should be smooth and creamy when done and should be removed immediately from the oven as too long cooking will make it watery. Serve warm or cold with sugar and cream.

NUTS

If you like rather unusual little dishes for luncheon, these recipes using nuts may interest you.

There is one secret in the cooking of nuts. They should be blanched before adding to any concoction. The skins are indigestible in almonds aside from having an unpleasant taste. English walnuts, pecans and hickory nuts have very thin skins that are unnoticeable in the raw nuts but develop a strong taste when cooked. Even if you don't take time to slip the skins, pour boiling water over nut meats, let stand five minutes, drain and dry between towels. Put in a hot oven for a few minutes to crisp. English walnuts are easy to slip the skins, but hickory nuts and pecans take more time.

By blanching the sweetness of the nut is enjoyed without that slight tongue burning so often experienced after eating nuts.

You will like "nuts on toast." It is "different" and could be used in the chafing dish for a little evening supper or at a 1 o'clock luncheon.

Nuts on Toast

One-half cup English walnuts, 2 cups canned tomatoes, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup chicken stock, 1 egg, teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, ½ cup whipping cream, paprika.

Heat tomatoes and stock to the boiling point and simmer until tomatoes are reduced to a pulp. Rub through a sieve. Make a perfectly smooth paste of flour, salt, pepper and a little water. Reheat tomato and stock mixture. When boiling stir in flour paste. Cook until mixture thickens. Remove from fire and stir in egg well beaten and nuts. Pour over triangles of crisp hot toast. Drop a small spoon of whipped and salted cream on each piece and serve very hot.

Nut Croquettes

Two tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 1 tablespoon flour, ½ cup milk, teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 cup nut meats, 1 cup mashed potatoes.

Put butter and onion in a sauce pan. When butter froths, remove onion. Sift flour into butter. Add milk, stirring constantly, and cook until thick and smooth. Add nuts and potatoes and mix thoroughly. Spread on a platter to cool. Shape in small balls or cylinders, roll in corn meal and fry in deep, hot fat until a golden brown. Drain on brown paper.

The use of nuts in pie crust is very unusual. Peach or apple pie is delicious with this kind of crust.

Nut Crust

One-half cup finely ground English walnuts, hickory nuts or pecans, 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons lard, cold water.

Rub lard and flour together with tips of fingers. Add nuts and mix thoroughly. Add water as in ordinary pie crust. Roll and shape for lining the pie dish. Roll and shape covering. Dot the upper crust with bits of lard before putting in the oven. This gives the crust a flaky look. The crusts should be thoroughly baked and appetizingly browned.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE STORY OF ROBBER RICEBIRD

"Well I declare!" said Mr. Ricegrower in surprise.

"Come on, fellows! What did I tell you? Didn't I say that Dixie Land was a fine place? Look at that rice-field all 'specially planted for us! Nothing like that up north."

A little brown and white bird with a yellow throat made this long speech to a couple of dozen of his friends. They were all resting in a pine-tree after their long journey.

The birds hadn't noticed a couple of small figures nearby—a little boy and girl who nodded knowingly at each other when they heard what the birds were saying.

"That's Robber Ricebird and his gang that Mister Ricegrower asked us to look out for," said Nick to Nancy. "Did you hear him say that the rice had been 'specially planted for them?"

"Maybe he does think so," answered Nancy. "He seems like a nice little bird. He doesn't look like a thief."

"If he's been here before, he ought to know better," argued Nick. "Perhaps he's just telling that to his friends so they'll all go along and keep him company."

But before Nancy could answer, Robber Ricebird cried out, "Come on, fellows! If we want to get as far as South America this year, we'll have to be attending to business. Now eat all the rice you can hold because we have to fly a long distance over water with nothing to eat at all. One, two, three, ready, go!"

And instantly all the birds settled down on the rice stalks like a small cloud and began to snip off the little rice grains as fast as they could make their bills go.

"Um! Yum! Isn't this grand!" they warbled.

"Spink! Spink! Isn't it fine!" they chirped. "Bobbie, you're a fine chap to bring us here."

"Bobbie! Did you hear?" whispered Nick. "That's short for Robber."

Just then there was a sharp bang, bang, bang! And the birds rose in a panic and swarmed back into the pine-tree.

"Wh—what was that, Bobbie?" they panted. "It sounded like a gun."

"It was a gun!" exclaimed their leader in a puzzled voice. "I know, because I've heard Mister Farmer shooting at the crows in his corn-field up north. Why, you'd think we were robbers and were stealing, so you would! Really, I'm so upset I'll have to sing to steady my nerves. Come on, let's all sing. It will do us good." And to the Twins' amazement, what should the birds begin but

"Bob—o—link, bob—o—link,
Spink, spank, spink, spank, spink!"

"Why it's Bobbie Bobolink," cried Nancy. "We'll have to hurry and tell Mister Ricegrower that it's all a mistake. Bobbie's the sweetest bird in the world!"

"Well I declare!" said Mister Ricegrower in surprise. "I'll go right out and put up a welcome sign. I never knew that bobolinks and ricebirds were the same. I guess they're welcome to a bit o' rice on their travels."

COOD HEALTH SECRET OF BEAUTY

Beauty lies in the care a woman bestows upon herself and in keeping at bay those dread ailments peculiar to her sex, which drag her down and leave telltale traces upon her countenance. Sparkling eyes, the elastic step and a clear complexion never accompany organic troubles. Distressed expressions, a sallow complexion, dark circles under the eyes, lassitude, headaches, and mental depression are the telltale symptoms of women's ailments. Women so troubled should not lose a day in taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, the most successful remedy known to overcome woman's ills and restore health and beauty.

MILES PER WATT IN RADIO TRANSMISSION

An Argument for the Small Radio Set and for Intelligence in Place of Brute Force in Terms of Power

By S. KRUSE, Technical Editor, "QST."

We like to pretend that we are making steady progress in this radio game, but in the business of comparing amateur station records we are not nearly as well off as we were some years ago, says Mr. Kruse in "QST" for November. In the days when everyone had a spark set we knew what power we were using; most of us knew pretty accurately and the rest has some sort of information. When a miles-per-watt it amounted to. The man that covered 1,000 miles with 250 watts had something to be proud of; that was four miles per watt. But there was nothing to make a noise about when some big "thunder factory" covered 1,500 miles by burning 1,500 watts, that was only one mile per watt. This system gave everyone the same chance, in fact it gave the little fellow slightly better chances for if two sets are equally good the one with twice as much power will not work twice as far.

Our first tube men were all mixed up as to the amount of power they were using; in fact there are men today who talk about a "50-watt tube set" when they are really burning 250 watts and ought to rate the thing as a quarter-kilowatt set.

There is no excuse for this—it is perfectly easy to determine the input of a tube set, it is just as easy as it was to determine the input of a spark set; also it will be good for the souls of a lot of us to discover that our wonderful efficiency isn't nearly as wonderful as we have thought.

Let's find out what input wattage our sets are taking by the only sensible method, measuring it, and then let's play fair with the other fellow by talking miles-per-watt.

Fair Play

In the automobile game it is admitted that you can drive a Fierce Harrow farther than a Phord before either of them starts to fall apart. But the Phord has a come-back—it goes farther in miles-per-gallon. It's a perfectly good advantage; the thing is more economical, it is more efficient transportation machine, it hauls more people-miles with a gallon of gas than the Fierce-Harrow does. It's the same way with the radio set; doesn't more credit belong to the man who hauls signals 50 miles per watt than to the one who has to use greater power to haul them only 25 miles per watt? What if man number dwo does have a stable full of "quarter-kilowatt" tubes and a young central station full of transfmorers and rectifiers, what if his brute power does let him cover 4,000 miles, isn't he still inferior to the other man who handled his power correctly and went twice as far per watt? Give the man with the radio flivver a square deal—let him play the game on even terms—and your ether-buster will have to be improved a great deal to show up as well as the little "pickle bottle set."

The Acid Test

The real test of a set isn't "How far have you reached?" but "How far do you work consistently?" and the best way of determining the consistent range of a set is daylight work. We will prefer daylight work because that's a thing most of us don't know much about, but night records are interesting too. Any work done within 90 minutes of sunrise or sunset will be counted as night work—don't try to slip over some work at half-past-sunrise as daylight work. You could never do it at noon.

BANKERS PROVIDE FOR PAYING DEPOSITORS

MONTREAL, Nov. 9.—Routine matters were dealt with at the annual general meeting of the Canadian Bankers' Association here yesterday with the exception that all the banks in the association agreed to and the liquidator of the Home Bank of Canada against security to be furnished by him a sum sufficient to pay the depositors of that bank, 25 per cent. of the amounts due them as soon as certain formalities have been complied with.

Election of officers resulted as follows: President Sir John Aird; vice presidents C. E. Neill, W. C. Pratt A. E. Phipps and Beaudry Leman.

Toronto reports that the Home Bank dividend of 25 per cent to depositors, approved yesterday by the Canadian Bankers' Association at their meeting in Montreal will be paid within ten days or two weeks at the outside. This was the official information given last night by G. T. Clarkson, interim liquidator who said he had a staff at work day and night preparing lists of those who will receive dividend cheques. The plan of payment had not yet been worked out finally, but he had a scheme in mind he said.

Chartered banks will advance money to credit of the interim liquidator. The total amount of Home Bank deposits is $15,030,678.

The 25 per cent. dividend will amount to $3,757,669.50. Toronto deposits amount to $5,687,566. Including main office there were 14 offices of Home Bank in Toronto.

"It should be fairly good Thanks giving news," said a member of the depositors when told last night that the Canadian Bankers' Association had approved of an advance to the interim liquidator of the Home Bank of Canada.

GRAPHIC ACCOUNT OF ANNUAL CONVENTION

Presented to Catholic Women's League Last Night.

A small but appreciative audience listened with enjoyment to the report of the recent annual convention of the Catholic Women's League, given by Miss M. A. O'Connell, diocesan delegate, at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum hall, Wednesday evening, at a meeting of the local C.W.L. In the absence of the president, Mrs. D. O. Legendre, the chair was taken by Miss Teresa McNamara. A short business session included the reading of the minutes by Mrs. C. Snyder, and the announcement of the holding of an afternoon tea next Wednesday, at the home of Mrs. F. Hodgson, Rubidge street.

Miss O'Connell's paper was a splendidly-worded and graphic account of the convention held in Halifax, from June 14th to 21st of this year, with an attendance of delegates from all over Canada and from the Maritime district, that totalled over nine hundred ladies. Discussions at the convention covered a wide range, giving a great deal of attention to the immigration problem, to education of foreigners and to social service work in all its ramifications. Travellers' Aid work was stressed.

Miss O'Connell gave a brief description of the city of Halifax, mentioning its fame as a great educational centre. There are no separate schools in Halifax, but Catholic nuns and lay teachers have charge of the education of the Catholic children, religious instruction being reserved for after-school hours. The school board is composed of Catholic and Protestant representatives, in proportion to the population.

An address by the National president, Miss Guerin of Montreal, was inspirational toward service along social and immigration lines. Other speakers referred to the splendid work done in immigration at the ports of Quebec, Halifax and St. John, N.B. under the League's immigration workers, in co-operation with other societies interested in the welfare of immigrants.

A very interesting address was that of Rev. Father Daly of Toronto, speaking on the work of the lately-organized Sister of Service, young women who are being trained for a religious life which will be spent in active social service work.

"The Child and the Home" was the title of a speech given by Judge Wallace of Halifax, formerly judge of the Juvenile Court of the city, who pleaded for interest by the Catholic Womens' League in problems relating to child welfare, housing, wages and unemployment. Child welfare legislation in the Dominion, declared the speaker, was reasonably satisfactory, but "the ubiquitous parent will evade the law if he can, willing to sacrifice his child's education and future for the miserable pittance that child's labour demands."

The judge referred in eulogistic terms to the admirable work done by Dr. Helen MacMurchy of Toronto, in connection with the Federal Department of Health. He also stressed the importance of attention to the housing problem, with crowded, miserable living quarters and big rentals complicated by the lack of knowledge of proper ventilating and atmospheric conditions exhibited by the foreign element.

The Mothers' Allowance legislation was praised, the judge regretting that Nova Scotia had not placed such legislation on its provincial books. He also deplored the delay by the Provincial Government in making provision for the mentally deficient child, "the most inarticulate of God's creatures." The speaker concluded with the hope that women would come to look on all children as little brothers and sisters.

Rev. Dr. McClelland of St. Dunstan's College, Charlottstown, P.E.I., emphasized the tremendously potent factor of the education of the child in the home, and the sacred responsibility devolving on mothers in moulding the characters of their children and implanting in them a reverence for God, parents and teachers. "There should be no conflict between the atmosphere of the home and the school."

Business routine which came up in the course of the convention included several changes made in the constitution, and the provision of a tax, which it is hoped will be made uniform, by which sub-divisions may meet the expenses of convention and general running expenses. A ruling was also made that an official absent from three consecutive meetings without valid excuse might be replaced thereafter.

Social functions at the convention included various entertainments at the home of Archbishop McCarthy, at Government House, at St. Vincent's and the Sacred Heart Academies, cruises on the ocean, and a grand banquet at the Halifax Hotel, where three hundred and twenty-five ladies were in attendance, and where Miss M. A. O'Connell had the honor of proposing the toast to "Our Hostesses."

The next convention of the League will be held in Edmonton, Alberta. Miss O'Connell concluded her paper with the hope that the convention, having been staged recently in the far east and going later to the far west, might at some time be held in Central Canada, for the convenience of a greater number of members.

Jim Brown

There were three of the Brown boys. They grew up on a farm and moved to town. John and Tom went into business and Jim became a carpenter. Jim was the black sheep. He wasn't dishonorable, but he cussed a great deal and never went to church except one time when he was selected as a pall bearer; and both John and Tom were active in church work eschewed profane speech and called their fellow citi- "Brother."

Old Man Brown, father of the three boys, died after a time, leav- their mother alone on the farm. She managed it shrewdly and it continued to pay a profit for several years, but she aged rapidly, and began to complain about being tired.

The three sons urged her to sell the old place and move to town, and after a time she followed their suggestion. She knew she would not live long and that her wants would be few, and so she divided among them the money she received for the old homestead.

People wondered where she would make her home. John said he would be glad to have her except that his wife objected; and Tom said he felt it his duty to keep her, but he didn't have a spare bed room; and Jim cussed them both vigorously and made room for the old lady at his house. People said they hoped her presence wouuld make Jim a better man.

Famous Guys

CELLINI: This man Cellini was an Italian artist, born in the year 1500, who lived and worked in the period when an artist couldnt get a job without licking some royal or ecclesiastical personage's boots. He was a good artist, but he wasn't much of a boot-licker, and as a result he was forever in hot water, His ability carried him through, however; and when he had made himself about as popular as the itch with one noble patron, he had little difficulty in finding another.

Between seasons he got drunk and loosened his sword in its its scabbard, and persons in the community who searched for trouble usually found it in his immediate neighborhood. Some of his rows landed him in jail and some of them cost him blood; but punishment taught him nothing for conflict was essential to his happiness.

His fame as an artist depends chiefly upon the bronze statue of Perseus; but millions who might never have heard of the statute knew him buy reason of his autobiography — which would seem to indicate that the press agent is mightier than the man who delivers the goods.

Cellini was a braggart and a bully and a knave and a liar, but in the story of his lie he didn't conceal his faults—and that alone is enough to make any man famous.

THE GIRL AND THE BUTCHER BOY

Hiram's Mother Sounds Her Warning

"When Hiram gets wrong, gettin g him right again s like making a chicken unhatch itself."

There is trouble brewing at the home of the girl across the street, and a fair warning has been given. When she and Hiram the butcher boy, were married and began to make their home with the girl's parents, there were many to say that the scheme would not work; and now these prophets of disaster appear in a fair way to be vindicated. True, Hiram has seemed meek enough in spite of the restrictions imposed upon him by the girl's mother; but a volcano looks sleepy and harmless the moment before it blows up.

Monday afternoon Hiram's mother called on the girl's mother and through the open parlor window her voice drifted across the street.

"I'll be frank with you," said she; "I'm scared. I know Hiram a sight better than you do and I know his symptoms. When I went in the butcher shop Saturday, I saw something bad was wrong and I wormed it out of him. According to his tale you won't let him have coffee for breakfast because you can't stand the smell of it, and he can't smoke in the house because you don't like that, either, and you dont cook beefsteak often enough.

"Understand, I'm not complaining. This is your house and you can run it to suit you. But I'm just telling you that trouble is coming. Hiram won't never complain, and right now he's enjoying the situation because he loves to be a martyr; but he'll stand just so much, and when he gets to feeling right sorry for himself you'd better look out. He'll happen all at once like a mule's hind leg, and the neighbors will have something to talk about for five years. It ain't worrying me none, because I warned him to get in a house of his own instead of living with his wife's folks; but if I was you and cared much about my girl's happiness, I'd look out for the engine when the whistle blows. When Hiram gets wrong gettng him right again is like making a chicken unhatch itself."

Bless the lady! It may be that mother love makes her fear too much, but she has her share of common sense. Ah, well; the young folks must make their own bed, and the making will provide entertainment in a dull world. If Hiram is primed for a blowup, there should be action of some kind within a week.

NEW SPIRIT STIRS AMONG YOUNG MEN OF SOVIET RUSSIA.

Smiling, Bragging and Full of Nationalism, They Form An Important Element in Nation's Development.

MOSCOW, Russia, Nov. 8 (Associated Press).—An 18-year-old boy of the coming Russian generation boarded the Riga-Moscow express at a wayside station the other day, and drew the interested attention of a carload of foreign passengers. He was freckle-faced, smiling, energetic, bragging and full of nationalism, and he seemed to typify an important element that, in recent years, has come out of the crucible in which the present day leaders of Russia are mixing their international chemicals.

Change this lad's Russian blouse for a suit of the "college clothes" extensively advertised in America; his round-necked hair cut for the prevailing style across the sea, his soft peasant accent for slang-sprinkled United States, and he might have been an American boy boasting of his own home town, his own state, and the U. S. A. in general.

The Russian youth was a railroad guard. The locomotive on his train, built by Russians ten years ago and repaired by Russians a few weeks before, was better than any locomotive ever built abroad, its drivewheels higher, and its speed surely greater. His train was cleaner, his railroad administration was better, his country's crops best, his country's future the rosiest.

The determination of Peter the Great back in 1700 forced upon his people an acceptance of the idea that the accomplishments of western civilization were superior to their own. This thought lived a long time, for up to six years ago, before the recent revolution, Russians, particularly the educated young, were inclined to swallow without question the claims of foreign civilization to superiority. They were timid violets in the field of nationalism, shyly offering Russian art as an offset to the more practical accomplishments of the Germans, English, Americans and French.

In 1917 the Russian Soviet government set out to establish a spirit of internationalism throughout Russia and the world at large, and the Third International is still preaching the Utopia of an international brotherhood, attainable by a revolutionary proletarian dictatorship.

This young railroad guard is a product of the last revolution. Many thousand like him may be found throughout Russia today. Perhaps they have absorbed some inkling of internationalism from the Third International, but to more than one observer of Russia they seem to be red-blooded, enthusiastic nationalists, and nothing else. The "Red Army" to them means the Russian army; the "Red Fleet" means the Russian fleet, and the "Red Air Service" means Russian aviation. This boy boasted of his home town, of his state, of his railroad and of Russia in comparison to England, Germany, United States and France. Internationalism was the last thing in his head. His thoughts were all of Russia, not as a leader in communism, but as a national entity of which he could be proud. He was the exponent of a personal nationalism, youthful and vigorous, produced by the happenings of the last six years that today is readily found by observers who look below the surface in Russia.

There would appear to be also something of this same nationalist spirit in the hearts and heads of the older communistic crusaders at the Kremlin. Now and then they play nationalist jokes on their internationalist selves. They play Russia's hand in the international poker game; bet for such stakes as Wrangel Island, and cling tenaciously to the chips that may be used in some future jack pot involving land, or ports or ships over which once flew the flag of Old Russia.

Such thoughts evidently are in the minds of Lenine, Trotzky and the other leaders. They surely prevail with the young guard on the Riga-Moscow express, who typifies a new spirit abroad in the land.

COMMUNITY FUND CAMPAIGN

Realizing that there are advantages to a city in having a well-conducted Community Fund it necessarily depends then on how an organization can be formed to carry out its objects.

It has been found that the less cumbersome the organization, the more effective its work and yet it must be representative of the entire community.

For a city with a population from 15,000 to 50,000, the following is suggested as the form of organization which would be most suitable.

The fund to be administered by a Community Fund Council comprised of the following: Hon. President, mayor of the city; President, 1st Vice-President, 2nd Vice-President, Secretary Treasurer, and 24 members. The 24 to include one representative elected each year by participating organizations, and a fair proportion of industrial workers.

A Budget Committee of seven, to be selected from the Community Fund Council, none of whom are representatives of the participating organizations.

A Campaign Committee, appointed by the Fund Council, comprised of Campaign Chairmen (a member of the Fund Council) Divisional Chairmen and Chairmen of the Industrial Committee, (a member of the Fund Council), Publicity Committee and School Committee.

It should be thoroughly understood that all time and services are given to the organization free of charge, and that every dollar, with the exception of campaign expenses, contributed by the public, goes to the purposes for which it is given.

Should Peterborough consider the establishment of a Community Fund will be referred to in the next article on Saturday.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS MAY TAKE CONTROL WIRELESS

By FRASER EDWARDS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 (United Press).—The curtain went up on the 1924 campaign today as the people of thirteen States went to the polls to vote in bi-elections, which were expected to develop issues that will have an important bearing on the fight for the Presidency.

Party managers were centering their interest on the contests in Maryland, New York, Kentucky, Vermont and Ohio. The Coolidge Administration figures in some of these elections. Republican leaders are watching the returns from New York especially, where four members of the Congress are to be elected, because of the slight majority for the G. O. P. in the House.

Veteran politicians also will closely scrutinize the results to discover any radical trend, which many are predicting may bring about some startling upsets in politics in the next Presidential election.

The wet and dry issue figures to a degree in the gubernatorial contest in Maryland, where Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Democrat, and Alexander Armstrong, Republican, both have declared in favor of modification of the Volstead act to permit light wines and beer.

Wet and Dry Issue

The prohibition issue also figures in the Vermont Senatorial election. There Porter H. Dale, a dry, who resigned from the House to become the Republican candidate, is running against Park H. Pollard, a Democratic cousin of President Coolidge, who is a wet. Strange as it may seem, reports reaching Washington from "rock-ribbed Republican Vermont" indicate that Pollard "has a chance."

Ernest W. Gibson of Brattleboro, Republican, is opposing Barton E. Bailey of Montpelier, Democrat, for the seat left vacant by Dale.

Kentucky, once a Democratic stronghold, is electing a Governor to succeed Gov. "Ed." Morrow, Republican, and party chiefs are interested in seeing whether the Bloody Hunting Ground is still debatable territory. Representative William J. Fields, Democrat, is opposing Charles I. Dawson, Republican, Attorney General of Morrow's Administration.

The annual election of the New York Assembly will furnish a test of strength for Gov. "Al" Smith. It is now Democratic by a slight majority and the State Senate is Republican by one vote.

To Fill Vacancies

Vacancies left in the House by the deaths of Representatives Riordan, Cochran and Ganly, Democrats, and Mott, Republican, of New York, are to be filled. Successors are to be chosen in the places of the late Representatives Cantrill of Kentucky and John W. Rainey of Illinois, both Democrats.

"Pivotal" Ohio is another centre of interest. Columbus, Toledo and Akron are electing mayors. These results may furnish a straw vote for the 1924 campaign.

Elections in other States are: Maine, a special referendum on a forty-eight hour week for women and children; Massachusetts, municipal elections, principally non-partisan; Virginia, election of the Senate and House of delegates and county officers; Rhode Island, Connecticut and Louisiana, municipal elections; Mississippi, election of all State and county officers.

FARM WOMEN TO HAVE SAY ON HER PROBLEMS

By HERBERT LITTLE

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 8 (United Press).—The American farm woman is going to have her say here this week.

The American Country Life Association, at its sixth annual conference, will centre its attention on the problems of the farm home.

Leaders in the organizations working on the problems of how the farm woman is to help her husband's co-operative marketing ventures; how the farm is going to be maintained if her son goes to the city, and what kind of a fellow her daughter is going to marry will address the meeting.

James R. Howard, Clemons, Ia., former president of the American Farm Bureau, is scheduled to address the meeting Nov. 9 on the questions, "Does the present business of agriculture make for a permanent, profitable and progressive country life?"

Kenyon L. Butterfield, Amherst, Mass., president of the organization, and Dean Sarah Louise Arnold, Lincoln, will speak on the opening day.

Dr. C. J. Galpin, economist in charge of the United States Department of Agriculture bureau on farm population and rural life, will discuss whether the farm family can afford modern institutions and facilities as far as the city family can.

Health in Farm Home

"The Price and Program of Health in the Farm Home" will be discussed by Dr. Caroline Hedger and Dr. N. P. Colwell, both of Chicago. Miss Julia Wade Abbott, New York; Bradford Knapp, Fayetteville, Ark., and Miss Alma Binzell, Minneapolis, Minn., are also on the Friday program. Late Friday afternoon a conference on "Influences and Institution' That Affect Home Life on the Farm" will be participated in by Alvah W. Taylor, Indianapolis, Ind., representing the church; Miss Katherine M. Cook, Washington, the school; Tait Butler, Memphis, Tenn., business and the store; Dan Wallace, St. Paul, Minn., the press; William L. Radcliffe, Washington, entertainment, and Howard W. Odum, Chapel Hill, N. C., public welfare agencies.

Henry C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, has been invited to attend the annual conference dinner Friday evening.

Mrs. Jane McKinnon, Raleigh, N. C., will preside Saturday. Speakers include Miss Isabel Bevier, Urbana, Ill.; Dr. Warren H. Wilson, New York; Mrs. John D. Sherman, Estes Park, Col.; Henrietta Roolofs, New York; Mrs. W. G. Martin, Dallas, Texas; Mrs. Ruby Green Smith, Ithaca, N. Y.; Miss Lita Bane, Urbana, Ill.; Miss Susie V. Powell, College Station, and Miss Josephine Armquist, Ames, Ia.

TRAFFICKING CHARGE

years, leaving there on December 19th, 1922. She stated that the accused had received letters from her on more than one occasion.

Gave Twigg Letters

"When were those occasions?" asked Mr. Rigney.

"On one occasion," was the answer "I remember it was the first part of May, 1922. I gave him a letter myself to be mailed to Guard Trotter, which was addressed to Lorne Stewart Windsor. That was an understanding between Trotter

"Where did you get the paper to write on?"

"There was any amount of it. The convicts attending school all had scribblers, and the guards taking letters out for them would furnish them with paper. I had the paper from the scribbler I had. Twigg was away from May till August and after he came back I gave him several letters to post.'

"How did you get them to him?"

Placed Letters in Window

"Through the window, where I would place it and he would get it There were about five or six letters placed this way."

"Were they all addressed to the same person?"

"Yes."

"When the letters were being placed there would they be seen?"

"Yes, by other convicts."

"What about the guard on the tower?"

"He would see the letter being placed there."

"Do you know cases of other letters being placed there for the accused?"

"No."

"Have you ever seen his handwriting?"

"Yes I received notes from him myself. This was after August, 1922 when I received about a half dozen or more."

"How were they delivered?"

"They were given to me by Fireman Tolhurst."

"How were they signed?"

"They were signed 'Arthur.' "

"Did all the letters reach you this way?"

"They did, except some he would bring himself and throw down in the yard which I would get. I think about four came this way."

Identified Writing

Witness stated she would be able to identify the handwriting of Twigg, and when shown a letter alleged to have been sent to Toronto by Twigg she stated that it looked exactly like Twigg's writing, though in the notes she received the writing was much smaller.

"Before you left the penitentiary did you have any commnication with Twigg?"

Was Given Tobacco.

"Yes, about the first of December I received a note through Fireman Tolhurst. I also received some tobacco, cigarette papers and matches from him when he was on duty in the female prison. This was in May, 1922, when he was with the painters who were working there. He handed the stuff to me in the hall of the female prison, and one of the prisoners, Convict Williams, saw him hand it to me. He was right beside Twigg, and stopped while Twigg handed me the tobacco, papers and matches."

Cross-Examined.

In answer to Mr. Day, witness stated that her first transaction with Twigg was about the first of May, 1922. On the occasion of receiving the tobacco, etc., she stated that she asked Convict Williams if he had any tobacco, and Twigg then handed her the tobacco. There were two guards on duty there, but the other guard was outside.

"How old are you?" asked Mr. Day.

"Twenty-two. I was nineteen when I came to the penitentiary."

"Where were you sentenced from?"

"From Toronto. I had been there working for three or four years as a waitress in a cafe."

"Why were you sent down?"

"The books of the penitentiary will show that. There were two men sent down with me."

Crown Prosecutor Rigney contended that this was not evidence in the case, but Mr. Day pointed out that as the witness had been called to give evidence as to the credibility of the accused, she also would be tested as to her credibility. Witness stated that at present she is on ticket-of-leave.

Was Summoned.

Witness stated that she was summoned to appear in court by Mr. Robertson, and that she gave a statement to Mr. Rigney after she had been summoned.

"Did they get a statement from you before?"

"No, it was all news to me. I was taken by surprise."

"Why didn't you tell them you knew nothing of this case?"

"Because I was afraid I would get into trouble. I was asked if I knew anything in regard to Guard Twigg."

"I thought so," remarked Mr. Day. "But not about this case?"

"No, I didn't know anything about it until I came here Monday. I wanted to tell the truth, for I've learned that truth is the best policy."

"When was it you were summoned?"

"On Tuesday of this week. I made the statement to Mr. Rigney yesterday."

Witness stated that she had given letters to Guard Twigg, but couldn't swear that he had mailed them. She stated that it was his duty to take the letters, but she knew he hadn't turned the letters in to the office as she would have been reported."

Knew Guard Trotter.

"Did you know Trotter?"

"Yes, it's a very easy matter to get acquainted with the men on the tower. I knew him for several months, and had conversations with him from the prison window."

"How long was Trotter on the tower?"

"About three months. I was well enough acquainted with him to talk to him. He asked me to write to him in Windsor, but he didn't say why."

"Well, what was the reason?"

"It was only pastime for me."

"Was it pastime for the guards and for you to run suck risks of being caught?"

"There wasn't much risk when guards were taking the letters out."

Witness stated that she understood Trotter was making some arrangements to pay Twigg for taking out the letters.

"He had money to spend to get notes from the lady he had only spoken to?"

"Yes, it was their look out, not mine."

Had Plenty of Paper.

Witness stated that she had been taking up shorthand, and bookkeeping, and had plenty of paper in her scribblers She stated that there is a rule that pages are not to be torn out of the library books, but it was an easy matter to take pages out of scribblers. She had not been furnished with paper from any guard.

"How did Tolhurst get notes from you?"

"I gave them to him when he would be in the female prison fixing the pipes. He must have delivered them to Twigg or I would not have gotten the replies I did."

Was Merely Pastime.

"What did Tolhurst get for doing it?"

"Nothing that I know of."

"What were the notes about?"

"Nothing except it was a pastime for me."

"Was it poetry?" asked the Magistrate.

"No."

Witness stated that she had not applied for parole just after entering the penitentiary, but that her mother and the Salvation Army in Kingston did. Her mother continually tried to have her paroled, until finally she did get out. She had been sentenced to five years, and would have served three years had she remained in the penitentiary until January 31, 1923.

Applied For Parole.

"Did you make any application for parole?" asked Mr. Day.

"Yes, I did later."

"Didn't the other two who came with you send word that you should get out?"

"Yes, they did at the time."

"I understand that the reason they gave was that you were in a delicate condition."

"That was not the case. Someone else might have given that reason, but I didn't and it wasn't right."

"Time Hangs Heavy."

Mr. Day stated that he could not yet see any motive for the writing of the letters merely as a pastime.

"Time hangs heavy, you know," said the Magistrate.

"Yes," replied Mr. Day, "but not on the guards."

Witness stated that she had not received anything from any other guard. She stated that she knew Twigg was back at the penitentiary, for she could see the keepers' hall and the main gate from her cell window, and could see him when he reported in the mornings.

Learned to Smoke at "Pen."

"Did you use the tobacco and papers you say you got?"

"Some of it, and I gave some to other girls in the prison."

"Did you smoke before you came to the penitentiary?"

"No, I learned to smoke there."

Witness stated that no one had access to the tower when the guard was on duty, as it was locked. She stated that the letters would be placed in the window when the matron was not about, and she also said that the last letter she sent to Trotter was taken to Twigg by Tolhurst. Twigg was at that time on duty at the prison of isolation.

Accused in Box Again.

The accused, Arthur Twigg, was then placed in the witness box again, and he absolutely denied that he ever had received a letter from the previous witness, or had given her a note or anything else. He stated that when on duty on the tower the guards do not come down for meals, but that they are sent up by a rope.

This concluded the evidence in the case, and Mr. Rigney let the evidence rest. The charge was read, it being that Twigg had been guilty of trafficking and received letters from convicts against Section 67, Chapter 1477, of the Penitentiaries Act. He contended that the evidence sustained the charge.

"What evidence is there of trafficking?" asked the Magistrate.

Mr. Rigney replied that the statement of the wife of the convict was evidence that dope had been sent to Twigg for her husband.

Corroboration Needed.

"What corroboration is there of her evidence?" asked Magistrate Farrel. "It is her evidence against Twigg's. Supposing he did receive letters and dope from her, what evidence is there that it was taken into the penitentiary? The man might have been carrying the matter on and playing her for money, without thought of running the risk of taking the dope into the penitentiary."

Mr. Rigney submitted that there was a breach of the Act, unless the Magistrate felt that there was no intent on the part of the accused.

"Frankly," said the Magistrate, "as between an officer of the penitentiary and these women, I would not condemn any man on the strength of the evidence of a woman of the stamp of that wife of the convict, herself a drug addict."

"What of the other woman, the one who wrote the letters?" asked Mr. Rigney.

Magistrate Not Impressed.

"I would take her evidence somewhat in the same way,' replied the Magistrate. "These two women are under pressure of the police, and convicted on a charge for which they have been remanded, and it is under these circumstances that they make their statements. Frankly, I am not impressed with their statements."

Mr. Rigney submitted that the matter of the suit-length could only have been known by the convict and his wife, and the mention of it in a letter alleged to have been written by Twigg showed communication between the three.

"I dont see how that carries any proof of guilt," said the Magistrate.

"It does," replied Mr. Rigney, "if Twigg wrote the letters."

"Oh, yes," said the Magistrate, "but she does not produce a letter which Twigg wrote, and I would hesitate to convict on her statement."

Not Isolated Case.

Mr. Rigney stated that he saw no evidence contradicting that of the two women. They were closely cross examined, and their stories were coherent. The sending of the letter in October was an important feature, and the reply was couched in such language as to indicate that it was not an isolated case. There was therefore reasonable conclusion that previous correspondence had been carried on. As to the authenticity he suggested that the evidence of the handwriting expert, Mr. Payne, carried a great deal of weight. Even the accused could not deny the similarity in the writing to that of his own.

Magistrate Farrell asked why no copy of the letter which was sent from Toronto was kept.

"Because Robertson did not think Twigg would be such an idiot as to reply," said Mr. Rigney.

"Then why did he write?"

"In hopes that a reply would be made."

"Why then did he not keep a copy of the letter?"

Mr. Rigney contended that the receipt of the letter from Toronto in October and the subsequent answer was good proof of previous correspondence. Then too the evidence of the female ex-prisoner showed consistncy and told of carrying out of letters.

Not Accept Evidence.

"I would not accept the testimony of a person of that stamp," said Magistrate Farrell, "against that of a penitentiary official, unless there is corroboration. It is purely her word against his."

Mr. Day stated that there was nothing to show that he had taken anything into the penitentiary or out of it, except on the statement of the woman.

Magistrate Farrell said there were several things that he desired to look up in the evidence, and would let the lawyers know of his decision.

police protection.

Prepare to Act.

Chairman Ald. Holloway raised this whole question in committee last night by opining that Council should be prepared to act were the police force to resign the middle of this month, or the Commissioners demand payment of salaries until the controversy is settled one way or the other in court.

Ald. Phelan thought General Williams might be asked to send along a squad of Provincial police were the local force to quit, and Ald. Turner did not think Provincial men, unacquainted with the city, would prove efficient substitutes for some time.

Not Judicious.

Admitting that the city must have police protection, appropriation overdrawn or not, Ald. Maher reiterated his contention that the Commissioners had not been judicious in their supervision, allowing, for instance, an expenditure of $824 in repairing the police car when a new Studebaker could have been procured for $1,000 and the old machine. Then he did not know but what the city is over-policed with a chief, an inspector, three sergeants, two plainclothes men, a motor car man, a cycle cop, a man doing stenography part of the time, and leaving four or five men for constable work. He did not think the post of morality officer, vacant since Adjutant Buntin left, needed refilling. As to salaries, he thought the average policeman underpaid, perhaps.

Ald. Holloway said the Act did not compel Council to provide either a police car or motor-cycle.

Among other and varied suggestions proposed for conduction in the circumstances was one that arrangements be reached for paying the police for six weeks without prejudice to the Council's position, and another, that Attorney - General Nickle be requested to see that the city is policed till the year's end should the present force quit.

Not Backing Down.

Ald. Phelan did not like the idea of backing down from the stand taken by Council, and Ald. Turner countered with: "I'm not in favor of backing down either, but we must supply an efficient police force." He approves of making a test case of the whole issue in Court, to force a ruling as to just what control, if any, Council has or will in future have over police expenditures.

Claim For Injury.

Committee discussed at length the case of Mrs. Kirk, who slipped on the icy sidewalk in front of C. M. Moncur's drug store last winter, breaking a limb. She has not yet fully recovered from her injuries, and is in a poor way financially. Dr. Morgan's bill of $135 for attendance is not paid, but the city has paid Mrs. Kirk's hospital bill of some $100 and given her a certain amount of relief weekly since the accident, without admitting liability.

Chairman Ald. Holloway and Ald. Crowe were appointed a committee to interview Mrs. Kirk regarding this matter and report.

There were present Chairman Ald. Holloway, Aldermen M. J. Maher, Mel. Turner and Joseph Crowe and City Solicitor Joseph Wearing.

Financial News and Views

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.— (United Press.)— Unfavorable development in Germany failed to influence sentiment, probably because other news was constructive and the trading element is paying but little attention to Europe, on the theory that things cannot be much worse there. Further substantial increase in freight traffic for the week ended October 27, increased copper shipments in October and reports of big crops of corn, potatoes, tobacco and apples all helped to increase confidence in the outlook. Prices were somewhat irregular at the opening, fractional losses and gains being recorded, but the market, especially Steels and Equipments, firmed up immediately, United Sttaes Steel going to 94 3-4. Baldwin, which has opened slightly down, rallied above Thursday's close and American Locomotive to 74 7-8. Attention was directly particularly to those issues by reports that railroads would continue equipment next year. After a burst of activity that carried Steel to 94 7-8, American Loco. to 73 1-4, and American Woollen to 75 3-4, the market settled down, with stocks churning over in a narrow range. Studebaker exceeded its 1-2 point, dividend was active slightly under 103, a fraction above Thursday's close and other motor and motor accessory stocks displayed equal strength. Mack Trucks around 1-2 and Stewart Warner at 88. Stocks continued oblivious to the foreign news at the start of the second hour, apparently concentrating their attention on the highly constructive character of the domestic developments. Leading industrials continued active around the best levels of the present rise and further sharp advances were staged by Congolum, Lima Locomotive and many other specialties. Savage arms made a new 1923 high at 42 1-4. Only 77,000 shares of Savage Common are outstanding and the directorate is known to own over 51 per cent. of this stock. The accumulation is understood to have been for a large capitalist who will be elected to the Board. It is not likely that Savage will consider dividends until next year. Stocks continued to display a strong tone the noon dealings in face of profit taking in Studebaker and other leaders of the advance. But while these stocks were reactionary other issues were taken up with the result that general buoyancy was practically unimpaired. California Petroleum was the outstanding feature of the oil group, jumping to a new high on the recovery at 21 1-4 in response to the extraordinary gain of $8,720,000 in gross earnings in the first nine months. Copper shares gave a better account of themselves, due largely to the upward price tendency of the metal. For the last few weeks Wall street has been hearing the working relations of the large copper groups were much more harmonious than up to a week or so ago. Opening prices included: Southern R.R. 35 1-8, up 1-8. Studebaker, 1 ex-dividend, up 5-8; Kennecott, Famous Players 64 7-8, off 7-8; Int. Nickel 132 1-2, off 1 1-2; Consolidated Gas 62, off 1-4; Baldwin 124 1-2, off 1-4; Reading 76 3-4; Pan Petroleum 59 1-2, off 1-2; American Loco. 73-4, up 3-8; St. Paul 13 1-4; Pan Petroleum B 57, off 3-8; North American 32 1-4, off 1-8; General Electric 181 7-8, off 3-8; National Biscuit up 1-4; U.S.S. 94 3-8, off 1-4; N.Y. 101 1-2, up 1-4; Can. 100 1-2, off 5-8; Mack Truck 81 1-8, off 1-2; Baltimore and Ohio 58 3-8, up 1-8; Maryland 22; Northern Pacific 53 up 1-2.

Telegraphic advices from the Kirkland Lake gold district and from Toronto are to the effect that strikes have been made by Tough Oakes-Burke both at the 675-foot and 800-foot levels which appear to be of great importance.

The so-called "main break" in the Kirkland Lake district along which all the big mines of the cap are situated comes into the Tough Oakes from the Wright-Hargraves and the Sylvanite on the West and continues through it in a northeasterly direction for about 3,500 feet. About 300 feet west of Tough Oakes' west side line a narrow diabase dyke trending north and south faults the "main break."

West of the dyke the Tough Oakes has developed on the 800 foot level an oreshoot 300 feet long extending to the Sylvanite line and very rich assaying from $20.00 to several hundred dollars a ton and averaging about $40 it is reported.

East of the dyke the "main break" runs several thousand feet through Tough Oakes ground before it passes into the property of the Continental Mines Company.

Although much prospecting has been done by Tough Oakes' management above the 500-foot level east of the dyke and a great deal of low grade ore put in sight no high grade ore as ever been found in the "main break" until the strikes recently made that of several weeks ago on the 675-foot level and that of last week on the 800. The sensational No. 2 vein which produced $1,102,000 worth of ore averaging $65 a ton from above the 400-foot level is east of the dyke but this north of the main break and is far by it at the 400.

The new strikes at the 675 and 800-foot levels are in the main vein. The ore is a "bonanza" grade. The drift on the 675-foot level going east when last reported was about 35 feet from the dyke and the face of the drift showed quantities of free gold and tellurides. On the 800-foot level three rich streaks appear in the vein one of them four inches wide going $800 a ton. This streak alone makes the vein for the width of the drift average $40. The ore in the drift will probably mill from $60 to $80 a ton. This is one of most remarkable and richest showings now being developed in Kirkland said.

Loyal Berlin

telephone, it was gathered that the people in Nurnburg believed the coup to be less serious than reports seemed to indicate.

Nurnburg lies between Munich and the border. First advices to the Ministry of Defence to-day reported Von Kahr had declined the offer of the Hitlerites to proclaim him dictator for all Germany.

General Von Lossow, whose action in administering an oath of loyalty to the Reichswehr under him, when he refused to be recalled by the Central government, precipitated the breach between Bavaria and the rest of Germany and also has refused to serve, it was said. A Ministry of Defence official saw hope in this. If it meant that these two men were opposing the Hitler coup, they thought it might mean the blow would fail.

Berlin remained quiet early to-day. The cordon of troops with tanks, posted about the quarter occupied by Government buildings were removed. Early in the morning heavily armed green police were on duty.

Many shops opened early for business as usual. As soon as the news reached Berlin a meeting of the Stresemann cabinet was hastily summoned shortly before midnight.

President Ebert proclaimed General Von Zeckt commander of all forces with all power necessary to put down the revolt. Troops surrounded the government quarters and were posted about Berlin to prevent an attack on the city or any rising from within.

French Knew of Coup.

PARIS, Nov. 9. — Exchanges of views are proceeding between France and her allies as to action that may be necessary if the movement in Bavaria extends to other States in the Reich. It was learned to-day that the French military secret service became ware of the movement in Bavaria yesterday morning and that it was this that prompted the French government to notify Berlin that it could not tolerate the establishment of a military dictatorship.

The Allied ambasadors in Berlin already have made clear to Chancellor Stresemann that they are opposed to a military dictatorship in Germany, the correspondent of the Journal telegraphed to-day.

The correspondent said the American ambassador informed Chancellor Stresemann that in event of a cuop d'etat of the right wing groups (Monarchists), the United States will announce that it has abandoned plans to settle the reparations question.

The Council of Ambassadors, after a meeting here, has decided to send a note to Poland and Germany, presumably about the danger of an impending Monarchist coup in the Reichs.

The note probably will be sent to-day, it was said in well informed quarters and will announce Allied opposition to the proposed return of the former Crown Prince to his Silesian dells.

A Munich despatch to-day said that Adolph Hitler, leader of the Bavarian reactionaries, addressed the co-operative societies in the name of the new government last night, saying:

"The day arrived for which we have waited for five years.

"There is much to be done; it may be dangerous work but we will conquer Germany's enemies and in the end we will make the Fatherland what destiny intended it to be, a proud and solid Empire."

General Maginot, Minister of War, returned from the Ruhr this morning and is to confer with Premier Poincare about the situation in Germany.

Hope for Suppression.

A London Central News despatch from Berlin relaying a Munich message, said the government of Premier von Knilling was acting in concert with Dr. Von Kahr, military dictator, and that they were hopeof mustering the "Putsch." General Ludendorf and Adolph Hitler, adds the despatch, have been locked in one of the rooms at the War Ministry, where they are in conference

Coupe Ended.

A Central News despatch from Berlin, says a message from Munich announces the end of the "Putsch," Ludendorm and Hitler have barricaded themselves in the war ministry, which is surrounded by troops; the message states that Reischwehr are loyal to the Berlin government.

A later despatch reported that Hitler and Ludendorf were captured by the storming troops to-day. Hitler was wounded.

A FORECAST OF PARLEY RESULT

Does Not Include any Organic Change in Constitutional Relations With British Dominions

LONDON, November 9. Canadian Press. — Another Imperial conference passed last night into history. For all parctical purposes both have concluded their labors. It has been six weeks of constant consultations, committees, conferences and speeches. What has been the result. Not until Monday will the official text of the resolutions be issued, but it may be forecasted that they will not indicate any organic change in constitutional relations.

As seen from a Canadian point of view, results of the conference are summed up by members of the Canadian delegation as follows.

Much clearer understanding of the Canadian position as to imperrelations; right of the Dominions to conclude treaties with foreign nations.

Recognition by the Admiralty for the first time of the prnciple of Dominion navies.

Recogniion that it is for Parliament and people of each part of the Empire to decide on the measure of its own defence preparations.

DR. J. P. COLLIP CLAIMS CREDIT

Development for Human Use of Insulin Accomplished Entirely by Himself--Shares Nobel Award.

TORONTO, Nov. 9.—Following the precedent set by Dr. F. G. Banting, in promptly sharing with Charles Best his best part of the Nobel prize award, the announcement is made by Prof. J. J. R. Macleod, of the department of physiology at the University of Toronto, that he will split his share with Dr. J. B. Collip of Alberta University. Thus the $40,000 award will be distributed equally among Messrs. Banting, Macleod, Best and Collip.

"Drs. Banting and Best showed by their experiments that insulin was present in extracts of the pancreas. It was then that Dr. Collip came in and with his assistance it was shown that it was possible to produce insulin suitable to continued use. His skill in bio-chemistry made his services very valuable in the preparation and purification of insulin," says Prof. Macleod, who, explaining that it would be invidious and quite unnecessary to apportion the work among the quartette, added: "I would like to emphasize that it was team work that did it."

Dr. Collip's Work

Dr. Collip himself is more specific. Writing to a former classmate in Toronto not long ago, he said:

"As to the part I played in the development of insulin, I can tell you that the development of a successful method for the isolation of insulin in sufficiently pure state for human use was accomplished entirely by myself.

"I also have the following physiological contributions to my credit: The use of normal animals as a mode of assay; the storage of glycogen by the diabetic animal under the influence of insulin (Banting and Best co-operated); the production of convulsions in normal animals, following adequate insulin dosage; the use of adrenalin and glucose to antagonize the above condition, the counter-action of ether hyperglycaemia by insulin; the effect of insulin administration upon the acidotic condition."

Scientists Are Busy

Asked this morning if he had any comment to make upon Dr. Collip's contributions, Dr. Banting said: "I have nothing to say." He repeated this when asked whether he was continuing his research work along with Prof. Macleod.

"We are working on the physiological action of insulin," said Prof. Macleod this morning. "All our spare time is spent in research. We are now working along different lines from those being followed by Dr. Banting."

Prof. Macleod had no statement to make as to what disposal he would make of his $10,000 of the Nobel prize.

Dr. Collip, according to a despatch from Edmonton, hasn't decided what to do with his share, but hopes to go abroad and give more time to research work. "It is a stimulating factor," he is quoted as saying, "when one does not have to worry about just where the money is coming from, when one is engaged in work of this sort that requires time."

Is Ontario Boy

Dr. Collip, at present professor of bio-chemistry in Alberta University, is a native of Belleville, Ont. He took his degree of B.A. at University of Toronto in 1912. He then specialized in physiology and bio-chemistry, studying under Prof. A. Macallum.

M. W. Davidson. M.P.P., for Calgary, urged in the Alberta Legislature last April that some recognition to Dr. Collip be given by the province. During the progress of the researches, Dr. Collip's contributions were recognized to such an extent that arrangements were made to have his leave of absence from Alberta extended so that he might continue his efforts.

Meantime, he is still engaged at Edmonton in efforts to improve insulin, and in attempts to perfect glucokinin, a vegetable extract by which it is hoped to duplicate the work of insulin.

The band will feature a special soldiers' number, "For King and Country," introducing the sounding of the "Last Post," also the reveille, and numbers that were reminiscent at the time of the war.

By special request they will also feature a selection, "The Musical Switch," containing over 60 different melodies, dovetailing into one another, from the "Soldiers of the King," to Rackmaninoff's prelude; "The Peer Gynt Suite," William Tell; "The Bridal Chorus," from Lohengrin, and excerpts from the overture, "Solenella," better known as the 1812 overture These are a few numbers contained in the selection and the audience is advised to sit still and listen intently for the various movements.

Mr. Harry Rush will sing Kipling's "Recessional," a quartette of trumpeters will sound the "Last Post," then one verse "Abide With Me," and immediately after the "Reveille" will be sounded. The full programme will appear in tomorrow's Examiner.

Can You Afford to Speculate?

EVERY time you buy something you are either speculating or making a definite investment.

Few people can afford to speculate. Yet many do it continually, in making their every-day purchases. And it is so unnecessary! The advertisements make it easy for anyone to avoid taking a chance.

The merchant or manufacturer who advertises, realize that the good-will of his customers means money in the bank to him. He knows that public confidence in his product and public respect for his own character are as valuable as his credit at the bank.

So he makes the individual satisfaction of his patrons, their loyalty and their friendship paramount issues in his business.

When you buy an advertised product, you can know in advance what to expect in return for your money. You can count on it being right. You are making an investment.

TRANTER, BATES, WARD FAVORITES IN SENIOR ROAD RACE MONDAY

Cobourg Entry Preceded By Reports of Fast Time at Ten Miles — Norwood and Millbrook Will Be Represented.

PUBLIC CAN HELP.

Not since the days when Fred Simpson, Ernie Wilson and Roy Best made the Examiner road race a notable sporting event in Eastern Ontario has there been a more promising list of starters than those who have signified their intention of lining up in Lakefield on Monday morning.

Dick Bates last years' winner, Herb Tranter who beat the field in 1921 and Johnny Ward who trailed Bates a year ago comprise a trio who should make an exciting race themselves. They have had considerable experience on the road, are reported in fine condition and, if the roads are favorable, should foot it to Peterboro as fast as the best performances of the pre-war years.

There are other speedy local boys on the list who should help make the major race a battle, and several outsiders, one from Norwood and two from Cobourg are expected to make a good showing. One of the Cobourg men is heralded as a probable winner, is reported to have a good mark for ten miles.

Doug. Loomis expects fourteen entries in each event, the juniors starting from Nassau for a distance of five miles and the seniors following the longer route from Lakefield to the Y.M.C.A. The races this year are being run under the auspices and direction of the Peterboro Amateur Athletic Association with Charlie Thorpe chairman of the Committee and Mr. Loomis assistant. In fact they have divided the responsibility, Mr. Thorpe handling the major races and Mr. Loomis assuming the general supervision of the junior contest.

Go Up By Train.

It is likely that the seniors will go to Lakefield by train instead of motoring. They can undress at the Lawless House and should be as warm as if they were stepping out of the gymnasium. Mr. Thorpe has been apprehensive of the holiday weather and has pointed out that to motor up the squad might expose themselves to a chill which would set them back at the outset. Full details of the arrangements will be published tomorrow.

The Examiner revived the Thanksgiving Day races after the war, and the results of its efforts during the last two years should present a fast and fairly numerous field for the P.A.A.A. officials. It is to be hoped that the owners of motor cars will not clutter up the west side river road while the race is in progress but will give the runners a chance by offering them an open highway over the whole route. A little restraint of interest and thoughtfulness for the contestants should preclude any unnecessary traffic obstacles not only along the finishing course within the city but also out along the country stretches. A ten mile race with the estimating of pace and reserves of energy imposes enough hardship on the contestants without the obtrusion of joy-riding spectators sitting back in the comfort of closed cars forcing the runners to dodge around them.

Entries Close Tonight.

Entries for both races close tonight at 10 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A.

Billy Evans Says

Jackson Great Batsman Views of Eddie Collins Johnson Has His Say Made Unusual Debut

One day last summer while making a jump from the east to the west, I happened to be on the same train with the Washington and Chicago clubs. It was a long, tedious trip in which numerous fanning bees helped kill most of the time. In one of the groups of players was Eddie Collins of the White Sox and Walter Johnson of the Nationals. Nothing affords a better topic of conversation for ball players than base hits. Various members of the group were eulogizing some of the great batters of the game.

"I have seen most of the great batsmen of the last 20 years and to my way of thinking there never was a better natural hitter than Joe Jackson," remarked Eddie Collins. "When Joe was with the White Sox I never tired watching him bat. It was a pleasure to see him swing, and when he hit the ball there was a ring to it that was pleasing to the ear. In the past 20 years the game has had such great hitters as Lajoie, Wagner, Keeler, Cobb, Sisler nad others, but to my way of thinking none of them had a thing on Joe Jackson."

"You haven't missed it very much" chirped Walter Johnson. "Any time we played Chicago, I was always glad when Jackson had been disposed of without having him break up the game. Jackson didn't seem to have a weakness, yet he was a most peculiar style batsman, as on a certain ball he would look weak and when you would come back with the same style pitch, he would rattle it against the fence. Jackson was a natural batsman, who didn't take many strikes, and when a hitter is always swinging he is mighty dangerous."

The nice things that were being said about Jackson caused me to get in a few words. I well recall that I made mention of the fact that no American League umpire could ever recall of Jackson taking issue in a called strike. Two strikes never worried Joe as he always figured he only needed one to hit it. Among players and umpires there was genuine regret when Jackson's connection with the scandal of 1919 caused his withdrawal from the game.

In all probability no ball player in the history of the game ever made an unusual a debut in minor and major league baseball as did Jackson. Joe came to the Cleveland club in his third year in professional ball. During that time he played in four different leagues, and each organization he led in batting. He started with Greenville in the Carolina League and topped the swatters with a mark of .346. Playing with Savannah he led the South Atlantic with .358 and with New Orleans in the Southern League was he pacemaker with .354. Joining Cleveland late in the year he topped the American League with .387. Some record.

CANADIAN SOCCER PLAYERS MIGRATE.

D.F.A. President Says It Is An Annual Drift.

WINNIPEG, November 8. — The Dominion Football Association is not taking the migration of Eastern Canadian football players to the United States very seriously, according to President John Easton.

Mr. Easton said to-day the same thing happens every year when the United States season commences.

Mr. Easton has written to the United States asking for information as to the reports of the players leaving Canada, but is leaving the matter in the hand of the eastern officials, who are in closer touch with the situation than the eastern men.

CHURCH LEAGUE FORMED

Last evening at the Y.M.C.A. the Church Bowling league for this year was formed. There was a full turn out and all indications point to another successful year of good bowling. Already five entries have been entered. There is room for only one more and any team desiring to enter the league are warned not to delay as this vacancy will certainly soon be filled.

Last year the George Street team came out on top of the heap after a season of good fun in which some classy bowling featured.

C.P.C. TEAM ENTERS.

The city ten pin league will be closed Saturday night and the schedule will be drawn up next week. Canadian Packing are the latest addition. Jim McDonald and Al Heckman are among the C.P.C. boosters and it is expected that they will line up a strong quintette.

Sammy Bohne, infielder for the Cincinnati Reds, is said to be the only Jewish players in the major leagues.

JINX FOLLOWS FISHING BOATS

Unsuccessful Contender in Elimination Races Is Wrecked—Crew Safe.

GLOUCESTER, Mass, Nov. 8.—Ill-luck continues to pursue fishing schooners which have figured in the races for the International Fishermen's Trophy. Word was received here to-day that the Elizabeth Howard an unsuccessful contender in two elimination contests to choose the United States representative in the international event had been wrecked off Porter's Island, Nova Scotia. The news came in a telegram to Captain Ben Pine skipper of the Columbia in this year's races with the Bluenose of Halifax, and manager of the Atlantic Supply Company.

The telegram to Captain Pine said that the vessel went ashore yesterday twenty eight miles east of Halifax harbor and was a total loss. The message was signed by John McInnis, of Gloucester skipper of the schooner. He and all eight members of the crew, the message said were safe.

The Elizabeth Howard left here November 11, for Newfoundland, for a cargo of herring. She is owned by William M. Howard of New York City and is under charter to the Atlantic Supply Company. The boat is said to be the only fishing schooner of American registry painted white.

The "jinx" first got in its work when the Esperanto which brought the trophy back to Gloucester in 1920, was wrecked on Sable Island in June 1921. A year later the Puritan built by Gloucester men as a cup contender was lost in almost the same spot. The Henry Ford, which lost to the Bluenose last year, went aground just after her launching at Essex and pounded on the sandbars for a week before she was floated repaired and sent out to the fisheries. The Columbia was rammed by a French trawler off Sable Island last Spring and was saved with difficulty The Howard herself was in difficulties in the elimination races with the Ford off Gloucester last year. In one race she carried away her topmost and in another it was only the seamanship of Captain Pine then her skipper, that saved her from a collision with a destroyer.

OPEN AIR RINK FOR OLYMPIC HOCKEY GAMES.

CHAMONIX, Nov. 9.—Arrangements for the fortnight of winter sports which are taking place here in connection with the Olympic championships next January are going ahead rapidly, and the big events promise to be held under ideal winter conditions. Canada's representatives will be competing under conditions that will be very much similar to those in the vicinity of northern Quebec where there is plenty of ice and snow and the winter sports can be staged without the aid of artificial ice or other assistance.

Chamonix, where the sports will be staged, is situated in the valley of the same name and lies in the shadow of Mont Blanc; it is from here that the trips to the summit of the huge mountain begin. But a short distance away are the ever moving glaciers that creep down the mountain side into the valley and provide a never ceasing source of interest to the visitors. The town is one of the most charming winter resorts in Europe and consequently boasts of the finest accomodation possible in its hotels and other appointments.

The Canadian hockey team will be playing under rather strange conditions in some respects inasmuch as the games will be staged in the open air and it will probably be necessary to give the men plenty of time to get used to the rink before they enter the championship games. The town in which the rink is situated is high up in the mountains and the change in climate will also have to be considered by the foreign aggregations.

Start January 25.

The winter sports will get under way on January 25th and continue until February 5th. With the exception of the first and last days, which will be devoted more or less to ceremonials, the program calls for a full day of sport every day, with carnivals in the evening. Hockey does not get under way until January 28th, and the schedule is due to be finished on February 1st, so that the teams should be due to have a game almost every day. The actual schedule of games and the teams to meet on the opening day has not been announced as yet.

The program of sports consists of hockey, ski jumping and racing, speed skating and figure skating, curling, bobsleigh and toboggan races. Just at the present time a huge stadium is being prepared here for the sports. The size of the stadium, when completed, will be about 36,000 square metres and will provide space for the ski-jumping ground, bobsleigh, skeleton tracks and other features.

Expect Canada to Win.

Little is known of the strength of the representatives of the respective countries who will be competing in the sports but there are some branches in which the authorities here seem to think that the is a foregone conclusion. They look forward to Canada as the hockey champions once more, with the team from the United States as the most stubborn opponent to be disposed of. The Scandinavian representatives are apparently considered the strongest in ski jumping and ski racing events, while the other sports will be contested by able representatives from all of the countries.

The program of sports will be as follows: January 25th, open ceremony; January 26th, speed skating at 500 and 5,000 metre distances; January 27th, speed skating and curling; January 28th, hockey and international figure skating for ladies; January 29th, military reconoitring, ski race, hockey and international figure skating for men; January 30th, hockey and figure skating; January 31st, long distance ski racing over 50 kilometres, hockey and international figure skating (couples); February 1st, all hockey; February 2nd, distance ski racing, 10 to 18 kilometres, bobsleigh and ski-joering competitions; February 3rd, bobsleigh competition and sparkstotting; February 4th toboggan competition and ski jumping contests. On February 5th, [illegible] international sports congresses held and the carnival will be brought to a close with the distribution of prizes in the evening.

LAWRENCE, Kas., Nov. 9.—A 17-year-old Choctaw brave, standing 6 feet 5 inches in his nude tootsies and weighing 225 pounds, is a member of the Haskell Indians' football squad this year. Roebuck is the biggest Indian ever to report for football work here, and is still growing. Coach Hanley predicts he will be a 250-pounder by next year. Roebuck shows skill as a gridiron athlete and is expected to be a star in time.

STAGE SET FOR OSHAWA GAME

Collegiate Confident of Winning at Home and Hope to Win on Holiday Too.

The stage is all set for the game at Riverside Park tomorrow afternoon when the Oshawa High School team and the local Collegiate's squad in their rugby battle. The first game of a home and home series, points to count, to decide which team shall meet the winner of Kingston-Perth game for Eastern provincial honors.

Last night the P.C.I. team had a workout and another light workout tonight. Last evening the locals interference was working in a manner that will muffle completely all the opposition's defence. Coach Brown is confident that if the line 'cut' their men the way they were doing in practice yesterday afternoon that the "garnet and grey" will carry off a victory in both games. He will likely start with the same line up that worked so smoothly last Saturday against Lindsay, but has worked in a few of the best of the second team as substitutes for tomorrow.

The Oshawa have the heavier team and will likely depend on bucking and straight rugby, while the Petes being the lighter will depend on speed, trick plays and interference. Thus the local fans will have an opportunity to watch a game played with same conditions prevailing as in the Queen's-Varsity game. In fact most of the P.C.I. plays have been successfully copied directly from the Queen's plays. The hop formation with line shifts is a tricolor maneuvre.

The locals are going to put forth their greatest efforts in the game so as to get a margin of points to carry with them for their game in the motor town on Thanksgiving Day.

Certainly a battle royal is promised and the Collegians should lack no dearth of fans at their back in this their crucial battle. The P.C.I. proved themselves a neat team last Saturday and the fans should be out in droves to watch them perform.

CANADIANS PLAY YALE.

New Haven, Conn., November 8.—Three Canadian University hockey teams are on Yale's schedule for 1923-24, according to the list of games announced to-night by Wm. H. Cowles, Jr., of Spokane, Wash., the manager of the team. The schedule calls for a game with McGill University, December 19, a game with the University of Montreal on January 3, and a game with Queen's University January 5. In each case Yale will be the visitor.

GUTHRIE UNIQUE AMONG UMPIRES

Few Arbitrators Have Color, But Bill Has Oodles Of It.

BY BILLY EVANS.

Umpiring is a rather colorless profession It is the duty of the umpire to call plays as he sees them. When the ball is delivered by the pitcher to the batsman it is either a ball or strike and the base runners are either out or safe. The work of the umpire is largely mechanical, it is a position that offer few possibilities for color.

Among the men who have umpired in the major leagues for the past two-score years have been many great umpires, but few real characters, men with color. Tim Hurst, Silk O'Loughlin, Bill Byron and Bill Guthrie were a few of the unusual characters who have held the indicator. Hurst and O'Loughlin have passed away, while Byron and Guthrie are back in the minors.

In an official capacity I have been indentified with all four, each had his own unusual style. Tim Hurst was the master at repartee Silk O'Loughlin was the autocrat of the diamond, no one dared doubt his statement that he never missed one in his life. Bill Byron was the singing arbirtrator. When the ahletes poured tales of woe into Byron's ear he gave no heed, but sang to them little ditties intended to allay their injured feelings, but which usually stirred them up all the more.

The last of the four unique umpires who have graced the majors was Bill Guthrie, who broke into the American League with me late in the fall of 1922. And believe me, Bill Guthrie is a mighty good umpire. I shall never forget Bill's opening remark when he greeted me in the dressing-room at Detroit.

"Well, Kid, here I am. I have been shooting at this league for 15 years and finally made the grade." Then a slight hesitation. "And now the big question is, how long am I going to stay here?"

In his very first game Bill chased Catcher Picinich, then playing with Washington, from the game. With the sacks loaded and the count three and two Bill called the third strike for the final out, a curve ball that broke over the plate. Picinich protested loudly and then took his shower. The name Picinich was a tongue twister to Bill and before the start of the game he had shortened it to Spinach. Here is how he explained the passing of Picinich when we got into the dressing-room.

Called Him Spinach.

"What do you think of Spinach, the vegetable catcher on the Washington club? I called the third one right in the alley and he turned around and started to sing the Wabash Blues."

"What did you do?" I asked Bill.

"I told him that everything he said to me was old stuff and unless he had a new set of words to beat it to the club house." He did.

The first time Guthrie saw the New York club he got into an argument on the very first play of the game. Whitey Witt hit a slow grounder to the infield and gave Guthrie a hair-line decision at first. Bill called him out. As Witt ran back to protest, Miller Huggins, who had been coaching at third base, also rushed over to join Witt in the chorus. Before either had a chance to say much, Guthrie shouted:

"The gate for you, Witt and you can take the bat-boy with you," said Guthrie, as he pointed to the diminutive Huggins. The sally brought forth a smile from even the irritated manager of the Yanks and he beat it with Witt, almost before the game had started.

No Close Decisions.

Like O'Loughlin, Guthrie didn't take much stock in the close ones, to him the decisions were either this or that, the this being accompanied with the umpires' way of motioning a runner out, and the that with the signal of safe. There were no close ones, either this or that.

During the two months Bill Guthrie worked with me he kept me constantly in good humor. He was original in every way. Any ball player who ever won an argument from Guthrie deserved it. Bill was an unusual character, one of the few that have graced the umpire profession. Had he stuck in the big show he would have earned a place with Hurst, O'Loughlin and Bryon for being original. He would have furnished columns of copy.

I was mighty sorry to see him depart from the majors. He was a good umpire, even though the general belief is, that the only good umpires are the dead ones.

SPORT NOTES

"As it is there isn't a really great team playing the game this year. Queen's are probably the best of a bad lot."—Thus wails the Toronto Telegram. Evidently they forget up there that this same Queen's team defeated Argos on their own ground last year—and it would be sacrilege on the part of any Toronto paper to say that a team with Connacher on its list was not a "great" team. Just because Hogtown's championships are disappearing this season is no reason for saying that the game is going to the bow-wows.—Kingston Whig.

From Toronto comes a rumor to the effect that this is Harry Batstone's last season with Queen's. It is claimed that he will take a course in dentistry and that he will play with Argos next season and then with Varsity.

TALK ON CURRIE AND KIPLING

Miss Gertrude Petry of Port Hope Welcome Visitor to Women's Canadian Club.

The regular meeting of the Women's Canadian Club was held yesterday afternoon at 4.15 in the Public Library hall. Miss A. Lancaster presided. Miss Gertrude Petry daughter of Dr. Petry of the Trinity College School Port Hope gave a short address based on selections from Rudyard Kipling's writings. Miss Petry said it was a great pleasure for her to be able to speak to the ladies of Peterboro. She stated that although she attended Dr. Currie's school of Expression in Boston she is not an elocutionist.

Dr. Currie's Work

She gave a short address on the work of Dr. Currie and explained why she would not want to be an elocutionist. Dr. Currie used his voice so much that he lost it. He gave up his work and went abroad where he studied with the greatest doctors in Italy France and Germany and after hard study regained his voice. He returned to America where he taught. Clergymen teachers actors and many other professional people came to him. He gave a recital to raise money for the school of which he made a great success. Dr. Currie believes that no matter how much knowledge a clergyman has it is no good to him if he can't make the people hear him from his pulpit. Dr. Currie is now dead but is not forgotten.

Talk on Kipling

Speaking on Rudyard Kipling Miss Petry stated that English literature was dying out in Canada and that there was something radically wrong with the way it is taught in the schools. She stated that pupils once they leave school have no more use for English literature and don't want to see it any more.

Rudyard Kipling was born in Bombay India in 1865. He was educated in the Service College England. From 1857 to 1889 he travelled in China Japan and America and then returned to England. He married there and then returned to India. Many of his earlier books were failures from the point of view of financial gain. One of the things he is noted for is his stories for children.

Miss Petry recited the Legend of Evil the Thousandth Man and Mandalay with several other of the less known works of the author. Before the close of her address she also recited The Recessional.

A vote of thanks on behalf of the society was moved by Mrs. Jas. Kendry and seconded by Miss M. Archer.

LEAVING THE CITY GETS WRIST WATCH

Presentation to Mrs. F. Read From Sister Rebekahs.

Following the regular business of Golden Link Rebekah Lodge No. 81 at its last meeting Mrs. Fred Read who leaves shortly to reside in Los Angeles California was presented with a suitably engraved gold wrist watch. The presentation was accompanied by the following address beautifully illuminated:

DEAR SISTER READ:

It is with deep regret twe have learned of your departure from our midst and have gathered here this evening to say goodby and wish you a safe journey. We will not only miss you from our many social events but for your ever willingness to respond when asked to take a place on the staff or to assist with any other work in connection with the lodge. Your duties were always performed with a smile.

In token of our esteem and as tangible evidence of your sterling worth we ask you to accept this simple gift. It is hard to express in materiality the sentiments which belong to the finer senses of humanity but we trust that you will look through and around and above the gift and visualize the feelings of respect and cordiality and affection that prompt the givers.

And we express the hope in and above everything that the Grand Master of all Lodges and Orders will have us all in His keeping against the day when He will make His final visit of inspection.

Signed on behalf of Golden Link Rebekah Lodge No. 81.

Mrs. Read replied with a few well-chosen expressions of appreciation following which an enjoyable evening was spent in cards and music. Mrs. Morrison won the ladies' prize for cards Mrs. Martin a consolation award Mr. Watts the gent's prize and Mr. Fred Read a consolation award.

The musical programme follows: Colonel J. W. Miller chairman; Norman Watts piano solo; Florence Saunders vocal solo; Miss Woods piano solo; Miss Evans violin solo; Miss Kennedy vocal solo; E. J. Holston cornet solo; Veron Fuller piano solo; Miss E. Williamson vocal solo; Mr. A. Dick song

AT THE GRAND.

A GREAT BILL.

It is a sparkling programme of pictures and vaudeville that Manager H. W. Bickell is offering his patrons at the Grand Opera House for the balance of the week, and if future bills approach in excellence that shown last night there will be no doubt of the popularity or the success of the new venture.

There are five first-class vaudeville acts offering a variety of entertainment and each of them a worthy number, the impression created last evening being thoroughly satisfactory. Joe Garcia, contributing something new in the way of balancing feats, opens the bill, and his work throughout is clean-cut. With a couple of chairs and a table, Garcia is able to put on a striking act in which he performs a number of difficult stunts with a nonchalance that makes them look easy.

Reeves and Gale follow in a neat singing, talking and musical act, in which the female number sings and dances nicely, while the male half of the sketch contributes an amusing line of patter and plays a violin most delightfully. The act gets over smoothly.

Then comes Billy Melbourne and Company in an amusing skit, pretentiously staged in two settings, in which there is a rich vein of comedy, as well as some very tuneful singing. There are three members of the company and they put their act over most successfully.

Billy Russel, billed as a musical comedian, earns the title by reason of his unusual harmonied playing and his stories.

The bill is wound up by Hart and Francis in a juggling and throwing act that contains much new stuff and is most cleverly done. Boomerangs are used to good effect, sailing over the heads of the audience and back to the stage, while the performers juggle hats, hoops and other things with amazing dexterity.

The feature picture is a film version of James Whitcombe Riley's story, "The Girl I Loved," in which Charles Ray is seen at his best. It is a rural setting, the kind in which Ray has made his reputation, but it is a most unusual story inasmuch as everything doesn't end happily for the hero. The love interest reigns supreme throughout the action and there are a couple of dramatic surprises that add greatly to the effect. Excitement is furnished by a most realistic runaway and there is not a dull moment throughout. The photography is unusually beautiful. The picture itself is worth the admission price and with the vaudeville added, the Grand's bill is a sure winner.

AT THE CAPITOL.

The Zev-Papyrus race, the event in which the matched three-year olds of England and America struggled for supremacy on a New York race track a short time ago, is the big attraction of the picture programme at the Capitol Theatre for this week end. With ordinary and slow motion effect and with the horses racing by against a blur of spectators as they must have appeared to most at the time of the race, the event is pictured. Here are the two superb beasts in every pose, on the training field, in workouts around the track walking to their stables. Measurements are given, almost identical in both instances, their jockeys are pictured, there is a glimpse of owners and trainers, of the enormous crowd that packed the stands, 70.000 strong, with thousands of cars parked nearby and there is the race itself exciting, memorable, Papryus leading briefly, then the hooded Zev gaining and holding his advantage until he gallops in, lengths ahead running the mile and a half race in 2 minutes 35 2-5 seconds.

CharlesJones makes a capital hero in "Second Hand Love," the picture whose title gives a semi-ironical twist to the ensuing drama. It may be a case of secand hand love, all right but why emphasize it in the title? It is a picture of possibilities that are not always fulfilled. One has the sensation of waiting for something to happen that doesn't transpire and the feeling that the elements for a real production have been weakened to a sort of green tea affair, with a cast of actors who give the impression of being equal to any situation struggling to a finale in a milk and water drama. There is a real honest to goodness villain a hero and heroine in an unusual setting, both of whom are real actors, and that's all There are a few fireworks with the whole affair sizzling down to a mighty tame ending of wedding bells and a blushing widowbride. It seems a pity that Charles Jones couldn't be provided with a more red-blooded vehicle in which his unmistakable talent might function to better advantage. However, couldn't expect to do much but pet any picture with a title such as this er out to a tame end. There is a good dog actor included in the cast.

The comedy is a Sennett mix-up, in which a philandering inventor with a 'cut-up' child becomes involved in a flirtation with a sprightly young married lady. They ascend in the hero's combination auto-balloon and the lady faints from fright. A subsequent descent to a jazz cabaret and an adventure with a group of Zoo lions leads to an ending with the hero diving to safety and alighting on a whale's back.

"THE COMMON LAW" AT CAPITOL MON., TUES., WED.

"The Common Law," the famous Robert W. Chambers novel, has been done into pictures by the Selznick company and will be shown at the Capitol Theatre for three days commencing Monday. Next to the story value perhaps the most outstanding feature of this production is its cast which co-stars Corinne Griffith, Conway Tearle and Elliott Dexter, and carries in their support such celebrated players as Doris May, Hobart Bosworth, Miss du Pont, Bryant Washburn, Phyliss Haver, Harry Meyers and Wally Van.

The story of "The Common Law" is so well known that it is hardly necessary to more than briefly sketch it. It has to do with the life of an innocent young girl, thrown quite by chance into the society of artists, sculptors, and the Bohemian atmosphere which surrounds this class of people. She consents to pose in the nude and achieves a great success as a model. Great love comes to her and is returned by the artist who first saw her possibilities, but any union between them is bitterly opposed by the artist, Neville's family. She finally offers to live with her lover as his common law wife and such a liason is almost effected. A dramatic conclusion is grippingly and realistically handled.

AT THE ROYAL.

"THE KENTUCKY DERBY" A THRILLER PLEASES CROWDS AT THE ROYAL

Theatre-goers at the Royal Theatre last night were treated to an exciting series of thrills, including fights, shipwrecks, rescues and a spirited horse race, when "The Kentucky Derby," a Universal screen version of the old thriller, "The Suburban," was shown. Those who remember Charles T. Dazey's famous melodrama will find in the picture all the suspense, the flavor and the entertainment which gripped the gallery gods of a decade or so ago, plus a new understanding of the story and more vivid climaxes made possible by screen technique.

King Baggot, the director who made the picture, filmed much of it at the exact scenes of the story, on the stock farms around Lexington, Kentucky, and at the Churchill Downs race track near Louisville. He managed to catch on the screen all the romance of the Blue Grass region and the true atmosphere of the land of throughbreds. In fact, actual pictures of the Kentucky Derby won by Morvich are used as a part of the thrilling action of the screen feature.

Reginald Denny, who has become a screen idol, takes the lead in "The Kentucky Derby," ably supported by a cast of superior quality. Denny takes the part of a young Kentucky boy who is thrown out of his home because of his marriage with the daughter of a Walter McGrail, Lionel Belmore, Wilford Lucas, Harry Carter, Kingsley Benedict and others.

Four performances will be given Saturday. A special kiddie matinee Saturday morning at 10 A.M., and 2:30, 7 and 9 P.M.

SPECIAL MORNING MATINEE AT THE ROYAL 10 A.M.

In order to satisfy the little ones who like a horse race as well as their parents, a special morning performance of "The Kentucky Derby" will be given Saturday morning at 10 A.M. The children will be well taken care of and parents can send them to the Royal with this assurance.

SOCIETY GIRL FINDS BOXER IS HER IDEAL

Jack London's Story of Romance and Pugilism Is Made Into Entertaining Film.

How hard must a cultured and refined society girl of the "cold-blooded" type be shocked to take the prudishness out of her? How much of the primitive he-man do women in general like to find in their mates?

It's an interesting question that would involve hours of discussion, but the time would be wasted since a clear picturization of the whole question comes to the Royal theatre next Monday when the Universal-Jewel special production, "The Abysmal Brute," will be shown.

"The Abysmal Brute" is Jack London's famous novel of the squared circle in which Reginald Denny stars for the screen, with Mabel Julienne Scott as his leading lady. It is a Hobart Henley production, which promises a good deal in view of Henley's filming of "The Flirt," Booth Tarkington's family classic, which is a remarkable screen success.

Denny is the man, a prize fighter without "the girl" knowing that. Mabel Julienne Scott is cast opposite him as the girl who falls in love with him but is utterly unprepared for the disclosure of his prize fighting activities, which shocks her sensitive, "hothouse" feelings.

Would the average girl, raised in a quiet atmosphere of wealth and luxury and unaccustomed to such things as prize fighting, be so rudely shocked by this disclosure as to completely "drop" the man? Or would she, after a time, realize that her viewpoint was narrow and that there were things she didn't understand—one of them that the boxing sport today is one of the cleanest games in the world? "The Abysmal Brute" clearly illustrates these things.

Well known players who have supporting roles in "The Abysmal Brute" includes Charles French, David Torrence, Hayden Stevenson, Craufurd Kent, Buddy Messenger, Nell Craig, Irene Haisman, Dorothea Wolbert, George Srewart, Harry Mann, Kid Wagner, Tom McGuire and others.

AT THE REGENT.

"BELLS OF SAN JUAN" WITH JONES A BIG HIT

Greeted by one of the largest and most enthusiastic audiences that have attended the Regent Theatre for some time, "Bells of San Juan," a William Fox production, starring Charles Jones, opened a three days' run.

The story from which the picture was adapted was written by Jackson Gregory, one of the best known writers of western adventure stories. This knowledge, coupled with the fact that Charles Jones, who is the ideal western character, assured the audience that they were to see a worthwhile production.

Jones enacts the role of a young western sheriff and is ably supported by Fritzi Brunette, a newcomer to leading roles, who capably plays the part of a "lady doctor."

The picture is a rip roarer from start to finish and is sure to make more friends for the Regent Theatre.

These are the kind of picutres that will make Will Hays' job easier and increase the popularity of the motion pictures.

Everyone should see this stirring western drama.

JOS. J. DUFFUS WINS HONORS AT PLOWING

Mr. J. J. Duffus entered the tractor plowing class with his Fordson tractor and an Oliver plough in the East York plowing match, which was open to the world.

York County is the hot-bed of champion plowmen in the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. Duffus had never been defeated in tractor match work prior to the international match held at Lindsay last year, when he was defeated by Clarke Young in the gold medal class.

Strange to say, when he entered the contest on Tuesday morning Mr. Young again was his chief opponent, but Mr. Duffus succeeded in defeating him and winning first for crown and third prize for best plowed land.

Mr. Duffus states that competition in all classes was extremely keen, but from the standpoint of attendance it was not nearly so good as the Peterboro County match.

BOYS GETTING BETTER WHILE GIRLS WORSE

CHICAGO, November 9 (Canadian Press). — Boys are becoming better all the time, while the girls between the ages of 12 and 20 are becoming more wayward, according to Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle, chief of the Women's Division of the Department of Police at Washington, D.C., here to study police conditions.

The gay cabaret life and cheap literature are making the majority of girls in the United States unfit to become wives and mothers, Mrs. Van Winkle said.

Most of the wayward girls turned over to the police women come from the middle and rich groups, she explained, stating that the poorer families think more of having a good home than dancing and drinking.

France and Allied Ambassadors Protest Return. Rumor Says He Will Head Monarchists Kaiser's Security Questioned

CAUSES SENSATION

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 10.—(Special.)—The Dutch Government officially announced to-day that former Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm, of Germany, crossed the German frontier this morning en route to his estate at Oels, Upper Silesia.

The government states that he left this morning for the frontier, accompanied only by Aide De Camp Von Muehlen. Later the government received information that the Prince had crossed the frontier for Silesia.

The government's statement does not mention the exact spot where he crossed the frontier.

An Exchange Telegraph account of his departure says he was accompanied by Burgomaster Kolf of Wieringen. Before leaving he addressed a letter to the population expressing regret at being unable to say good-bye and also expressing his gratitude for the good friends he had made during his years of exile and for the hospitality shown him.

It is considered here that the Dutch government had no right to detain him in Holland, that his departure is quite legal and that it will not involve Holland in any diplomatic conflict. It has caused a sensation, none the less.

France Has Bad Impression.

France emphatically objects to the return of the former Crown Prince to Germany, it was authoritatively declared in Paris to-day. Premier Poincaire in his recent note to Germany about the Crown Prince demanded confirmation or denial of the numerous reports current lately that he was preparing to return. He pointed out in strong, if diplomatic language, the "deplorable impression" that would be created in France by his return even if it were as a private citizen.

To Head Monarchists.

Rumors are circulating in Utrecht that the ex-Crown Prince has gone to put himself at the head of the Monarchist movement, but tis is conjectural and there are no means of verifying it.

Ambassadors Protest.

A note signed by President Poincare as President of the Allied Council of Ambassadors, was delivered to the German Charge D'Affaires yesterday, protesting against the return of ex-Crown Prince Frederick William to Germany.

Security of Kaiser.

Holland may not be regarded as a sufficiently secure retreat for former Emperor William of Germany in view of the flight of the ex-Crown Prince, it was said to-day at the French Foreign Office, and a second St. Helena may be chosen for him.

Monarchist Revolt Nipped In The Bud Fifteen Arrested

BUDAPEST, Nov. 10.—(Special.)— Deputy Ulain has been arrested on a charge of plotting a Monarchist revolt in Hungary. Fourteen alleged accomplices were arrested, including Titus Poula, said to be editor of an American newspaper.

It is alleged that Ulain, a member of the National Assembly, planned to follow the Bavarian Royalist group by upsetting the Hungarian government. His plan included placing machine guns in the windows of neighbouring houses and firing on the police barracks.

The Government Ministers and fifty leading politicians, including Count Apponyi, were slated for execution.

WIFE RETURNS TO FIGHT CASE

Mrs. Stillman On Way From Forests of Quebec To Battle Against Husband's Appeal

NEW YORK, Nov. 10. — Mrs. James A. Stillman is expected back in this city within a few days to fight her husband's appeal to set aside the decision rendered against him, and to reiterate her denial of the authenticity of some of the letters submitted to the Appellate Division as a basis for the appeal.

She is still unaware of her husband's publication of the so-called "confession letter," in which her alleged relations with Fred. K. Beauvais, half-breed Indian guide are discussed. Grande Anse, Mrs. Stillman's lodge in the Quebec forests, is thirty-five miles from the nearest railroad and is without telephone communication.

A message giving her the news is on its way, but cannot reach her before to-night at the earliest. Its route is by way of Montreal, Three Rivers, and thence by motorboat up the St. Maurice River. Mrs. Stillman probably will utilize the message-bearing motorboat to reach the railhead for the trip back to New York.

Ex-Governor Nathan L. Miller has been retained by Mr. Stillman to head the legal battalion which will argue before the Appellate Division in Brooklyn that Mrs. Stillman's victory was against the weight of evidence.

Ex-Governor Miller Files Brief.

Ex-Governor Miller, who will be aided by William Rand, Cornelius J. Sullivan and Outerbridge Horsey, has filed a fifty-page brief, reviewing the case and commenting on the rulings of Surrogate Daniel J. Gleason, of Poughkeepsie, referee in the case, and those made by Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morschauser.

Argument on the appeal is scheduled for the week beginning December 3.

"We are confident as ever," said John E. Mack, of Poughkeepsie, guardian ad litem for Guy Stillman. "The so-called 'confession' letter was ruled out of the trial. We shall, of course, appear to fight the appeal."

John F. Brennan, of Yonkers, Mrs. Stillman's chief counsel, denied that he had called the "confession" letter a "forgery." He said that Mrs. Stillman, in her affidavit, had denied the authenticity of some of the letters alleged to have been written by her, but had not been specific.

"There is nothing new," he said. "We got a judgment, and we're going to stand by it. We'll argue the case in the courts and not in the newspapers. We know already the public's opinion. The appeal is on the calendar for December, but may be argued before that time."

WHOLE BAVARIA PLACED UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Disturbers of Peace Are Liable to be Shot Within Three Hours After Arrest.

REVOLT A BLESSING

(By Carl D. Groat, United Press Staff Corespondent.)

BERLIN, November 10. — With Bavaria under martial law, General Erich Ludendorff released on parole, and Adolph Hitler, a fugitive, the government to-day was "mopping up" the last vestige of the monarch revolt.

A Munich despatch said that Ludendorff, commander of the Moncharist "army' who was captured yesterday after the collapse of the revolt, had been released on his own recognizance.

Hitler, leader of the uprising, was wounded, but was not taken prisoner when troops stormed the army building where he had sought refuge. An official statement was issued saying that both Ludendorff and Hitler were taken. Later this was corrected.

Quick Executions.

Under the martial law now prevailing disturbers of the peace are liable to be shot within three hours after the arrest.

Leaders of the rebellion were scuttling for cover to-day. Dr. Von Kaahr, who was announced as one of the new governers of Bavaria, issued a statement explaining that Ludendorff and Hitler forced him at the point of the pistol, to agree to support their programme, which included the overthrow of the Berlin government. In the fighting around the army building, which preceded the surrender of Ludendorff, ten of the rebels were killed. The loyalists casualties included two Munich policemen dead and eight wounded; one soldier dead and ten wounded.

The "putsch" flickered out in the late afternoon with an attack on the structure where Ludendorff and Hitler sat behind their barricades.

Two battalions of sturdy storm troops, after clearing the rebels from the streets around the building, carried the place by storm.

Defenders Powerless.

The defenders were powerless to withstand the onslaught. Then came the lamentable spectacle of Ludendorff, the former Quartermaster general of the German armies, being dragged from his refuge after the failure of a coup which had been condemned everywhere as futile and treacherous.

On Thursday evening Hitler grandiloquently announced that he and his comrades would be in power or dead within 24 hours.

Neither development has come to pass.

Blessing in Disguise.

Chancellor Stresemann and other government leaders give evidence of unconcealed satisfaction over the out come of the Munich "putsch." They are inclined to view it as a distinctive blessing in disguise in that it definitely disposes of Ludendorff and Hitler as further sources of reactionary menace.

To this extent the Chancellor believe that the swiftly liguidated insurrection has been a valuable asset to Germany abroad, demonstrating even Bavarians' determination to defend German republic against any attacks from within.

While military leaders, who were formerly associated with him on the German military staff are inclined to give Ludendorff their sympathy, they at the same time express their dismay and amazement that an officer of his rank and military antecedents should have submitted to such degrading humiliation as was heaped upon him yesterday. A ranking officer in such a position in any other country would have committed suicide, they declare.

American Sailors and Fascisti In a Clash Because The Bars Closed Too Early. No More Shore Leave

ROME, Nov. 10.—(United Press)—Venice despatches report that the American Consul and the commander of the U. S. S. "Detroit" have apologized to the authorities for clashes between American sailors and the Fascisti there.

Newspaper accounts of the disorder state that a number of sailors from the "Detroit" entered a Venice bar and asked for drinks, which were refused them, due to the fact that it was after 10 p.m., when the law requires that bars close. The sailors are alleged to have assaulted the woman bar-keeper and a girl assistant. The Fascisti came to the defence of the women, and a free-for-all fight ensued, in which several shots were fired. No one was wounded, however. The American Consul directed that the sailors remain on board the ship while the vessel is at Venice, newspapers declare.

A real Christmas crowd thronged the basket section of the farmers' market this morning. Men and women jostled and elbowed each other around the big upstair hall, and the women's tables were piled high with fowl of every description. At a late hour the available supply appeared to be as great as ever and many of the women faced the prospect of taking much of their stock back home, or disposing of it in the stores, which they reported as being already well supplied with Thanksgiving birds.

Prices were varied, and there was a large quantity of large birds. Several turkeys, ranging around fifteen and sixteen pounds in size, were noted, and there were many huge geese. Turkeys could be bought all the way from 30 to 40 cts. a pound; geese ranged from 25 to 30 cents a pound; ducks from 28 to 35 cents, and chickens were at their last week's low water mark of 20 cents a pound, some of the birds asking a price of 23 and 25 cents. Hens were 20 cents a pound.

Butter was more plentiful than last week, selling at a general price of 40 cents a pound, and there were more eggs available this morning also. One woman asked 60 cents a dozen; most were selling for 50 cents, and a couple of vendors were pricing their supply at 40 cents a dozen.

Downstairs the usual small garden stuff was on view, and there was a brisk sale in aples. Baldwins and Peewaukies were selling at $4.50 a barrel; russets at $5; Spys at $7.50. Potatoes, not very plentiful, were $1.50 a bag. Red and white onions were 75 cents a peck, and winter radishes at 60 cents Citrons were 15 cents apiece.

A single barred rock in a crate might be bought for $1.40, and a number of the same style of birds, with their companion Rhode Island Reds, were asking $1.75 each. A little Guinea hen was 60 cents.

Tomatoes were still available at one dealer's wagon, and are good examples of the healthful vegetable, selling for 45 and 65 cents a basket.

Pork was plentiful this morning on many of the carts, selling at prices ranging from 14 to 15 cents a pound, for front, and hind quarters to 16 and 18 cents. Little pigs on the hoof, in white and red tints, were $8 a pair. Little brown collie pups, described as "three-quarter" dogs, on account of the lack of that caudal appendage otherwise known as a tail, were $2 each.

Pig's heads, large and sleepy, were 7 cents a pound, a good large head running to a price of 90 cents.

Green pears were 60 and 75 cents a peck.

Honey was 15 cents a pound for the pure clover, and 10 cents for the amber variety.

Cream on the market this morning was 25 cents a pint. In the basket section one woman had knitted mittens and men's socks, at $1.25 a pair for each, and another lady was offering a creamy white wool baby's cap in the Hussar style, for $1.00. Catsup in big bottles might be had for two bits.

Going Down

It was a holiday in Pueblo, Colo., when this smokestack at a smelter was dynamited. Between 10,000 and 15,000 persons saw City Commissioner George Stumpf turn the trick. Bricks were salvaged for use in a new parochial school building.

ARMISTICE DAY OBSERVED HERE

Citizens Asked to Observe Two Minutes of Silence

LEST WE FORGET.

Whereas, it is right and proper that all people should on the fifth anniversary of the Armistice, which stayed the world-wide carnage of the Great War and marked the victory of right, justice and freedom, perpetuate the memory of that great deliverance, and those who laid down their lives to achieve it.

It is thgrefore requested that at the hour of eleven o'clock a.m. on Sunday, the 10th instant, all business and domestic activities of every description shall cease for a period of two minutes, so that in perfect stillness the prayers and thoughts of everyone may be concentrated on reverent remembrance of the glorious dead, and of the victory by God's grace vouchsafed to Canada and the Empire, and its allies.

A Commemorative Service will take place at the G.W.V.A. Cenotaph, at 2 p.m. and the Grand Opera House at 3 p.m in the afternoon, on which occasion every Comrade and citizen should be present as a mark of respect to Peterborough's glorious dead ,now sleeping on Fame's Eternal Camping Ground.

It is further requested that every person wear the Flower of Remembrance (the poppy) throughout the city in honour of the day.

S. WHATLEY,
Secretary G.W.V.A.

God Save the King.

DO NOT FORGET SACRIFICE MADE BY HEROIC MEN

Empty Chairs of 60,000 Soldiers Who Gaves Lives For Freedom Are Indelible Reminder

PRICE OF FREEDOM

OTTAWA, November 10. — Dr. W. D. Sharp, of Brampton, Ont., Dominion President of the Great War Veterans' Association, has issued the following Armistice Day anniversary message:

"In a hundred thousand homes in Canada the war of 1914-18 still goes on. Empty chairs of sixty thousand men who gave their lives in the cause of freedom, remain an indelible reminder to parents, wives, children and sweethearts of those bittersweet days when the horrors of war were tempered by the deeds of brave men. More than 50,000 of those who survived the conflict still suffer from disabling wounds or disease as a result of their service. Over 4,000 men are in the hospitals five years after the voice of the guns were silenced.

Re-affirm Your Vows.

"Need more be said as to why every Canadian on this anniversary occasion should re-affirm the vow of those years when the call to Canadian manhood went out: 'To us the memory of the dead shall be imperishable, and we shall see that those who suffer because of their sacrifice for Canada and the Empire shall receive very care and assistance that is humanly possible to give.'

"The members of the Great War Veterans' Association consecrate themselves anew to the task of aiding the Canadian nation towards giving effect to this earnest desire and in strengthening and enhancing the structure of our national life."

SIR ARTHUR CURRIE.

MONTREAL, Nov. 10. — Canadian Press. — The following inspiring Armistice Day message has been issued by General Sir Arthur Currie, commander of the Canadian troops in France:

Bow our Head.

"To-day the business of every-day life ceases for a little space while we bow our heads in reverent memory of those who died on distant seas and fields of honor of Canada and the preservation of the British Empire. Nor shall we in this solemn hour forget those comrades, who, though they did not make the greatest sacrifice, are still suffering in mind and body, paying the price of freedom. From our hearts goes forth the prayer that God may comfort and bless all those whose loved ones sleep the peace that is un-ending in hallowed graves over there."

BUSINESS TORONTO SILENT.

TORONTO, November 10. — Business Toronto observed armistice Day this morning with two minutes silence at 11 o'clock. This was preliminary to a rather elaborate programme to-morrow of special church services and military parades and the unveiling by Lord Byng of the monument to the memory of the members of the 48th Highlanders who laid down their lives in the Great War.

Lloyd George Today Buckles on Armour For E ection Fight

LONDON, November 10. (United Press.) — Lloyd George to-day plunged into a series of week-end conferences with his lieutenants, planning his campaign against Premier Stanley Baldwin. His spectacular return to England after his American visit, cheered by thousands and hailed as a popular hero everywhere, has caused some talk of postponing the general election to give the excitement plenty of time to subsid. The reason for such postponement would be given as the "international situation," but opponents of the government say "this means Lloyd George."

Lloyd George will wage the campaign on the slogan of free trade as opposed to Baldwins new protection policy.

RECORDS SHOW FEW MEN IDLE

Government Employment Bureau Has Number of Orders For Bush. Better Than Last Year.

The employment situation is at present better than it was this time last year, according to the records of the Government Employment Bureau. There is work for everyone who wishes to take it, and while bush life does not appeal to a great many applicants, advantage is being taken of the opportunity for a winter's work at good wages. Many of the applicants are young men without families, for whom the bush offers an opening for a season in the out-of-doors and an opportunity to save money.

Factories in the city are generally busier than last year, but are not taking on new hands. They are employing their old hands full time, and this is a considerable advance over last year.

About thirty men have been placed in lumbering work during the past week, and there are more applications on hand for men in this class than the Bureau can hope to fill.

TWO MEN SHOT WHEN HUNTERS ORDERED AWAY

Deputy Sheriff Accidentally Shot and Thinking He Is Attacked Pulls Trigger on Hunter

BOTH MAY DIE

NEW YORK, November 10. — Two men are expected to die as the result of a double shooting which turned a hunting party of Brooklyn men on Long Island on Thursday afternoon into a tragedy. One victim was Jacob Schmidt, a contractor of 77 Ralph Avenue, Brooklyn, who does much city work. The other was Deputy Sheriff Jones Van Brunt of Suffolk County.

Smith and three other men were hunting on the estate of Henry Smith of South Setauket, not far from Huntington, with the permission of John Zimmerman, the superintendent of the estate. Van Brunt, armed with a shotgun, came upon them, and thinking that they were trespassers, ordered them off. Acording to Schmidt, he broke his gun, meaning to empty out the shells in token of obedience, but there came a sudden roar and flash, and Van Brunt fell with a full load of shot in his legs and groin.

The deputy held on to his weapon as he fell, and thinking that Schmidt had become insane with rage and was trying to kill him, let drive on the barrel. Schmidt got the charge in the abdomen and tumbled.

150 Shot in Body..

Others in the party, whose names were not learned, dashed through the woods to the nearest house and summoned help. An ambulance took Schmidt, who seemed to be the worst hurt, to the office of Dr. J. A. Squire in Stony Brook, and then rushed him to the Huntington Hospital, where Dr. John Tatiky operated. It was feared that he could not recover.

Van Brunt was taken in an automobile to St. Charles Hospital at Port Jefferson. It was found that 150 shot had lodged in his body and it appeared that he too probably would die.

Sheriff Amser Biggs and assistant District Attorney George W. Hildreth, who was elected District Attorney on Tuesday, got statements from both men and from Schmidt's companions, and decided that Schmidt had been shot accidentally, and that Van Brunt had fired in good faith, believing he was acting in self defence.

FIRST HUSBAND CHOSEN BY WIFE, MARITAL MIX

KINSTON, N. C., Nov. 10 (United Press).—Another Enoch Arden has come to Kinston.

"The case is not of record," Judge Oliver Allen said after handing down a decision in the queer marital triangle in which he promised not to reveal identities.

"Two men went to the world war," according to the story Judge Allen gave to reporters. "One was a Northerner in the regular army, the other a Southerner in the volunteers. The regular married a young woman in the South. He was reported dead. The passing years seemed to substantiate the report.

"Three years ago the Southerner married the 'widow,' and became stepfather to the Northerner's two children. The man told me the woman made a devoted and affectionate wife. He became fond of the youngsters.

First Husband Returns

"Recently a man came to the door of the 'volunteer's' home here. He was a stranger to the 'volunteer,' but the wife and little ones raced to embrace him. It was husband No. 1. He had been on the trail of his family for years, and had lost it for a time.

"No. 2 came to me with his story. He told of No. 1's friendly attitude. Th Northerner, the Southerner said, had remarked, 'I do not blame you for this situation, but I must have my wife and little ones.' The woman and children expressed their preference for husband and father No. 1. Forthwith, the reunited family packed into a flivver and started for the North. There are doing well there, I understand.

"I was sorry for No. 2. He seemed not to desire to disrupt the family anew He hardly knew what he wanted to do. I advised him that there was nothing he could do, and nothing for which the law could hold him responsible. I suggested that he seek a formal decree at a regular session of court against future embarrassments that might arise."

WASHINGTON BALKS AT FRENCH RESTRICTIONS TO PROPOSED INQUIRY

Objects of United States Co-operation in Investigating Germany's Ability to Pay Reparations Would Be Frustrated.

CONVERSATIONS END.

WASHINGTON, Nov 10—France and the United States came definitely to the parting of the ways yesterday on the proposal to enlist United States cooperation toward a solution of the reparations problem.

Premier Poincare was advised by Secretary Hughes through Ambassador Jusserand, that restrictions insisted upon by France would serve to "frustrate" the object of the Washington Government in offering United States cooperation in an expert reparations inquiry plan.

The State Department refused to go beyond this point in disclosing the purport and result of recent conversations with the Ambassador in which detailed explanations of the French attitude were made. No formal invitation to participate in an expert inquiry is before the Washington Government and a declination is, therefore, not in order. In the circumstances, no invitation from the Allied Powers now is expected.

Useless Enquiry

There is no doubt that such an invitation if presented under the French restrictions would be declined. President Coolidge feels that the French limitations render the inquiry plan useless and futile. He believes the French restrictions would reduce the inquiry into a mere audit of German accounts that the United States could serve no useful purpose by participating in an investigation that could not produce broad and comprehensive plans for economic rehabilitation of Germany and adequate payments by Germany on reparations accounts.

The conversations at the State Department ended to-day when Ambassador Jusserand called with advices from his Government which reached him while Mr. Coolidge and his Cabinet were discussing the situation on the basis of previous explanations from Paris. To-day's message showed no modification of the French attitude and added nothing new to the situation.

CONTRARY VIEWS BRITISH ELECTION

LONDON, Nov. 9. — (Canadian Press.)—Circles close to Prime Minister Baldwin favor December tenth as the date for a general election on protection issue, according to the Daily Mail. With equal assurance the Daily Express says that no election is contemplated next month.

Cabinet meets to-day, when the question of appealing to the country on the protective tariff issue will be discussed and perhaps final decision will be made.

This is Lord Mayor's Day, which wil lbe featured by an annual banquet at Guild Hall. It is thought that Mr. Baldwin may let the election cat out of the bag when he delivers his address.

FORTY WERE KILLED DURING CRACOW RIOT

WARSAW, Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press)—Wednesday evening during riots in Cracow, provoked by the Communist attacking troops forty were killed and one hundred seriously and two hundred slightly wounded. General Zeligowski and Captain Wilnow and vice-minister of the Interior, Olpinski, were sent there and order has been restored. In Cracow and majority of the factories as well as the railways have resumed work.

Hunter Mistook Guide for Deer

LINDSAY, Nov. 9.—A Lindsay hunter who is in the Parry Sound district, reports a tragic occurrence which took place in the woods near Kearney on Tuesday last. Wm. Ryan, a guide of the Kearney Hunt Club, was accidentally shot and killed by Mr. Harold Shortreed, of Coulson. Mr. Shortreed, a member of the club of which Ryan was a guide, caught sight, at the bottom of a swamp, of what he thought was a deer, and fired. He was horrified to find that he had killed, not a deer, but the guide. An inquest was held at Kearney on Wednesday, at which a verdict of accidental death was brought in.

THIRD "PUTSCH" ENDS IN PRISON

Former War Lord Surrendered to the Republican Troops After Brief Fighting.

MUNICH, Bavaria, Nov. 10.—General Erich Ludendorff yesterday lost his second "putsch" within three years and to-day is observing the fifth anniversary of the German revolution a prisoner in the custody of the federal troops.

The man who as Commander-in-Chief of the German forces is credited with having lost the world war for Germany, is an ignoble prisoner of the republic, he so thoroughly despised and against the fragile existence of which he has plotted openly and in secret ever since he retired to his reactionary Bavarian strong hold.

Ludendorff and Adolph Hitler, who had barricaded themselves in the offices of the War Ministry after the collapse of the attempted coup d'etat engineered by Hitler surrendered yesterday afternoon to a detachment of federal trops which had been orderd by Dr. von Kahr, the Bavarian Dictator, and General von Lossow Commander of the Bavarian Reichewehr, to lay siege to the building. Previously the Bavarian Government had despatched an ultimatum to both Ludendorff and Hitler who is the leader of the Fascists in Bavaria demanding their surrender within one hour.

There was brief fighting between the Reichswehr and the Hitler Guards, in which a few men on both sides suffered casualities. Afterwards Ludendorff and Hitler emerged from the building and placed themselves at the disposal of General von Lossow's troops.

The status of Ludendorff and Hitler as political prisoners has not yet been defined, and for the moment their capture merely marks the physical collapse of Hitler's tragic comic "putsch," in which the world-famed former Quartermaster General of the German Army became engulfed.

FRENCH ARE WARY OF INDUSTRIALISTS

PARIS, Nov. 10.—(Special).—The Cabinet is scheduled to meet today to decide the French attitude toward the Bavarian coup.

Information from the Rhur today showed three hundred thousand workers locked out, French authorities considered this fact very disgusting, fearing it might be a maneuver by the big industrialists headed by Hugo Stinnes and the Thyssens to support the Munich movement by inciting the population of the Ruhr to revolt against the forces of occupation.

Possibilities of War.

French opinion regarding possibilities of war were divided.

Some groups believed Germany would not be able to finance any extensive campaign, pointing out that the Berlin Government is practically bankrupt and that the big industrials probably would not be willing to call in funds they have in foreign banks to finance an armed movement. Other groups were worried because they professed to know Germany has large supplies of hidden arms while Germany mution works have increased their output since January.

Allied Precautions.

A majority of the more conservative classes appeared in favor of Allied precautions, even to the extent of armed intervention if necessary, to suppress the Bavarian Monarchists immediately.

Early action is all that will prevent a most serious situation in Germany, these persons believed.

LLOYD GEORGE SAYS BALDWIN POLICY 'FOLLY'

As Uncompromising a Free Trader As Ever, He Declared on Arrival Home.

ARDENT RECEPTION.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Right Hon. David Lloyd George, who seemed to be a dormant political volcano when he sailed westward for the United States a few weeks ago, returned to Great Britain yesterday from his tour of Canada and the United States rumbling as though he might erupt during approaching battle between the free traders and the protectionists.

Mr. Lloyd George, who was a passenger on the steamer Majestic which arrived at Southampton from New York yesterday, told the reporters who met the liner that he was as staunch and uncompromising as ever in his stand for free trade. He called Premier Baldwin's recent pronouncement in favor of protection "a piece of incredible folly."

A Great Welcome.

There were signs both in Southampton and London that the wave of enthusiasm over the little Welshman, which is reported to have exhilerated him everywhere he went in America, had crossed the Atlantic with him. He drove a mile through solid ranks of cheering people in Southampton after he landed, and every seat in the music hall of that city, where the freedom of Southampton was conferred on him, was occupied. When he arrived at the Waterloo Station in London to-night thousands of persons surrounded his car, singing Welsh melodies and cheering him with all the ardor that could be given a returning conqueror.

"It is always a fine pleasure to be home again," shouted Mr. Lloyd George to those who demanded a speech from him. He declined to make an address and when his automobile drove away it was followed by another outburst of cheering.

America's Example.

In his speech at Southampton Mr. Lloyd George was effervescent with enthusiasm over what he had seen in Canada and the United States. He held up the neighborly and friendly spirit of these two countries to his hearers as an object lesson for Europe, "with her fortified and patrolled borders and her hates, envies and quarrels."

BRITAIN AND AMERICA MAY DEMAND PAYMENT OF FRENCH WAR DEBT.

Exert Economic Pressure on France to Induce Her to Moderate Policy on Reparations—Britain Not Surprised at Failure.

BALDWIN'S SPEECH.

WASHINGTON NEWS SLIGHT SURPRISE

LONDON, Nov. 9.—(Canadian Press). — Tonight's news from Washington of the failure of the negotiations for a reparation conference, which was evidently unknown to Premier Baldwin when he made his speech at the Guild Hall, will hardly come as a surprise to British official quarters, although they had hoped that France would not push her attitude so far as to endanger the chances of the proposed conference of experts.

The question will now arise as to what will follow from the refusal of the United States to enter a reparations discussion. The general view is that the next step may be a formal request by the American and British Governments for payment of the war debts owed to them by France as a means of bringing economic pressure and so inducing France to adopt a more moderate policy.

BALDWIN HOPEFUL UP TO THE LAST MOMENT

LONDON, Nov. 9.—(Canadian Press).—After having presided today over the Cabinet Council, which failed to arrive at any decision concerning the date for general elections, Stanley Baldwin, the Premier, with several of his Ministers, tonight was the guest of the Lord Mayor of London at a banquet in the Guild Hall in celebration of Lord Mayor's Day. The banquet was characterized by all the traditional ceremonial and was attended by members of the diplomatic corps and persons from all branches of society.

The speech of Premier Baldwin was devoted largely to foreign affairs. He referred with great satisfaction to the work of the Imperial Conference, which, he said, had dealt with a number of important questions, including the Washington conventions, the Far East, the League of Nations and the present situation on the Continent. With regard to defense, Mr. Baldwin said the conference had drawn up a number of guiding principles and the premiers had decided that they would always be prepared to consider, in concert with other peoples, what possibility there was of a further limitation of armaments.

Brief Satisfaction.

The Premier declared the Government hailed with satisfaction the signal of renewed willingness on the part of the United States Government to co-operate with Europe in the task of meeting the present situation.

(At the time of his speech the Premier had not learned of the decision of the Washington Government not to participate in the proposed reparations conference.) This co-operation did not involve, in the opinion of the British Government, any attempt to drag the United States into European entanglements, or to make that country the arbiter of European fortunes. The United States would emphatically repudiate either interpretation, but her interests in the economic recovery of Europe, in which she must inevitably play a considerable part, was not less than that of Great Britain, and she was capable, by reason of her detachment of forming judgments which would be recognized and accepted by all.

Continuing, Mr. Baldwin said it was too early to say whether the efforts to promote a reparations conference would succeed, and it would be premature to hazard a guess as to the particular form such a conference would take. But, he added, that Europe should be allowed to drift to her doom while the Powers looked on with folded hands, was not to be thought of. This statement evoked loud cheering.

Desire United Action.

The entire weight of British authority and influence, said Mr. Baldwin, would be and was being thrown into the scales in favor of co-operation with the United States for that common action beween all which five years ago won the war and by which alone peace could be secured. For such common action Great Britain had always striven, but it was from no exclusively abstract or ethical considerations, nor from the standpoint of treaty obligations alone, that Great Britain had acted and would continue to act. She was and must be inspired by regard for her own interests. With regard to the general situation and unemployment Great Britain's duty was first to her own people, while at the same time co-operating for the peaceful recovery of the whole world.

In dealing with the Imperial Conference, Mr. Baldwin dealt at length with the preference granted Empire products and the advantages it was expected to derive from them, but he did not allude otherwise to the protectionist issue.

Beatty's Prophecy.

Admiral Baron Beatty, chief of the naval staff, in a speech hazarded the prediction that in the future the Commander-in-Chief of the fleet and his staff would be quartered on an aircraft carrier, so important was the air force becoming. He defended the creation of a naval base at Singapore as needful for the defence of Australasia.

The Spanish Ambassador, replying to warm compliments from Ronald McNeill, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, expressed his gratitude to Great Britain. He paid tribute to London as the pivot of modern civilization.

EACH BALLOON WORTH TURKEY

Oshawa Merchants Modify Their Pre-Thanksgiving Publicity Stunt.

OSHAWA, Nov. 10.— Oshawa merchants are to talk turkey to the public today and have 35 live birds on display in as many store windows within one block of the main corners. At two o'clock today the business men will send up toy balloons and in each will be a name of a business place. The person lucky enough to capture the air bubble and return it to the address found inside will be awarded a live turkey.

Some of the merchants were in favor of letting loose the live birds but the majority favored a more lenient procedure with the feathered stock with the balloon ascension, whereby the prize would provide a full meal for one family where in the former case parts may be spread broadcast over the town.

2 TORONTO STORES WERE BURGLARIZED

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press)—Smashing their way into two stores this morning burglars stole about $12,000 worth of furs, cloth, and gowns. A haul of $7,500 worth of furs was taken from Dvoretsky Brothers fur store, College street, including thirty-five fur coats.

Regent Tailor Store on Bloor street west was broken into and $5,000 worth of dresses, gowns and cloth stolen.

The raids were carried out without interruption and the robberies were discovered by policemen who found the doors open.

AN OLD HOME WEEK FOR LINDSAY IS PROPOSED

Orillia held a most successful Old Home Week two years ago, and Mr. Miller gave the clubs some pointers of great value. The Kiwanis initiated the idea, but are asking the different local organiztions to co-operate.

Drunken Driver's License Revoked

MONTREAL, Nov. 9.— The heaviest sentence yet pronounced in a local court for this class of offence, was imposed in the case of H. J. He was fined $100 and costs for a similar offence on August 15.

IMPOSED HEAVY PENALTIES IN WINDSOR COURT

Mr. Justice Orde Delivered Sentence of Death and Life Imprisonment in Two Major Cases.

VETERAN FREED.

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 10.—Justice Orde at Sandwich last night imposed a long string of heavy sentences, including death and life imprisonment.

John Kolton, 34-years-old, Petite Cote farmer, who was found guilty of murdering his partner, Peter Starchuck at Petite Cote in March of this year, was sentenced to hang January 24. The sentence will be carried out unless clemency is granted, as has been requested in petitions circulated by Kolton's counsel.

Starchuck was beaten to death by a heavy maul following a moonshine orgy. Kolton was hiding in a near-by bush when arrested by Provincial officers.

Life Imprisonment.

Charged with slaying Joseph M. Thomas at Windsor on March 28, Tony Migelo, 32 years old, student at the Cass Technical School, Detroit, was convicted of manslaughter yesterday afternoon. He was sent to Kingston penitentiary for life.

Sentence Suspended.

Edward J. Colquhoun, 24 years old, former manager of the Ford branch of the Merchants Bank, and William E. Disher, 26, former purchasing agent for the Ford Motor Company, who were charged with the theft of $30,000 and conspiracy, sprang a surprise last night when they pleaded guilty.

The court, after being informed that full restitution had been made, suspended sentence for five years. A bond of $10,000 was given for their future good behaviour.

For the attempted murder of Edward White, Windsor negro, Alvin Jackson, 28, Alabama negro, was sentenced to seven years.

Veteran Released.

Moved by the appeal of more than 2,000 border residents for mercy, Justice Orde released Grover Brady, Windsor veteran of the Great War, on suspended sentnce Brady was driving a truck that struck and killed seven-year-old Margaret Robertson.

The court said he had been influenced by the almost unanimous mercy plea and by the fact that Brady was the sole support of his aged mother.

HITLER'S BEER CELLAR REVOLUTION QUELLED ALMOST AT STARTING

Described As Giant Firecracker Prematurely Exploded, Hurting Chiefly Its Originator — Was Quickly Boxed Up.

BERLIN UNEXCITED.

HILTER INJURED; NUMBER KILLED

BERLIN. Nov. 9.—(Canadian Press).—Adolph Hitler, who led the Bavarian putsch, is reported in late advices from Munich to have recovered, despite the wounds he received.

General Ludendorff, the chief of the Oberland Association, and other leaders of the Nationalist-Socialist party, are said to have been jailed. Eight or ten persons were killed in the fighting. Munich is described as calm.

LOYALISTS TROOPS BOLSTERED VON KAHR

BERLIN, Nov. 9.—(Canadian Press).—Information dispensed by official quarters this evening would indicate that Adolph Hitler's "putsch" in Bavaria scarcely got beyond the confines of the rathskeller where the Fascisti leader proclaimed himself dictator of all Germany and General Erich Ludendorff his war minister.

Just what happened after that remains to be cleared up, although reliable versions of the incidents which took place in Munich last night indicate that Dr. Von Kahr, the Bavarian dictator, and General Von Lossow, commander of the Bavarian Reichswehr, immediately disentangled themselves from the prevailing confusion and hufried to the nearest barracks, and there ensured themselves of the fealty of the Reichswehr troops, with the aid of which they rehabilitated their dictatorship and the civilian authority of Premier von Knillin.

Premature Explosion.

Political quarters in Berlin incline to the belief that Hitler's giant firecracker exploded prematurely and that he and Ludendorff were its chief victims. Both men are reported to have barricaded themselves in the War Ministry in Munich but afterwards to have come out and surrendered.

At the Ministry of Defense it was declared this evening that the troops were standing by Dr. Von Kahr, im-der command of General von Lossow, and that Hitler's attempted coup, as far as its physical menace was concerned, had been entirely dissipated.

Munich experienced little of the "putsch," and the rest of Bavaria failed to react to it. In Berlin it provoked a minimum of interest and no alarm.

Nationalists Chagrined.

The Nationalist leaders in the Reichstag make no concealment of their chagrin over the fiasco, which they obviously view as having done irreparable damage to the swing of the Right among a large body of the voters. Incidentally the movement has seriously handicapped the negotiations proceeding between the members of the Nationalist Party for the formation of a bourgeois cabinet, a movement which has received fresh impetus to-day, when Chancellor Stresemann's party adopted a resolution to suggest to the Chancellor the advisability of inviting the Nationalists into such a coalition.

With the Munich debacle awaiting final political liquidation, the belief is expressed in political circles that the Nationalists in the present situation suggest a heavy liability to such a four-party constellation, which were it formed in all probability would demand the retirement of Dr. Stresemann.

Neither the Chancellor, the Democrats nor the clericals thus far have indicated their attitude toward the proposed bourgeois cabinet.

Only an Episode.

Chancellor Stresemann's government to-day informally appraized the diplomatic missions in Berlin, that its authority had not been inspired by the "putsch," and that the Munich episode was considered as having been disposed of, in so far as it threatened to become a menace to the Berlin government's stability.

French opposition to the establishment of a limited directorate, or even a dictatorship, which Premier Poincare is said to have expressed informally through the French Ambassador, is viewed in semi-official circles here as unwarranted intervention in German internal affairs.

"Admonition from the French government or support from that source is not required by Germany in connection with her efforts to adjust internal affairs, an it may even be suggested that support from this source would rather discredit the cause of democracy," says the National Zeitung.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1923.

THANKSGIVING.

Combined with the Armistice Day celebration Canadians will also on Monday observe Thanksgiving Day, a date set aside by the Government of Canada as an occasion for national rejoicing and thanksgiving for the blessings accorded this country during the past year.

Of all the countries in the world Canada should surely be able to heartily enter into the spirit of such an occasion, for this Dominion has been bountifully blessed.

Thanksgiving Day, 1923, finds her with a record wheat harvest, fine crops in other products, unemployment less of an evil than it has been for three or four years, industry finding itself again after the upsetting experiences of the post-war period, business gathering strength and vigour, a population at peace with itself and its neighbors, everywhere tranquility and contentment and prosperity.

Contrasting their lot with that of the peoples of other lands, notably the majority of European peoples, Canadians cannot help but feel that they are living in a land of milk and honey.

It would be an ungrateful people indeed that with all these blessings failed to thoroughly and unreservedly give thanks.

ARMISTICE DAY.

Five years ago tomorrow, on November 11, 1918, the World War was brought to an end by the signing of an Armistice between the Allies and Germany.

It scarcely seems so long ago since the news came to Peterborough in the early morning of a November day that peace had been made.

The wild rejoicing of that day is still so fresh in the memory of those who participated in it that apparently it was but yesterday that Peterborough gave itself over to the greatest demonstration in its history.

The jubilation on that occasion, of course, cannot be repeated tomorrow; the floodgates of enthusiasm and rejoicing cannot again be raised, but there is every reason why Peterborough should nevertheless wholeheartedly celebrate this most momentuous anniversary.

The public generally can co-operate by wearing the crimson poppy, "the flower of remembrance," and by displaying it in their windows, by patriotically observing the two-minute period of silence in memory of the Empire's dead and by seeing to it that the Union Jack is everywhere displayed and everywhere flown from the masthead in observance of the King's request that the day be marked as a day of triumph.

In the midst of the rejoicing, of course, a note of sadness cannot be avoided, for it would be callous indeed if there were not on this occasion a thought of the men who by giving up their lives made the victory sure.

And so it is hoped that in memory of the heroic dead the cenotaph at the G.W.V.A. Hall will be adorned with floral tributes, testifying to the fact that the unreturning brave have not been forgotten.

THE USE OF THE FLAG.

The Dominion Veterans' Alliance decided at its recent meeting to furnish Canadians with some instruction as to the proper use of the national flag.

The alliance has put its finger upon a very weak spot, for education along this line seems to be very badly needed.

Particularly do the veterans object to the employment of the ensign as a table cloth, a very common use of the Union Jack at public meetings.

We have all seen it used in this way with the best possible motives, of course, and with no thought that in making a table draping of the national flag it was being degraded.

It is not an uncommon thing either to see the flag flown upside down, through carelessness or ignorance, and often it is so carelessly run up that it almost looks to be at halfmast instead of in the proper place at the masthead.

The Veterans' Alliance propose to issue some general instructions covering these and other points in connection with the use of the flag, and to have them distributed throughout the Dominion.

It is a campaign that cannot fail to have beneficial results.

THE WAINRIGHT PARK MASSACRE.

The more explanations are offered in connection with the killing of the surplus buffalo in Wainright Park, the clearer it seems that the officials responsible for this affair are deserving of severe censure, and that if some of them lost their positions they would be merely be getting their just dues.

The latest statement is to the effect that wounded buffalo were not allowed to suffer more than ten minutes before they were despatched.

That in itself is an admission that condemns the whole proceedings as brutal and cruel and warrants investigation by the Government as to the parties responsible for permitting a moving-picture company to stage this disgraceful slaughter for commercial purposes.

A fine advertisement for Canada—this svectacle of Indians hammering away at the bewildered buffalo with bows and blunt arrows, while behind the scenes supposedly expert marksmen dropped the victims with rifle shots, or tried to, for it is alleged that some of the riflemen blundered and only succeeded in wounding their quarry.

The whole episode has been roundly condemned by newspapers of all shades of politics throughout the Dominion, and the general indignation is so strong that the Government would be well advised to take action in regard to the punishment of the guilty parties.

AIR-PLANE SPEED IN 1923.

Lieut. A. J. Williams of the United States army broke all records for speed in flying by doing three kilometres Friday at the rate of 266.6 miles per hour —except that for a short part of the distance another airman, Lieut. H. J. Brow, attained to a speed at the rate of 274.2 miles, says the Ottawa Journal.

Compare these figures with the performances of the flying men at the first aviation race meeting in the world which was held on the Plain of Betheny, near Rheims, in France, on August 29, 1909.

On the Plain of Betheny 14 years ago Henry Farman flew 112½ miles in three hours four minutes 56 seconds, or at a speed of about 38 miles an hour. He made a world's record for time and distance. At the same meeting Bleriot, the French air-man, however, attained a speed for a short distance at the rate of 48 miles per hour.

"Ultimate speed of air-planes," says an authority on aviation, "may conceivably reach a rate of 500 miles per hour, so far as the machines are concerned. But ultimate speed is not "a question of planes and motors, but a question of what the human being can stand."

After Lieut. Williams in a race prior to last week got to a speed of 243 miles, he reported;

"I never felt so sleepy in my life. It seemed to me as if I could not keep awake long enough to finish the race. Going round the pylons I simply went cold. It was several seconds before my brain functioned again."

It would appear that the limits of human endurance must nearly be reached now, even if flying machines can be constructed to stand a higher speed.

TURN THE TIDE.

Canadians are given cause for thought in frequent dispatches from New York or Washington announcing that this or that liner—or maybe a dozen liners—is hurrying to the United States in order to get its passengers ashore before various national quotas have been exhausted for the month Only Monday a New York message said: "Landing of nearly four thousand immigrants, admitted to the United States on parole after quotas of their countries had been filled, was started here today. The groups included 1,367 immigrants who arrived on the Leviathan just after the quotas for the month had been exhausted. They are mostly British."

According to the American Secretary of Labor, who has authority in such matters, these people were allowed to enter the United States "for reasons of humanity." The monthly quotas—Uncle Sam restricts immigration to this extent—had been exhausted, but as the would-be citizens were on this side of the ocean, Secretary Davis decided to admit them. This does not always happen. Many thousands, apparently are turned back.

"They are mostly British!" Yet, there was doubt about them being allowed to enter the United States. "Reasons of humanity" let them in! And at the same time Canadians are looking for and anxious to welcome just such immigrants. Canada's door, presumably, is open. We are not concerned with quotas or "reasons of humanity." We want additional citizens and particularly from the British Isles. Yet we have to sit back and see British immigrants rejected by the United States or let in "for reasons of humanity." It is galling, to say the least.

Why are so many Britishers apparently desirous of getting to the United States and so comparatively few to Canada? This is the question that must occur to Canadians as they read these stories. Is it because we are not making sufficient effort to attract them to this country? Are our governmental agencies "falling down?" Is our overseas organization not functioning properly? Is there something wrong at Ottawa? We may well ask ourselves all these questions. Perhaps everything is quite right. It may be that the immigrants now heading in thousands for the shores of the United States prefer that country to Canada. Why, though, should that be so? Why should people who have always lived under the Union Jack prefer a foreign flag to their own, when seeking a change and fresh opportunity in a new land, and especially in face of the fact that their welcome in the United States is doubtful?

Hon. James A. Robb has recently taken charge of the Canadian Department of Immigration. Mr. Robb is a shrewd business man, capable and well-liked. He has made a distinct success of his personal career and Canadians are hopeful that he will make a similar record in the conduct of what is undoubtedly one of the most important branches of our government. It is to Mr. Robb that we look to bring thousands of new citizens to this country. It is from Mr. Robb, and from his colleagues in the Government, that we expect measures and methods which will have the effect of changing the immigration tide of the British Isles from American to Canadian ports.

It is difficult to think of anything that Canada needs more than immigration. In additional population on a large scale lies the solution of most of the Dominion's difficulties. Additional population will provide new domestic markets for our farms and for our factories. It will ease the strain of our railway burden by providing new avenues of revenue through greater volume of freight and passenger business. It will enable us to increase materially the production of our great farming areas and to snatch from the earth larger quantities of the many minerals which form so important a part of our natural resources.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Political movements in Germany are even more difficult to follow than the slump of the mark.

Peterborough people are reminded of the King's request for the observance of the period of two minutes silence at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning in memory of the Empire's dead.

It may yet be some time before Pro Bono Publico writes in to complain that the snow-ploughs have been neglecting his district.

A Toronto school trustee proposes to make the school day a half-hour longer. There is no use trying to listen in on the applause from the school children.

To settle any arguments tomorrow, November 11, is the real Armistice Day; although Monday, Thanksgiving Day, has been set apart by the Canadian Government as the day for celebrating the end of the war.

Kingston is to have a dye factory. It is funny how a dyeing industry happened to pass up Belleville where it would have felt thoroughly at home.

According to stories from the hunting camps, all the worst marksmen in Canada could not have been engaged in the Wainright Park buffalo masracre.

Inmates of an English workhouse have been detected betting on the horse races. This is the reverse of the usual system. They generally bet first and then go to the workhouse.

One thing about it, life in Germany certainly cannot be described as monotonous.

HALIBURTON THE MECCA ... FOR ARMY OF HUNTERS

LINDSAY, November 9 (Special to The Examiner). — Haliburton County is the Mecca of an army of hunters this fall, a great many having passed through this town for the Northland.

The American hunters are this year conspicuous by their absence, and this fact caused some surprise, as every year quite a number journeyed to Haliburton in quest of the deer.

Over 100 licenses have been issued locally.

A license was issued to Miss Aileen Hughes, daughter of the late Sir Sam Hughes. The family has a palatial lodge at Eagle Lake, Haliburton County.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, November 10. — This week's markets opened on Monday with rather heavy offerings of cattle. Trade was slow, and for the bulk of the cattle, quality poor. In the export section there were plenty of heavy steers offering, but a little off in quality as compared with the previous week.

There was a good demand for the heavies, but prices averaged about 25 cents lower, most of the loads going at from $6.00 to $6.75, with a few choice extra bunches at $7.00.

About 700 cattle were taken for export in the first two days, and after that there was little doing in the export line, except for a few loads of store cattle at prices ranging from $5.25 to $5.75, and a few short keep at $6.00. Prospects are that there will be a market next week for about 600 cattle for export.

In the butchers' section there was a good demand for choice handy weight butcher steers, but supplies of the right kind were short. Prices in this section were steady with the week before, ranging from $5.50 to $6.00, and a few extra choice at $6.25 These prices held for the balance of the week for the best butchers' stuff available, but at no time was any particular activity in this class, supplies generally being down to about zero

For the common classes of butcher cattle the reverse was the case. Supplies were heavy and nearly all of very poor quality. It was a case of clearing all this interior stuff out of the market before the holiday, almost regardless of whether prices held or not. There was a surplus of common unfinished butcher heifers offering, and to clear these out prices were as low as $2.50 in Thursday's market.

There was a fairly active demand for stockers and feeders at the attractive prices going, and by the closing market there was a pretty fair clean-up of the total week's offerings.

Fat butcher cows held practically steady all through the week at $3.75 to $4.50. Canners and cutters were also freely taken at prices from $1.50 to $2.50.

Heavy export bulls were taken early in the week, at $4.00 to $4.50, but later all bulls were slow and draggy.

Calves held fairly steady in the early markets, but went off about 50c at the close.

Lambs were also off 50c to 75c in the closing market, tops going at $10.75.

Hogs were mostly taken care of by outside buyers all through the week at from $8.25 to $8.50 f.o.b. Packers were bidding 50c lower over the week-end.

There will be no market on Monday on account of the Thanksgiving Day holiday.

SECOND EXPLOSION IN ITALIAN FORT

Twenty Persons Killed and Many Injured at Genoa.

GENOA, Nov. 10. — (Canadian Press).—Fort Montenango, where an explosion of cordite took place on Friday, with the death of nine persons and the wounding of nine others, was shaken by explosions again yesterday, eleven more persons being killed and a score added to the list of injured. Although firemen worked steadily, the spread of the flames which followed the explosions could not be checked, and the fort now is a complete wreck.

Military authorities say there is little probability of any unexploded shells remaining in the ruins, but the population is alarmed lest there be further unexpected explosions and the villages for miles around continue to be evacuated.

LLOYD GEORGE IS TRIUMPHANT

At One Stroke He Has Swung Into the Limelight. His Words Are Featured Everywhere.

LONDON, November 10. Special Cable to the Canadian Press by George Hambleton, staff correspondent.) — Both the Imperial and the Economic conferences have completed their work and the scene now shifts to the floor of the British Parliament. All the preference offers submitted by the British government will need legislation to make them effective. That their path will be stormy there seems little doubt.

The return of Lloyd George and his dramatic declaration of faith in free trade, bring a new element into the controversy. At one stroke he has swung into the lime light. His words are featured everywhere.

What will the effect be on the preference proposals? This question is being keenly discussed among the representatives from the Dominions. It is realized that the main free trade attack will be directed not so much against the present British preference offers in themselves as against them as a half-way house to a wider scheme of protective duties. All the same it is not expected that the offers if they reach parliament at all, will pass without a storm indeed in the present uncertainties of British politics it is quite likely that dissolution will intervene.

All the retiring members of the city council are seeking new terms.

It is hoped that to-day's final discussions at the final sitting of the Economic Conference concerning difficulties confronting the Empire wireless scheme will do something to end the present delays. There has been considerable criticism of these delays with a charge that Britain is falling behind other countries in wireless developments. The distant dominions, with their more limited cable service, have been particularly pressing in their plea for effective linking up of the wireless chain.

In connection with the higher British preference on canned salmon, Newfoundland has suggested that consideration be given also to fresh salmon and salmon in a chilled state.

SLIGHT INCREASE IN PRICE OF FOOD

Season Advance in Dairy Products Offsets Some Declines.

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press).—A slight increase in the retail prices of foods is registered by the Department of Labor, chiefly due to seasonal advances in dairy products. The average cost per week of a list of twenty-nine staple foods for a family of five in some sixty Canadian cities was $10.65 in October as compared with $10.46 a month earlier. The same foods cost $1.23 in October a year ago. In June 1920 the cost was $16.92, which was the peak of the war inflation; while in October of 1914 the cost was $7.99. During the month under review substantial increases occurred in the price of eggs, butter and cheese while there were smaller increases in sugar, lard, bacon, milk and rice. The only important decline was in potatoes, though beef, evaporated apples and prunes were slightly lower.

Including the cost of fuel and rent with that of foods the total weekly budget for October averaged $21.16 as compared with $20.97 in September. Fuel and rent showed little change from the levels of the previous month.

HOME MADE COUGH MIXTURE CONSIDERED BEST

Spreads Over Membrane, Soothes, Heals and Stops Cough Almost Instantly.

COSTS BUT A TRIFLE

Make your own cough syrup in two minutes at home if you want the best.

Simple coughs, or stubborn coughs, it doesn't matter which, this home-made mixture will stop them quicker than any expensive cough syrup you can buy ready made.

It's fine for chest colds too and for acute nasal catarrh.

Get from any druggist one ounce of Parmint (double strength)—to this add a little granulated sugar and enough water to make one-half pint—that's all there is to it, and children like it.

Like a soothing, healing poultice one costly substance in this home-made cough mixture spreads itself completely over the membrane of the throat. This causes the most stubborn hang on cough to cease almost instantly. No ordinary slow-acting cough syrup contains this expensive ingredient.

And remember—any remedy that overcomes catarrh, partially or wholly is bound to be of benefit to those who are troubled with head noises and catarrhal deafness.

Get Parmint and get better.

TURNING TO TOBACCO.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 10.—(Associated Press)—The production of tobacco is fast superseding wheat growing in Bulgaria. Once almost exclusively a wheat raising country, today Bulgaria has ten acres in tobacco against one in cereal.

Bulgarian farmers were taken into European Turkey before the war to work in the tobacco fields, and learned the business thoroughly. Unsettled conditions have killed the industry in Turkey, so the Bulgarians are returning to their own country bringing the industry with them. Farmers find there is six to eight times more profit in a field of tobacco than in a field of wheat of the same size.

New Method of Reducing Fat

A news item from abroad informs us that the American method of producing a slim, trim figure is meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made such a wonderful impression over there, must be the Marmola Prescription Tablet method of reducing fat. It is safe to say that we have nothing better for this purpose in this country. Anything that will reduce the excess flesh steadily and easily without injury to the stomach, the causing of wrinkles, the help of excreising or dieting, or interference with one's meals is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a catalogue of good results follow the use of these pleasant, harmless and economical little fat reducers. We says economical, because Marmola Prescription Tablets (made in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription can be obtained of any druggist the world over or from the Marmola Company, 4613 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. for one dollar a box which is a decidely economical price, considering the number of tablets each box contains. They are harmless.

PUTS HEALTH AND VIM INTO WOMEN

So Says Mrs. MacPherson of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brantford, Ont.—"I was always tired and the least exertion would put me out for a day or two. I had a pressing pain on the top of my head, pain in the nape of my neck, and when I stooped over I could not get up without help, because of pain in my back. I did not sleep well and was nervous at the least noise. I keep house, but I was such a wreck that I could not sweep the floor nor wash the dishes without lying down afterwards. A friend living near me told me what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for her so I began to take it. With the first bottle I felt brighter and got so I could wash dishes and sweep without having to lie down. Later I became regular again in my monthly terms. I have taken ten bottles all told and am now all better. I can truly say that your wonderful medicine cannot be beaten for putting health and vim into a woman."—Mrs. JAMES H. SILVER PLATE TO 'BILL' BARRY

Directors of the Exhibition Board Acknowledge Large Debt to Talented Associate.

W. H. Barry was the guest of the Peterborough Exhibition Board at a dinner given in his honor at the Empress Hotel last night. Nearly all the directors were present, some of those from the country such as M. Guiry of Ennismore and T. McIndoo, of Cavan, having driven as far as fifteen miles in their response to President Denne's summons to the Board to pay tribute to a departing associate whose talents had been generously and gratuitously employed in the designing of those recent improvements which have so effectually transformed the Exhibition Park.

Several of the honorary directors were present last night, including His Honor Judge Huycke, Rev. C. J. Phelan of Campbellford sent his regrets. Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M.L.A., was a guest of the Board, but Mr. G. N. Gordon, M.P., was detained by court duty in Cobourg.

The Exhibition Board's acknowledgment of Mr. Barry's unstinted co-operattion, of his architectural services for which he persistently refused remuneration, his active interest in the general problems and progress of the Exhibition and finally of his attractive personality, was expressed by Mr. Denne and Mr. Harry Webber, and translated to tangible form by Mr. Reg. Turner, who presented Mr. Barry with a handsome silver tray, inscribed with a legend memorializing the occasion.

Gave Service Free.

"If Bill had accepted money for the services he gave the Board and the city in improvements made to the Exhibition plant we would have had to pay him well up in the hundreds," said President Denne. "He supervised building work and the entrances to the grounds, as well as designing them and he was there to look after it when it was being done. It is all too hard to get men who are willing to come out and serve not only on the Exhibition Board, but on the Board of Education, the City Council and in other public affairs. A man owes a duty to the country he lives in and also to his city. And Bill Barry is one of those fellows who are willing to do their share and more than it. He's been on every board in town. He was active in his church, and as far as the Exhibition Board is concerned we can't say too much for him. I wish him every success in Los Angeles, but we won't be sorry if he finds it so hot down there that he has to come back to Peterborough."

Every One His Friend.

"Mr. Barry has made a permanent friend of every member on the Board," said Mr. Webber, who also referred to the efficient and artistic services Mr. Barry had rendered.

"Anything I have done for the Peterborough Exhibition has been a real pleasure," Mr. Barry replied. "I have rejoiced to see the Exhibition grow and if we could have doubled the number of buildings we put up I should have been glad to work overtime to get out the plans. I shall continue my interest in the Exhibition and I hope it will reach the ideals we have held."

Mr. Barry thanked the directors for their gift, remarking that in the position in which he was placed he was unable to express his feelings adequately.

Other tributes were paid to Mr. Barry by W. S. Merrell, Rev. R. B. Grobb, R. Turner, Judge Huycke, W. H. Bradburn, W. R. Breyfogle, T. McIndoo, Wm. Steinkrauss, J. B. Shields, J. T. O'Connell, Robert Grandy, E. B. Fowler, Tom Brown and George Paxman.

An enjoyable programme of music was provided by George Chandler, Bob Hendry and Jack Smith, with choruses sung by the assembly. Mr. Barry presided at the piano and it was emphasized by several of the speakers that his musical ability will be not the least of the losses to Peterborough in the departure of Mr. Barry.

FIND VALUABLE PAINTINGS.

The paintings are of the Italian school and of great artistic value. Every endeavor is being made to restore them completely. No clue yet has been found as to the identity of the painters.

TRENT WATERWAY NEEDS ENDORSED

"We appreciate fully the value of your organization in its activities to develop the tourist traffic to the Province," said the Hon. Chas. McCrea, Minister of Mines, Provincial Government, yesterday, to a deputation of the Trent Waterway Development Association, which interviewed him in connection with the supplying of parent fish for the proposed Trent Waterway exhibit at the New York Motor Boat Show to be held on January 4 to 12.

The Department not having the necessary equipment of aquaria, Mr. McCrea promised the deputation that he would procure financial assistance to the Association for the purpose of securing this portion of the exhib't and also any other assistance that may be required to procure the fish. At the close of the Motor Boat Show the exhibit of live fish will be presented to the New York Aquarium, which is visited by hundreds of thousands of tourists each year.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., member for West Peterborough, headed the deputation, comprised of W. Finalyson, K.C., M.P.P., Midland; J. F. B. Belford, M.P.P., Codrington; Major Alex Lewis, M.P.P., Toronto; K. G. Fraser, Hamilton, President, and Leon. Frazer, Peterborough, Secretary, Trent Waterway Development Association.

WORLD WIDE SILENCE AT ELEVEN TOMORROW TO HONOR WAR DEAD

Peterborough Programme Includes Muster in the Grand Opera House of All Those Who Remember the City's Sacrifice.

CENOTAPH SERVICE

Plans for the observance of Armistice Day this year include a programme under the direction of the G.W.V.A. on Sunday and a holiday on Monday, also observed as Thanksgiving Day. The two minutes of silence, which are becoming more generally observed every year, will be kept here and in all parts of the world at the eleventh hour on Sunday.

The official programme has been announced, and includes addresses by Hon. Dr. H. S. Beland, M.P., Minister of the D.S.C.R.; G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons; His Honor Judge E. C. S. Huycke, Rev. Captain James Rollins, overseas chaplain, and Dr. N. H. Sutton, President of the local branch of the G.W.V.A. Special music will be provided by the Peterborough Rangers Band, under the direction of Lieut. W. Perrier, and singing will be led by R. J. Devey, always prominent in support of the returned men of the city.

A parade is scheduled to start from the Veterans' Hall on Murray street, all ranks mustering at 2 p.m. at the cenotaph with the band on the lawn. On the arrival of Hon. Dr. Beland an inspection will be made of the troops and a selection played by the band, after which wreaths will be placed on the cenotaph. Following a short address by Rev. (Capt.) Rollins, the Last Post will be sounded by a quartette of buglers. The cenotaph will be guarded by four men representative of the Canadian Forces, the Navy and the Imperial Army.

Service in Opera House.

At the close of the cenotaph service all ranks will march to the Grand Opera House for the main service, which is open to the public. Arrangements are being made to provide accomodation for all those desiring to take part in the commemorative service.

"O Canada" and the National Anthem, played by the Rangers Band, will open the service, followed by introductory remarks by President N. H. Sutton. G. N. Gordon will deliver an address and two verses of the humn, "Oh, God, Our Help in Ages Past," will be sung.

Hon. Dr. Beland will give the main address of the day, bringing to its conclusion the first division of the meeting.

The second part of the programme is a requiem, conducted by Rev. James Rollins, opening with the sentence, "I heard a voice saying," followed by a lesson and commendatory prayer. The Last Post will be sounded, followed after two minutes of silence by the singing of "Nearer My God to Thee" by a quartette composed of Bandsman Everett, Sgt. Coleman, Pte. H. J. Devey and Pte. John Smith.

The third division will be opened by the singing of a solo, "There Is No Death," by John Smith. His Honor Judge Huycke will deliver an address and the hymns, "Peace, Perfect Peace" and "Abide With Me," will be sung. The benediction and the singing of the National Anthem will conclude the service.

All returned men having uniforms are urged to wear them, with their decorations.

Universal Observance.

The two minutes of silence requested by His Majesty the King, commencing at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning, is an almost universal tribute to the Allied soldiers who fell in the Great War. Not only through out the British Empire, but in the United States and other foreign countries, this great silence will be kept, and ships at sea will join the observance. President Coolidge of the United States declared that "such universal observance must tend to draw closer together the great communities in whose keeping are the destinies of our civilization, and to make them realize more and more the essential unity of human society." Throughout the United States proclamations have been issued by State Governors that the two minutes silence be observed, and that Monday be kept as a holiday.

Rev. C. W. Rose, D.D., President of the Ministerial Association of Peterborough, suggested that all congregations in the city take their places at five minutes to eleven tomorrow morning, in order that the tribute may be paid in unison.

Peterboro Sacrificed Four Hundred Soldiers.

Peterborough and district sent 3,616 men and nursing sisters overseas, according to the service records in the G.W.V.A. archives.

Of these 403 were killed in action or died of wounds. They left in Peterborough 193 war widows and widowed mothers and 146 children.

Of the city's splendid contribution there returned 3,010 N.C.O.'s and other ranks, 16 nursing sisters and 94 officers. Ninety-three accepted discharge in Britain.

The German frontier was crossed by Canadians on December 4 1918, and Cologne bridgehead occupied on December 10.

Over 25,000,000 Poppies Are Sold For The Soldiers

LONDON, Nov. 10 (United Press).—The humble red poppy of the corn fields was in everybody's buttonhole today in memory of the men who died "amid Flanders' poppies" during the great war.

Twenty-five million imitation poppies (it being too late in the year for the real thing) are on sale today in Britain alone, and with Colonial subscriptions the Haig Fund organizers expect to realize between 250,000 and 300,000 pounds. Today's flower-sellers were all voluntary workers and ranged from the professional flower-girl to duchesses and other society leaders.

ARMISTICE DAY, 1923

"But each one, man by man, has won imperishable praise, each has gained a glorious grave—not that sepulchre of earth wherein they lie, but the living tomb of everlasting rememberance wherein their glory is enshrined, remembrance that will blossom in the deeds of their countrymen the world over. For the whole earth is the sepulchre of heroes; monuments may rise and tablets be set up to them in their own land, but on far-off shores there is an abiding memorial that no pen or chisel has traced; it is graven, not on stone or brass, but on the living heart of humanity.

Take these men then for your examples. Like them, remember that prosperity can be only for the free, that freedom is the sure possession of these alone who havecourage to defend it.

London Plans Ceremonies Of Armistice Day

LONDON, Nov. 10 (Canadian Press).—Armistice Day, Nov. 11, falling this year upon a Sunday, it has been decided to make some changes in the manner of celebrating the anniversary. Since 1920 the two minutes' silence has been observed at the hour of 11, all over the country.

In London the ceremonies have centred around the cenotaph in Whitehall, where a religious service has preceded the silence. This year a special service will be held in Westminster Abbey, attended by the King, the Prime Minister, and the Premiers and other representatives of the dominions and India attending the Imperial Conference. The King will place a wreath, in his own name, and that of the Empire, on the unknown warrior's tomb.

FIFTH ARMISTICE ANNIVERSARY FINDS THE WORLD IS RECOVERING

The fifth anniversary of Armistice Day finds Europe, with the exception of Germany, well along the road to recovery and giving promise of prosperity in the near future. Pessimistic viewpoints of Europe have no foundation in fact. Germany may even be split up into its original parts without bringing any permanent trans-Atlantic injury.

Five years ago, it was a common prediction that Europe might never recover from the world war and would certainly require a generation to reach stabilization. Instead of that, the allies have come through extraordinarily well.

Great Britain has balanced her budget and has begun to repay her war debt to America.

France Powerful

France has overwhelmed Germany's diplomatic efforts to win the peace after having lost the war; and there is as much prosperity among the French people today as before the war. France is more powerful in Europe than at any time since Napoleon.

Austria has been saved, and Vienna is recovering her former prestige as the economic and financial centre of southeastern Europe.

Turkey has won back much of the territory she lost during the war, and and resumed successfully her old skill at the diplomatic game of playing one set of powers against another.

Italy, under Mussolini, is coming back. A new era of efficiency, unknown even before the war, is becoming more pronounced month by month, and the Italian budget will probably be balanced within another year.

Czecho-Slovakia has established her position as a stabilizing influence in Europe, and is wielding large power through President Mazaryk and Foreign Minister Benes.

Russia has worked her way out of the reign of terror and is developing successful plans of reconstruction.

Germany One Sore Spot

The one sore spot in Europe is Germany. There is nothing abnormal about that. Germany was the defeated nation in the most destructive war the world has ever known. The only abnormality in the situation was the curious belief, very widely held, that after her defeat, Germany could escape the consequences, except for payment of an easy ransom. That dream, now shattered, has been followed by a swing to the other extreme.

Now that Germany is feeling the effects of her defeat, it is customary to believe that civilization must fall unless the Germans are forgiven, or at least are allowed to name their own liability for damages. The war itself didn't break civilization; nor will civilization suffer a collapse if the Germans feel the pains of their position still more severely.

Dawn of The Day Brought Tidings To Peterborough

At 3.20 on the morning of November 11, 1918, the Examiner received a message that stirred the people as no tidings of the birth or death of kings could have done—a message that told of the death of Kaiserism and the birth of a new era through the victory of the Allies. It read:

"The Armistice with Germany was signed at 5 o'clock this morning, French time. Hostilities ceased this morning at 11 o'clock, French time."

Immediately on the announcement of the great news by the Examiner's bulletin the city began to stir. The C.G.E. whistle was the first city-wide herald, closely followed by other factory horns. The old bellower achieved a new note on that morning as it echoed the swan song of the last and most belligerent nation of the once haughty and arrogant Central Alliance. To the low rumbling tones that call the workmen to a new day six times a week was added a high-pitched, exultant blast that was the keynote of the forthcoming rejoicing.

At 6 a.m. George street took on real life and Mayor Duncan, who had been working with City Clerk Armstrong in perfecting a programme, kicked off the bid at 6.30.

The Fire Department's motor engine screamed through the streets,

Fly Union Jack Masthead High Armistice Day

LONDON, Nov. 10.—In connection with the armistice celebrations next Sunday it is the King's desire that uniformity should be observed in flying flags, all of which should be flown from the masthead. On Armistice Day last year some flags were not flown at all, some were flown half-masted and others were flown from the masthead.

The Prince of Wales and several Cabinet Ministers will attend a short service at the centoaph on Armistice Day. A special service will also be held in Westminister Abbey.

Boche Driven Out and the Historic City Occupied in Early Hours of Nov. 11, 1918 — Determining the Reasons Why Armistice Was Best For the Allied Armies.

FIVE YEARS AGO.

Five years ago! And yet the day is more vivid now than it was two or three years ago It stands out boldly in its right proportion, the dramatic ending of fifty-one months of agony. At the time the significance of Armistice Day was clouded by many things. The Army ceased to function as the all-in-all and the politicians came into their own. "Cessation of hostilities"—a mighty phrase that was to issue in the healing virtues of peace. Unhappily it was but a phrase, there has been no cessation and Europe is, if anything, more embittered, more of an armed camp, nearer by the long strides of these five years to disruption and overwhelment, to the perishment of civilization in the cauldron of anarchy.

News of the Armistice was celebrated in many capitals, demonstrations not devoid of hysteria, so sudden the relief from the strain of years, so bright shone the sun as the war clouds rolled away. But for the fortunate Canadian soldier no place at all was so fitting for its celebration than the historic city of Mons, entered by troops of the 2rd Canadian Division, Major-General A. C. MacDonell, in the early hours of the morning, and where at eleven o'clock in the Grande Place the burgomaster presented the keys of the city to Brig.-General J. A. Clark of the 7th Brigade, all of whose battalions had taken part in the assault, namely the Royal Canadian Regiment, Princess Patricia's Light Infantry, the 42nd Battalion (5th Royal Highlanders of Montreal) and the 49th Battalion of Edmonton. Pipers of the 42nd (5th Royal Highlanders of Montreal, wearers of the Hackle Highland Scarlet as being affiliated with the Black Watch) led the march past because its troops had been the first to enter the city.

News of the Armistice

Further to the south and the east the 2nd Canadian Division, Maj.-General Sir Henry Burstall, with troop of the 4th Brigade, Brig. General G. E. McCraig in line (Central Ontario) had pushed forward and seized the heights east of Mons—those formidable hills so earnestly scanned by the British Army in August, 1914, for signs of the debouching enemy. This marked the furthest eastern advance of the Allies and it was at ten minutes past seven that morning that Brigade Headquarters received this message: "Hostilities will cease at 11 a.m., Nov. 11. Troops will stand fast on the line reached at that time, which will be reported to Divisional Headquarters immediately. Defensive precautions will be maintained. There will be no intercourse with the enemy of any description."

Throughout all the fighting that followed its attack at Arras on Aug. 26 right through to Mons, a period of most bitter battle and victory dearly won, the Canadian Corps was attached to First Army, forming its right wing. The official narrative of First Army thus records the final days: "November 11—During this day the 2nd Canadian Division had gained the high ground south and east of Mons and were forcing the Germans to withdrew. At dawn on Nov. 11 the 3rd Canadian Division entered the town and a line was established east of it. Fighting had been carried on all that night and dead Germans still lay in the streets... ..... The last round fired by the Canadian artillery had shot off the arm of a German staff officer in a Headquarters Chateau by Hill 85 to the east of Mons.

"Early on Nov. 11 Canadian Corps Headquarters were established in the Grande Place at Mons and the first message received was to the effect that the armistice was signed and that hostilities were to cease at 11 o'clock.

"Sir Douglas Haig's last communique stated, 'Canadian troops of the First Army have captured Mons.'"

Official Welcome to Mons

The College of the Burgomaster and Aldermen issued the following proclamation:

"After 51 months of suffering caused by the iniquitous, the pitiless and insolent occupation of the German Army, the City of Mons is at length delivered by the heroism of the British Army, which, at the hour of the Armistice, completes its series of victories in the identical place where, on Aug. 23, 1914, it first engaged the enemy.

"The 3rd Canadian Division, at cost of heavy sacrifices, entered the city at three o'clock this morning, thus avenging by a striking success the retreat of 1914. Honor and thanks be to it!

"The Armistice is signed. The German Army has capitulated; brutal force is destroyed; justice and right triumph; Belgium is strengthened and fortified by the terrible ordeal she has passed through.

"Our people have supported with dignity and courage the sufferings of the occupation. We are convinced that in this hour of joy and triumph they will observe a like restraint and self-command.

"We depend on the goodwill of all to maintain order. We also ask our people to return as soon as possible to work. Losses inflicted on us by the war are great, and the co-operation of all our goodwill, all our energy, is necessary to heal over quickly the wounds it has caused.

"In this solemn hour our infinite

PREMIER M. KING AT HIS NEW HOME

He Received the Members Of the Canadian Club At His New Home in Spring Gardens.

LONDON, Nov. 10. — (Canadian Press). — Premier Mackenzie King yesterday formally received the members of the newly established Canadian Club at their new home in Spring Gardens, London. There was a large attendance at the opening.

The guests, having been received by the Canadian Premier, passed on to be introduced to the Duchess of Devonshire through Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner.

The following are the principal officers of the new Club: President, Colonel Hanington; Vice-President, G. H. Moon; Treasurer, W. H. Rice; Secretary, C. H. Morton.

The Prince of Wales and Hon. P. C. Larkin are patrons.

A residential club for Canadians in London has been aimed at for a long time by certain members of the Canadian community in London. On the other hand it must be stated frankly that other members of the same community are persuaded that there is little need for establishing a new club in the metropolis, which they assert offers club facilities in plenty for visiting Canadians, while the century-old Canada Club, which is merely a dining club, enables them to do as much in meeting directly their compatriots as they desire.

TOWED FATHER 5 DAYS FOR MEDICAL TREATMENT

THE PAS, Man., Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press.) — With arms deeply scarred by a tow rope, the ten year old son of Samuel Bignel, an Indian, arrived here to-day after towing his dying father in a fast flowing river fifty miles to get medical attention.

When his father was taken ill while out on a trap line with the little fellow, the boy helped him into a canoe, took a side line and, finally, after dragging the craft for five days, reached civilization. Bignet died soon after his arrival.

HEAR ARGUMENT IN DAMAGE CASE DEFERS DECISION

An Appeal of Considerable Interest in Hastings County Owing to the Prominence of Plaintiffs

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 10.—W. C. Mikel, K.C., F. E. O'Flynn, County Clerk Nugent, Warden Walsh and Dr. Geo. Clinton returned from Ottawa where the case of Clinton v. Hastings was argued in the Supreme Court of Canada before Chief Justice Louis Davies and Justices Iddington, Anglin, Duff, and Meignueault. A decision is not expected before two weeks.

The case has excited considerable interest owing to the prominence of the plaintiffs, one of whom was at the time of the accident District Medical Inspector. The facts of the case as disclosed by the evidence are that Dr. George Clinton of Belleville and his wife and daughter were on the evening of the 18th of September, 1922, returning from a pleasure trip to Madoc in a coupe. Owing to work being done on the southern portion of the regular Madoc road, the party did not take that road all the way, but turned east onto the third concession road crossed Fairfield's bridge, came down the short road leading from Fairfield's bridge to Corbyville. When passing over this short road the car fell into a ditch or watercourse, when the plaintiffs were severely hurt.

At a trial in the Supreme Court here last May, the plaintiff's were awarded total damages in the sum of $5,600. The county appealed and in the Appelate Division Court the judgment was increased to $11,600. The county then appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The evidence was not very clear as to how the accident happened, but the automobile turned out on the level grass at the side of the road to pass two approaching cars and the car wheel marks the next day indicated that the car containing the plaintiffs did not get back on the road, but fell into the watercourse.

Declare Road Safe.

The appellants urged that the road was reasonably safe for those using ordinary care, but it was only a short road, serving principally those who lived along it, and had been travelled over 40 years in the same condition without an accident, that in this county those using the roads must know that ditches are constructed along them and watercourses run across them, and when using the side of the road greater care should be exercised.

The respondents urged that the condition of the road constituted want of repair, and that condition caused the accident, while appellants replied that the injuries were caused not by the condition of the road, but by the failure of the respondents to drive back on the road, and if they had used the highway with the same care as others they would have had the same result. W. N. Tilley, K.C., and W. C. Mikel, K.C. for appellants: L. McCarthy, K.C. and F. E. O'Flynn for respondents.

MAY FURTHER POSTPONE EXECUTION OF ESKIMOS

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press)—When cabinet meets today it is expected that action will be taken to postpone the execution of the two Eskimos under sentence of death at Herschel Island.

Cabinet decided last week to allow the law to take its course, and a messenger is on his way to Herschel Island with that information. But as the date set for execution is December 7, it is understood that the messenger will be unable to reach his destination by that time. Consequently it is believed that further postponement of execution will be made by order-in-council.

HOW CANADIAN

gratitude goes to the Allied Armies, and, among them, from the bottom of our heart, to our valiant Belgian Army and to the King, its heroic Chief.

"Long live the King! Long live the Belgian Nation!"

Why Mons Was Taken

No such welcome indeed was possible anywhere and at any other time as that of the loyal Walloons of Mons to the Canadian Corps. A wonderful occasion, reaching its climax when in the afternoon the Corps Commander, Sir Arthur Currie, made his formal entry accompanied by many military notables. A great deal of rubbish was shortly to be whispered about among the disgruntled and the disappointed in Canada and London about unnecessary waste of life in the final assault at Mons. It was a matter of outposts, the defense being confined to a rearguard of enemy machine-gunners—gallant fellows enough—and to bombardment of our advancing troops by enemy batteries withdrawn to the east of Mons. Our total casualties for the period from the Battle of Amiens to the Armistice, Aug. 8 Nov. 11, were 46,405—the heavy price of victory. In the great battle of Cambrai, Sept. 27-Oct. 12, there were 15,106, but in the final month of the war when the beaten enemy was seeking vainly to extricate his armies and re-establish himself on the strong line of the Meuse, casualties of the Canadian Corps fell to 4,419.

The strategic value of Mons and of the hills east of the city is hard to over state. Even until the last hours the Armistice hung in doubt. It was vital to capture this position. As Sir Arthur Currie himself has stated:

"The reason Mons was taken was that we obeyed the orders of Marshal Foch that we should go on until we were ordered to stop. That is a thing that means much for Canada. It was a proud thing for our race that we were able to finish the war where we began it, and that we, the young whelps of the lion, were able to take the ground lost in 1914."

The Armistice Alway In Doubt

Among men in the front line trenches the Armistice was something of a myth—too good to be true. The enemy before them still fought stoutly; there was still a heavy enemy artillery concentration. On the immediate front of the Canadian Corps that complete breakdown had not manifested itself as it was doing in parts of the line further south. Early on the Sunday afternoon the battalion mess of the Princess Patricias, then holding the forward line on the fringe of Mons, refused to believe the news told them that the Armistice would be proclaimed next day. Furthermore the terms of the Armistice were then unknown. No one knew of the complete and humiliating surrender. No one could then conceive that the enemy was laying down his arms unconditionally. There was a decided feeling that the politicians were taking a mischievous hand, and now that the enemy was on the run, he must not be allowed to recover himself under cover of an armistice he would disavow so soon as he had reordered his armies.

The habit of four years is not easily broken. Habituated to war, its miseries and its perils, the soldier in the field could not at a dozen hours' notice readjust his imagination to its cessation. Two impressions of that day bite deep into memory. One was the disconcerting, the bewildering pool of silence into which one slipped as "Cease Fire!" sounded. One's ears ached for the accustomed clamor of battle. The other was the twinkling lights that broke out in Mons as the short winter afternoon wore to its close, an indecent and perilous display of light that for the moment shocked one's feelings.

War the Armistice Premature?

There is a final consideration. Was the Armistice premature? Did we let the Boche off too easy? From the perspective of five years, from the vantage ground of knowledge and with before us spread the picture of what is now going to in the Reich, it would seem that it might have been better to have pushed the beaten enemy over the Meuse and the Rhine and thus have marched on into Berlin, there to dictate terms of peace. The Americans were willing and anxious. But their collective lossses had been trivial in comparison with that of Britain and France, with that in ratio of the Canadian Corps. There was always the risk that the enemy might summon again his martial spirit and make a stand long enough on the immensely strong line of the Meuse to stem defeat until winter sealed down once more the war of movement into the desolate trenches. Then, in the spring, with ardor reawakened throughout the Fatherland, he might hope to sell to the Allies at a devastating figure the price of victory. It was not worth it in the scale of human life. We had paid dear enough.

Beyond that again is the fact that the Allies themselves—always excepting the fresh American levies—were by now almost exhausted. Keyed up to that maryellous series of victories that marked those culminating months, the British Army was perilously nigh exhaustion. Far in advance of its railheads, with automotive transport everywhere breaking down: it had already become a serious problem how to supply the advancing armies with food and munitions. There was not much punch left. The Armistice was quite opportune.

SLUMP IN FOREIGN EXCHANGE RATES

Pound and Franc Quoted At New Low Prices in New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—New low prices for the year were established by a number of foreign exchanges in the New York market yesterday as a result of the monarchist revolt in Germany. Despite later despatches chronicling the suppression of the uprising, most of the continental rates closed at near the lows of the day.

Demand Sterling fell off more than three cents at the opennig to $4.39 3-4 and although it rallied one cent at midday, the closing quotation was $4.40 1-4. French francs declined 9 points to 5.63 cents, but rallied a few points before the close. Among the Scandinavian exchanges to touch new lows were Danish kronen, off 26 points at 16.67 cents; Holland guilders, off 21 points at 38.26 cents, and Norwegian kronen, off 14 points at 14.24 cents. Some of these rates improved slightly during the day.

Bankers attributed the fall in sterling to the immediate effect of the German situation, but pointed out also that recent rumors of a change in the British fiscal policy, despite the official denial, had influenced the transfer of many balances from London to New York.

French and Belgian bonds fell off moderately in sympathy with the declining exchange rates.

DAWN OF THE DAY

bearing the news to every home, and the crowd speedily gathered to celebrate the greatest carnival Peterborough has ever known, and for which she paid a heavy price.

1,567 Days of War.

After 1,567 days of war, Peterborough tried to crush into one day its joy at the relief the Armistice brought.

A procession over a mile long, containing every kind of vehicle that could be induced to move, with men, women and children packed on wherever there was room to sit, stand or cling, was organized in the morning by the Veterans. Every device that would make a noise was pressed into use and the triumphal procession was an outpouring of the city's joy that has never been equalized.

All day and all night the celebration was continued, and it is a period that will be remembered by every small boy who helped to burn the Kaiser in effigy; every parent and wife who could now look forward confidently to receiving loved ones home again, and by everyone who had done his part in the Great War as a day that justified his efforts.

TEEMING SHOWER FOR FAMILY WHOSE HOME WAS DESTROYED

Omemee Neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Allie Fee Give Generous and Practical Proof of Sympathy.

At Institute Meeting.

OMEMEE, Nov. 9.—The monthly meeting of the Omemee branch of the East Victoria Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. T. J. Parsons. Mrs. Earnest MacPherson presided in her usual genial manner. Following the report of the last meeting read by the secretary, Mrs. Cornwall, Mrs. Hume delighted all present with a solo. A paper, "Woman as a Good Citizen," was given by Miss Lila Parsons. An instrumental duet by the Misses Race, followed by the National Anthem, completed a most interesting meeting, at the conclusion of which refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. L. Mahood, Mrs. Percy Parsons and Mrs. T. J. Parsons.

During the social hour, the generous and sympathetic neighborliness of the whole community was evidenced by the bountiful shower given for Mr. and Mrs. Allie Fee, who last week lost practically everything in a most disastrous fire. Among the many needful things provided for the re-establishment of a home were three pairs flannelette blankets, a quilt, pillows, towels, tea towels, aprons, tub, washboard, clothes pins, blueing, starch, 40 bars of soap, three pails, many cooking utensils, potatoes, pots, pie plates, cake pans, frying pan, roasting pans, silver teaspoons, whole wheat meal, flour, raisins, eggs, apples, onions, potatoes, bacon, a quantity of canned goods, flavoring extracts, bake board, rolling pin, brooms, several cash contributions, warm mittens, stockings and doll for the little girl, between 75 and 80 jars of fruit, pickles, marmalades and jams, and many other donations too numerous to mention. It was truly a wonderful example of brotherly love and sympathy and one which the recipients will long remember.

Women's Citizenship

Following is the paper given at the meeting:

"Woman is a good citizen."

To my mind, to be good citizens our work must begin at home. A happy home should contain a cheerful, kind and sympathetic woman, not a grumbler, a fault finder or a nagger. Did you ever stop to think what great imitators children are? If we are grumblers and naggers they will very likely be the same. I have known daughters brought up in such a home and when they finally married and went into homes of their own, they followed out the teaching of their lifetime by being naggers and grumblers, thus tending to make home unhappy. Then, should mothers not be careful of the example which they set their children?

Some are Grumblers

There may be several reasons why some women are grumblers, one being ill-health, which often makes one cross and irritable. But does this do us any good or does it help those around us? I think not. It only makes it harder for those who are caring for us. Another reason is over-work. So many women say, "We have more work than we are able to do, and it makes us cranky." This may be the case, but as we try to have a system about our work and not have too much to do in one day or do we try to take the easiest way to do our work. Supposing we have a chair of convenient height which might be used when peeling fruit or vegetables, washing dishes, rolling out pastry; yes, and even ironing may be accomplished in this manner. While such garments as underwear, sheets, etc., are much healthier if just folded or as they are cunningly termed by one housewife, "sunkist."

Conserving Strength

Some women think that to save their strength in this manner is a sure sign of laziness, but if they would stop to think what it means to themselves, their husbands and their children, they would soon utilize every means possible so that they may be still fresh and not worn out when evening comes. A woman of this type was visiting a friend and she noticed what a hard way her hostess had of working, which was telling on her nerves and general health. One day she noticed an old stool in the shed and she asked her friend why she did not bring it in and use it. The woman replied, "I have never been in the habit of doing my work in that lazy fashion." The visitor was energetic so she brought in the stool, and dusing her stay it was not used. One day after she had gone her friend, feeling very tired, thought when no one was looking, she would try the stool. She soon found out that she could do a great deal of her work in this way, and at the same time rest. The stool has now become her household companion.

Now, could we not devise some plan whereby we could save our strength and also many steps, and thus be in a mood where we could give our loved ones the cheerfulness and kindness that we should. I heard a little girl remark not long ago, "Oh, mother is so cross, she just scolds all the time. Everything that happens she blames us. I am glad to stay out on the street so I won't hear her." Mothers, are you doing your duty to those whom God has given to your care? Are we driving our children away from the home? That should be the happiest spot on earth to them. Then let us endeavor by our kind, loving and cheerful disposition keep our dear ones around us in the home, for if we are not good homemakers we can never be good citizens. Then, in order to be good citizens, we should try and be a help to those around us and those with whom we come in contact with from day to day.

Make Others Happy

One of the greatest joys of life is to make others happy. Little acts of kindness, frequently performed, are of more value than an occasional big service or sacrifice, and the more we practise them the more they will become our second nature, and how true it is that in trying to help others we will forget our own troubles. If we can bear our own burdens with a bright and cheerful countenance and a brave heart and at the same time try to help someone else over some rough place, we are doing one of the most noble works possible for the Master. We are all prone to think that our lives do not count for much in this world, and that everything we do, for its betterment will bear little or no fruit. But is this not where we make a sad mistake? For, after all, is it not the little things in life that make up the world, and we are told that "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much." So we may rest assured that if we are faithful in accomplishing the little things, when we have an opportunity to do something greater, we will be better fitted to do so.

Christian Character

Then, to make the best citizens possible, should we not be true Christians? Is there anything in the world today more noble and grand than a woman of true Christian character? One who is ever ready to stand up for that which is pure and good and despise that which is evil? This is the privilege of every woman today, and does God require it of us. We are all anxious to receive the praise of our fellowmen for any little act of kindness we may perform, but what is it in comparison to the commendation of God? "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

It is the privilege of every woman to be a good citizen and if we are not the fault lies within ourselves. Let us endeavor to live each day so that when our voice is heard no more those around can truly say, "She was a good citizen."

U. F. O. Concert

On Wednesday evening of this week about 20 of the Reaboro U. F. O. and U. F. W. O. braved the storm and journeyed to Omemee to put on the programme for the local clubs here. In the absence of the Reaboro president, Mr. T. A. McConnell acted as chairman and opened the meeting with "The Maple Leaf Forever." Miss Mary Hall acting as pianist. A varied programme was then given as follows:

Vocal duet, Misses Reta McNevin and Elsie Read; recitation, Miss Pearl Smith and encore; humorous reading, Mrs. Richard Smith, entitled "The High Cost of Living"; vocal duet, Misses Nora Smith and Doris McNevin; instrumental, Miss Mary Hall; recitation, Mr. Kenneth Reid (encore).

The resident ministers, Mr. Rowland and Mr. Black were then called on for a short speech, and promptly responded. The former related his experiences as a club member on his pastorate at Brooklyn.

Mrs. Hall, the president of the Reaboro U. F. W. O., then spoke a few words and extended a hearty invitation to the visiting pastors to attend a club meeting at Reaboro when a return visit is made.

After a few brief remarks by Mr. F. G. Sandy, the meeting was brought to a close by the National Anthem.

A social half hour was then spent when the Omemee ladies served refreshments.

W. M. S. Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the W. M. S., of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, was held in the Sunday School room on Wednesday afternoon. The president, Mrs. S. J. Mackey, occupied the chair, and in her usual able manner, conducted the devotional exercises. A splendid report of the October meeting was given by the secretary, Mrs. E. H. Mitchell. The treasurer's report also followed. Through the removal of Mrs. Younie, a valued member of the society has been lost and the secretary was requested to forward a letter of expression to her. Mrs. M. J. Parsons was appointed messenger-secretary to fill the vacancy caused by Mrs. Younie's removal. It was the unanimous desire of the society to contribute a quilt, and a pair of blankets to Mr. and Mrs. Fee, who suffered a terrible loss through fire.

The study book was taken by Mrs. Parsons, the chapter being, "The call of the church." Mrs. Black then contributed a very interesting leaflet on "Cancelled Prayer," as did also Mrs. H. Lamb on "The Deaconess' Bouquet." Short prayers were offered by a number of the ladies, after which the president read a short extract from the Missionary Messenger on "My Daughter Will Weave," and also one by Mrs. Kelly on "Missionary Excuses." All added interest to the programme. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served, the hostesses being Mrs. Kelly and Mrs. M. J. Parsons.

A FAIRY CANTATA ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Mrs. W. McKee Bingham Had Charge of The Production.

There was a good attendance in St. John's church parish hall last evening, for the presentation, under the auspices of the Junior Women's Auxiliary of the church, of a fairy cantata, in two parts, entitled respectively, "The Beautiful Garden," arranged by Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, and "Five O'clock Tea," the whole entertainment being an adaptation of the charming little cantata offered some months ago by junior players of the congregation. Mrs. W. McKee Bingham had charge of the production, and carried it through in her usual skillful style. Musical accompaniment was provided by Mrs. G. Evans at the piano, and Mr. P. Hooper, violinist.

"The Beatuiful Garden," containing some original numbers by Mrs. Bingham, opens with a chorus of fairies in a garden, and contains choruses and solos and recitations, by fairies and flower girls and small soloists; Winnie Eggleton, Ida Sage, Phyllis Mann, Mary Copperthwaite, Roy Pitchford, Joe Copp, Billie Coleman and George Francis.

The "Five O'clock Tea" section told the story, in dainty fashion, with appropriate costuming, of a little tea hour meeting, different children portraying the various parts of a tea party. Margery Evans recited the prologue, followed by a chorus of Slaves and Fairies. Grace Simpson acted as "Queen-I-Love-You," Freddie Ford and Alfred Pooley were the Tea Leaves, Hilda Evans was Wheatear, Beatrice Pooley the Milkmaid, Donald Hood and Leslie Dyer sugarcanes, Douglas Blagrave was Silvermine, Constance Ivison Dresdina, Kathleen Lang the Woven Flax, and Scott Medd was Oak Leaf. Numerous charming little solos and choruses made a pretty offering, which concluded with a chorus, "Our Task is O'er," by the slaves and fairies.

Flower Girls were Audrey Johnson, Eulah Simpson, Marjorie Lang, Geraldine Long, Sadie Miles and Dorothy Patterson. Fairies were Mary Evans, Dorothy Pitchford, Phyllis Mann, Winifred Francis, Phyllis Pitchford, Gladys Dafoe, Kathleen Ford, Margaret Dainten, Florence Lammings, Gladys Sage, Ida Sage and Betty Preston. Milkmaids were Gladys Collis, Dorothy Pitchford and May Evans.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS LOCATION OF WILHELM

LONDON, November 10 (Canadian Press).—Former Crown Prince Wilhelm of Germany left Wieringen about four o'clock this morning, and mystery surrounds his whereabouts, says a Central News despatch from Amsterdam.

The Prince was seen in a motor car in a small mainland town a few miles from the coast at 4.30.

Another car heavily loaded with baggage and petrol followed.

Two chauffeurs and an unidentified person accompanied the Prince.

Inquiry at Wieringen elicited the information that Wilhelm was going to Doorn, but at Doorn Castle it was stated that the Prince was not expected there.

SCHOOL ASSOCIATION . . . HOLD GOOD MEETING

A meeting of the Central Home and School Association was held last evening, the president, Mrs. F. Miller, in the chair. The speaker of the evening was Mrs. James Kendry, who described the great educational council recently held in California, and emphasized the need in the schools of instruction in housewifery and domestic science.

A musical programme included selections by the School's orchestra, instrumental numbers by Annie Constable, Isabel Pogue, Margaret Devell and Carmen McCarthy, and vocal solos by Miss Sarah Plusby and Carmen McCarthy.

It was decided during the business session to give a banquet some time next week to the boys of the school, who acquitted themselves so well this season in capturing Mr. Alex. Ray's cup for football prowess among the school teams, and in winning the relay race at the fall exhibition.

TRAVELLERS FORM PETERBOROUGH UNION

Secret Fraternal Society Launched a Branch—Charter Applied For.

At a meeting well attended last night at the Empress Hotel a large number of travellers signed an application for a local charter for a council of the United Commercial Travellers for Peterboro.

This international order, which is a secret fraternal society, composed of travelling men, has a membership of about 110,000, and is becoming very strong in Eastern Canada.

Gordon Bennett and Fred. C. Oldham, of Toronto Council, were here to assist as much as possible, and were both well pleased with the prospects of U. C. T.'ism in this city. The fact that many of our prominent and well-known business men are taking an active interest shows that the organization is going to get a proper start and will be in the right hands.

Walter W. Head, 229 Edinburgh Street, was appointed secretary-treasurer pro tem, and he promises that when the Council is instituted, some time early in December, it will be one of the best prepared in Eastern Canada.

Toronto, London, Hamilton and Ottawa each have live councils, and along with the many thousand members in the West, much can be done for the betterment of conditions for the travelling man

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—If there is anything on earth that can bring this town to realise the true condition it is in, and what its prospects are, the position of Kingston ought to do it.

Kingston has applied to Hydro for more power in order to land a new industrial prize, but that city has been told that it has already received its share and can get no more.

Like Peterborough, the city of Kingston must now stand still. It can't expand. No more power. Is Peterborough going to continue tied up to Hydro and lose its last chance of getting power of its own for further use?

Oh for some man or woman big enough to grasp the seriousness of our situation. A crisis comes in every town's life. Shall it get better or die? Have we sense enough to do it?—Your... Last Call.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

A Wedding of Local Interest—Personals.

MILLBROOK, November 10. — A wedding of considerable interest to people of this vicinity took place in St. Barnabas' Church, Toronto, on Wednesday, 7th November, when Jessie Elizabeth ,only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Walker Cole, became the bride of Rev. Milton George Barlow Williams, curate of St Thomas' Church, Millbrook, and only son of Mr and Mrs. E. M. Williams, Havelock, Ont.

A college friend of the groom, Rev. H. H .Heard, of Capreol, Ont., performed the ceremony.

The bride was beautifully attired in a wedding gown of white georgette, and wore the customary bridal veil, held in place with a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried an ivory prayer book and wore a handsome pearl pendant, the gift of the groom.

The bridesmaid, Miss Beatrice J. Williams, sister of the groom, was becomingly gowned in pale green shot taffeta silk, and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses. Mr. R. M. Barlow, of Toronto, the groom's uncle, acted as best man. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a beautiful pearl necklace, and to the groomsman a smoking set.

During the signing of the register, "The Voice that Breathed O'er Eden" was sung, and a reception was afterwards held at the home of the bride's parents.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Williams left for a brief honeymoon, and on their return will reside in Millbrook.

Mr. Williams has leased part of Mr .and Mrs. Wilkinson's large residence, Main Street, where he and his bride will take up housekeeping.

"Stream of Life."

"The Stream of Life," the first of the series of moving pictures under the auspices of the Ministerial Association, was given in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening. Unfortunately the weather was most unfavourable and the attendance small, practically no one coming in from the country, though a number of tickets have been sold outside the village. From the expressions of pleasure heard on all sides, it seems fairly safe to prophesy that the remaining three films arranged for during the winter will draw a much larger audience as the pictures on Wednesday night were a complete surprise, both as to the story told and the manner of its presentation, and well repaid those who had braved the snow and discomfort out of doors for the effort made in order to be present.

"The Maker of Men' will be given on 5th December. The Ministerial Association are not benefiting financially in any way from the series, which is wholly for educational purposes. Any surplus will be devoted to the Japanese Relief, or similar funds.

LITTNER Furrier

Cobourg and District

COBOURG, Nov. 9.—The funeral took place here yesterday afternoon, from her residence, Spencer street to St. Peter's cemetery, of Mrs. Joynes, wife of Mr. Maurice Joynes. Her death was very sudden. About two weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. Joynes returned from an enjoyable motor trip to St. Paul, Minn., where they visited Mr. Joynes' mother. She returned seemingly in the best of health and was usually well up to the day of her death. On Monday she was engaged in the morning with her household duties and later in the forenoon went to the bank to attend to some business. While thus engaged she suddenly collapsed and sank to the floor. A physician, who was just outside the door—and her family doctor, who was at once called, gave her medical attention, and she was removed to the hospital where she passed away early that evening. Her death came as a great shock, not only to her husband and brothers and sisters, but also to a multitude of friends. Mrs. Joynes was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Pearse, of Cobourg, and was born here. Thirty-two years ago she married Mr. Maurice Joynes and has continued to make her home here. She was a member of the Methodist church and also of the Cobourg Women's Institute, and o of the Rebecca Lodge, I.O.O.F.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Joynes is survived by three brothers and two sisters, Mr. Lorne Pearse, manager of the North Bay Branch of the Bell Telephone, formerly of Port Hope; Herbert Pearse, Toronto, and Harry of Sault Ste Marie; Mrs. Carswell, Grafton, and Miss Maude Pearse of town. She leaves no children. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. R. F. Stillman, pastor of the Cobourg Methodist church, assisted by Rev. Dr. Daly, Port Hope.

Among the many beautiful flowers were pieces from the Cobourg Women's Institute, the I.O.O.F., the Cobourg Club, the Cobourg Motor League and ladies of the Methodist church. Much sympathy is expressed with the family in their sorrow and loss.

Armistice Day

Preparations are being made here for celebrating Armistice Day. The local veterans will observe Saturday as Poppy Day, when the significant emblem of the battlefields of France and Flanders will be offered for sale. On Sunday the anniversary will be specially observed in the churches. The Cobourg Orange Lodges, men, women, boys and girls will attend services at the Baptist church on Sunday evening. When the pastor, Rev. J. N. Norton, will preach on Armistice Day sermon. At the Methodist church the service and music throughout the day will be in accordance with the solemn celebration. Mr. Frank Parkinson, organist, will also give a Bach twilight recital in the Methodist church at 6.15 that evening.

A Presentation

A pleasant event took place at Port Hope, whereby Mr. and Mrs. E. Boyce were honored by the teachers and staff of St. Paul's Sunday School there. Mr. Boyce, who is the popular organist at St. Paul's, is a son of Rev. and Mrs. W. S. P. Boyce, Brighton, formerly of Courtice. Upon returning after a temporary absence from their home, Mr. and Mrs. Boyce found it had been invaded by a merry company, that had assembled at a neighbor's and watched their chance to slip in unseen. There were witches, goblins and all sorts of fancy costumes, and a very enjoyable social hour was passed. A presentation of a handsome chair to Mr. and Mrs. Boyce was one of the special features of the evening.

Music Study Club

The regular monthly meeting of the Cobourg Music Study Club was held Wednesday in the Congregational church. Rev. F. J. Horwood Mus. Bac., pastor of the Camborne Methodist circuit, gave an address on Mendelssohn. Some musical friends were present from Port Hope and with local members of the Club assisted in remaining numbers on the programme.

Councils of Religious Education

West Northumberland Branch of the Ontario Council of Religious Education has made arrangements for three conventions to be held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. The convention centres are Centenary church on the Roseneath circuit, Camborne and Centreton. Rev. Dr. Fletcher of Toronto, is to be present and will address both the afternoon and evening sessions at each place, and there will be other outstanding addresses. The ladies of the convention churches will serve supper to the delegates. Rev. W. A. Bremner, Cobourg, is to give an address at the evening meeting at Camborne.

C. C. I. Evening Classes

Monday night was enrolment night for the evening classes to be held here under the auspices of the Cobourg Collegiate Institute, and sixty-five names were enrolled of those desiring to take up the many different subjects that appear upon the night school curriculum. So far, however, no one has signified a desire to take up French, which appears as if the English tongue was considered quite sufficient here.

GERMANS AWAIT LETTERS MAILED THEM IN 1914

BERLIN, Nov. 9 (Associated Press) There will soon be delivered in Germany a consignment of letters posted nine years ago in one of the South Sea Islands. Most of the men who wrote these communications are dead, and many of the addresses will be hard to find, so much have conditions changed in Germany in the last decade. In view of all the circumstances, stamp collectors are hopeful of getting some interesting specimens.

When the German Pacific cruiser squadron under Admiral von Spee, which kept the shipping world guessing for the first four months of the great war, put into Ponape, one of the Caroline Islands, in August of 1914, the sailors filled the local post office with letters to friends and relatives back in the fatherland. Then they sailed away to what was ultimately their last fight; they went down before the English off the Falkland Islands in December.

The letters never left Ponape. The Japanese got hold of them ultimately and not long ago turned them over to the German postal authorities. Each communication bears a special stamp reading: "Mail of the Pacific cruiser squadron of August, 1914."

Housewife to Oil Operator in Year.

TULSA, Okla., Nov. 10 (United Press) —From ordinary housewife and mother to the position of successful oil operator and business woman—all in the short space of a year—is the record achievement of Mrs. Charles Murray of Tulsa, who has the added distinction of being America's first woman oil operator.

Unlike most operators, Mrs. Murray, who is the mother of a 10-year-old girl, is her own scout, geologist, financier and drilling superintendent. She makes her own surveys, tests the sands on contemplated locations, finances her own drilling and superintends all operations.

Most of her operations read like fairy tales. She came to Oklahoma slightly more than a year ago, donned khakinion started looking over the oil situatad. She began her scouting in the Bristow field and obtained a lease. Drilling operations were soon started and in less than two months she brought in a 2,000-barrel well, her first. Hardened operators were dumbfounded, for she had drilled just 100 yards from dry holes.

Her operations have since been extended until now she owns interests in Dutcher and Bartlesville pools in Oklahoma and Mexia, Texas. She will soon make a trip to South America to do some scouting there.

WHY YOU NEED IRON—

To Make you strong and "brainy" and put the power into your blood to overcome disease germs.

The food you eat contains carbon. When your food is digested it is absorbed from the intestines into the blood. When the carbon in your food come in contact with the oxygen carried by the iron in your blood, the carbon and oxygen unite and by so doing they give off tremendous energy, thereby giving you great force, strength and endurance. Without iron your blood carries no oxygen and without oxygen there is nothing to unite with the carbon in your food, so that what you eat does you no good—you do not get any strength from it—it is like putting coal into a stove without a fire. You cannot get any heat unless the coal unites with the fire.

The strongest weapon with which to prevent and overcome colds, pneumonia, kidney trouble, rheumatism, nervous prostration, in fact almost any disease or disease germs is plenty of good rich, pure blood, strength, energy and endurance and the greatest energy carrier in the body is organic iron, not metallic iron which people usually take, but organic iron like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, and like the iron contained in what is known as organic Nuxated Iron, which may be had from almost any druggist. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength, energy and endurance of weak, nervous, rundown folks in two weeks' time.

It has been used and highly recommended by former United States Senators, Members of Congress, Judges of U.S. courts, many physicians and prominent men.

Over 4,000,000 people are now using it annually. Satisfactory results are guaranteed or the manufacturers will refund your money. Sold by all druggists in tablet form only.

AGAINST THE SWISS LAW TO WEAR BLACK SHIRTS

By HENRY WOOD.

GENEVA (By Mail to United Press). —The Swiss Federal Council has just cut the Gordian knot of Fascism in Switzerland by promulgating a decree making it against the law to wear a black shirt.

According to the Swiss Federal Council a Fascisti shorn of his black shirt has just about as much chance of getting away with something as Samson shorn of his locks.

The necessity for this drastic action on the part of the Swiss Federal Government was the rapid spread of fascism in the southern canton of Tessin. This canton has a large Italian population and a certain portion of the Italian public has never failed to conduct an irredentist propaganda for the return of this canton to Italy.

Since the ascension to power of Mussolini the Fascist have invaded the canton organized local groups of fascisti and precipitated several clashes that caused straned relations not only between the cantonal government and Italy but between the Swiss Federal Government and its southern neighbor.

Although Mussolini disclaimed that these irredentist manifestations had any official fascisti sanction and declared that Italy had no intention of annexing Tessin nevertheless the fascisti movement in the canton continued to grow.

It was at this juncture that the Swiss Federal Council decided to nip the whole thing in the bud and reduce the fascisti to the level of ordinary individuals by prohibiting the wearing of black shirts. So stringent is the decree that even people accustomed to wearing black shirts under the regular vest and coats are not exempt from arrest for violation of the decree.

ODDITIES IN NEWS

HORSE-SENSE

A terrible forest fire destroyed eight million dollars' worth of timber in upper Michigan. Inspectors prowling through the smoldering ashes found that the fire's course was like a huge doughnut. What would correspond to the hole of the doughnut—a tremendous area of fine forest land—remains untouched by the fire.

It develops that Henry Ford owns that inner circle and that "he does not rely on the state to prevent fires but has his own force of guards." The guards were ready kept the fire out of their land. Ford is frequently credited with industrial marvels that really aren't anything but common sense. Still it's getting so that common sense is a marvel.

TRAPPED

The Southern Pacific contracts for 100 million dollars' worth of insurance for its employes.

You observe here how "the system" is steadily making life a cut-and-dried proposition. Things that used to be "up to the individual" now are decided for him. Probably it's all for the best. But life is becoming as mechanical as an alarm clock. And that isn't for the best because it destroys initiative by lessening the individual's sense of responsibility.

SWEET

You recall the talk about a sugar famine. Well the sugar industry has been waiting for the report from the firm of Willett & Grey. It's available now and to this effect: The world's sugar crop for the 1923-1924 season will be bigger than ever before. Larger even than the gigantic 1914-1915 crop.

This is one more reminder that we live in an era of many predicted catastrophes few of which materialize.

Punch funniest comic magazine in the world prints picture of a fat man being carried by a mob of boys. Underneath it says: "No this is not a triumphal march. It is only poor Mr. Brown on a walking holiday overcome by the heat and discovered by Boy Scouts who are taking him to the nearest village for medical assistance."

We have an idea that's what the rising generation is going to do to us. Our generation you know has botched things frightfully.

JAZZ SONGS AT RECITAL

NEW YORK Nov. 8 (United Press). —Eva Gauthier in her annual song recital here at Aeolian Hall gave Gotham's music critics something to talk and write about when she introduced an "American group" of songs composed by Irving Berlin Jerome Kern and George Gershwin. This experiment is probably the first time that a "jazz" group has been interpolated in a programme which otherwise is strictly conventional

Miss Gauthier sang "The Siren Song" by Jerome Kern that creator of toe-tickling musical melody and Irving Berlin's "Everybody Step" George Gershwin himself accompanied the soprano in the singing of his three songs "Stairway to Paradise" "Ingenue Baby" and "Swanee."

The composers to whom Berlin Kern and Gershwin were thus publicly introduced included Belline Bela Bartack Milhaud and Purcell.

Defended a Sinking Ship From the Rats.

WILMINGTON, B. C. (United Press) —Four members of the crew of the Coast Guard cutter Modoc have been officially commended for bravery at sea. The four, three petty officers and a seaman, remained aboard a waterlogged schooner while the vessel was being towed into port, to see that she did not sink while in tow. The day after the party went aboard the ship a severe storm made their situation precarious. They were unable to escape to the cutter during the gale.

When the storm had abated the men found themselves surrounded by rats that had been driven on deck by the rising water in the ship's holds. The rodents were vicious from hunger. They raided the men's food. The sailors were afraid to sleep because of the danger of being attacked by the rats. The men were exhausted and bore signs of fights with the rats when the cutter and tow reached Charleston, where the schooner was docked.

Upon returning to the station here the commanding officer of the Coast Guard ship formally cited the men in a letter to district headquarters, naming W. M. Prentiss, boatswain's mate, first class; T. Hansen, coxswain; H. Knutsen, coxswain, and K. E. Gustofson, seaman, first class.

COMMUNITY FUND CAMPAIGN

Believing that the previous articles on the Community Fund have sufficiently interested the citizens in general, large subscribers to benevolences and executives of various organizations on social service work, the young men's section of the Chamber of Commerce has called a public meeting for the purpose of discussing this subject on Tuesday evening next, November 13th, at 8 p.m. in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

The Community Fund as established in other cities, both small and large, has proved an unqualified success, and the young men's section believes that it should not be turned down in Peterborough until after due consideration of its advantages and disadvantages.

The Chamber of Commerce will join with the young men's section on this occasion, and invitations have been extended to all organizations that may be interested. This in no way precludes any other organizations or individuals from attending. It is a public meeting and the entire evening will be turned over to the discussion of the subject.

TEN DIRECTORS OF BANK GAVE BAIL

Bonds to Tune of Million Dollars Secured Release For Thanksgiving.

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press).—With their re-appearance in court next Friday, guaranteed by bail bonds totalling about one million dollars, the ten directors and officials of the Home Bank are again at liberty. They had a narrow escape yesterday from spending the week-end and Thanksgiving Day in jail. As it was, they were in the custody of the sheriff's officers for about seven hours, during which time their lawyers and Crown Counsel D. L. McCarthy, K.C., wrangled over legal points and court procedure. Led by W. N. Tilley, K.C., appearing for Vice-President Gough of the bank, the defence made another determined and highly technical attempt to have the accused tried by a county judge without jury. So far no decision has been arrived at on this vexed point, but the course to be followed will be clarified in all probability by Judge Coatsworth next Friday afternoon.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Clive Roberts Barton

MRS. CUCKOO BIRD

"Hello, there!" called Nancy. "Is this where you live?"

"Cuckoo! Cuckoo! Cuckoo! Cuckoo!" went a bird in a magnolia tree right over the heads of the Twins.

The children looked up in surprise. "Hello there!" called Nancy. "Is this where you live? I thought cuckoo-birds only lived in clocks."

"No ma'am!" answered the bird. "We live in Dixie Land! What are clocks?"

"Don't you know!" exclaimed Nancy looking at Nick as much as to say "Well of all the uneducated people we have ever met on our travels this one is the worst." "Why it is something to tell time by!" she said.

"That's queer!" declared the bird. "I always tell time by the sun. I get up when the sun gets up and go to bed when it does. Does a clock go to bed and get up in the morning? And why do cuckoo birds live in them?"

Nancy told the cuckoo bird all about clocks and how some of them were built in the shape of a little house with a tiny door up under the roof which opened when the clock struck the hour. And she told how cuckoo birds came out of the doors and sang out "Cuckoo" as many times as there hours marked on the clock.

"That's queer!" said the cuckoo when Nancy had finished. "I've seen many birds of my own kind and not one of them ever told me about a clock before."

"Oh but these are only pretend birds!" explained Nancy. "They are so cunningly made they look real and act real but they aren't alive at all! I know all about it for grandma had one."

Suddenly a new voice spoke up from another branch of the magnolia tree. "There's nothing strange about all that! For a pretend cuckoo to live in a pretend house. Why even the real cuckoos do that! Or rather they pretend that other people's houses are theirs and they make themselves right at home."

There was a flash of bright red among the branches and Mister Kentucky Cardinal flew down within gossiping distance. "I never say it myself but it's common talk in Dixie Land that cuckoos never build nests for themselves but lay their eggs in the nests of other birds when the mothers are away. When the mother bird comes back and sits upon her eggs again she never notices that she has had a visitor and that there is a new egg in her nest. So she goes on sitting and keeping her eggs warm and when they hatch out one of them is a cuckoo."

"Are you sure about that Mister Cardinal?" asked Missez Cuckoo fluttering her wings nervously.

"Sure!" Well I ought to be. Just this very minute Missez Warbler told me that there is a strange egg in her nest and she doesn't know what to do about it."

"Let's go and see" suggested Nancy. "You lead the way Mister Cardinal and we'll all follow!"

ABOUT BOOKS AND AUTHORS

(By F. M. DELA FOSSE)

For five or six of the early years of my life destiny elected that I should be a resident of Marlborough. This market town of Wiltshire was well-known in older times as a favorite stopping-place on the stage road between Bath and London; its Castle Inn is mentioned in more that one book that reposes on our shelves. To instance one, Stanley Weyman, the well-known English author has written a very readable and interesting novel, entitled The Castle Inn, which has the hostelry mentioned as its chief setting. But one does not have to go back to days of romance to find that Marlborough is an interesting place. Savernake Forest, close by, the seat of the Marquis of Ailesbury, is one of the finest stretches of woodland and glade in England, and the school is certainly today amongst the best known of English educational institutions.

As an urchin of seven or eight years of age I met Dr. Bradley, who became in after days Dean of Westminster, and also Dr. Farrar. Both Dr. Bradley and Dr. Farrar were headmasters of the college. I think Dr. Bradley's son is more noted as an author than was his father. We have nothing of the dean's in our library but we have several books by his son Arthur who by the bye, is somewhat closely associated with Peterborough, through marriage into one of its well-known families. Dr. Farrar, of course, was in his day one of the best-known writers in England. His Lives of the Fathers and more particularly his Life of Christ were regarded as most important works. But he was hardly less favorably known as a most eloquent preacher and as a writer of school stories, Eric, or Little by Little being perhaps the one that achieved the greatest success.

He had a boy named Eric but I never discovered if Eric was named after the book or the book after Eric, or if there was any connection between the two.

There have been several Lives of Christ written since the work by Dr. Farrar created such a sensation. Possibly the most notable of these is the one lately written by the Italian, Papini, a copy of which we have in the library.

Marlborough has other memories for me than those connected with divines. The college was always noted for its cricket and well do I remember how on one occasion Dr. W. G. Grace brought his Gloucestershire team down to play against the college eleven. Dr. Grace was never famous for his amiability on the cricket field and when he was bowled by a fast bowler on the college team he didn't take the blow as affably as he might have been expected to. His bad temper somewhat annoyed the boys and that same evening they planned their revenge.

The visiting team, Dr. Grace amongst them, attended the service in the chapel and Mr. Bambridge the organist was asked by a deputation of boys to have Faber's hymn "Sweet Saviour, bless us ere we go" substituted for one that had already been selected. Suspecting nothing, he did so. The boys turned out in force for the service, and when they came to the words in the hymn:

"The day is done, its hours have run,
And Thou hast taken count of all,
The scanty triumphs grace hath won,
The broken vow, the frequent fall—

They turned towards W. G. and roared it out lustily at him, in a way that showed very plainly that worship at that moment was entirely a secondary matter with them. A boy who was present at the service told me that W. G. was furious.

We have several books dealing with cricket in the library but there is one by Ashley Cooper, dealing with the life of Dr. E. M. Grace, the great W. G.'s brother, and one of the finest points who ever lived, which will well repay the trouble of reading. There is matter in it for the psychologist as well as for the lover of England's national game.—F. M. D.

German Opera Stars Flee to Other Lands.

BERLIN, Nov.10 (Associated Press)—Jumping contracts has become a habit with German opera stars and no longer creates the consternation produced by Lili Lehmann years ago when she deserted the state opera in Berlin to accept an engagement with the Metropolitan in New York.

Lehmann finally won the pardon of the kaiser, who permitted her to return to the imperial opera as there was no singer of the time competent to fill her place. Lehmann was offered roles in New York which she felt she was qualified to sing. But the roles had always been denied her in Berlin. So when the offer came from America she left without saying goodbye.

From the operas all over Germany singers are accepting contracts offered them in countries with better money and paying substitutes to take up their contracts. Some of the singers who are leaving for North and South America can hire a substitute for an entire season with the proceeds of their foreign contracts for only a few nights. While the German public complains because its opera and concert stage are being robbed of many of the best singers, there is little disposition to criticize the artists.

TWO CARS CRASH ON WET PAVEMENT

Belleville Woman Badly Shaken Up As Result of Collision.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 10.—Perry G. Denike, 303 Ann street, and Mrs. W. N. Ponton, Trent road, are badly shaken up as a result of a collision between their two cars at the corner of Ann and Bridge streets.

The rear of the Ponton MacLaughlin touring is badly battered, and the Denike sedan is damaged about the fenders and front.

Mrs. Ponton was driving east on Bridge street at the time of the accident, while Denike was driving north on Ann street. Seeing that a collision was inevitable, Mrs. Ponton applied the brakes, and the big car swerved around on the greasy pavement until it almost faced west. When swerving it struck the front of Denike's machine and shot it into a telephone pole, the impact snapping the thick pole off near the trunk. The Ponton car then careered into a nearby tree, and stalled.

How the drivers escaped serious injury is miraculous. After the accident, Denike was in the rear seat instead of being behind the wheel.

Gas tanks on both cars were stove in, Denike car's windshield smashed, and the left rear wheel was torn off.

GOOD RED BLOOD A REAL NERVE TONIC

Weak, Watery Blood the Source of All Nervousness.

"If people would attend to their blood, instead of worrying themselves ill," said an eminent nerve specialist, "we doctors would not see our consulting rooms crowded with nervous wrecks. More people suffer from worry than anything else."

The sort of thing the specialist spoke of is the nervous, rundown condition caused by overwork and the many anxieties of today. Sufferers find themselves tired, low-spirited and unable to keep their minds on anything. Any sudden noise hurts them like a blow. They are full of groundless fears, do not sleep well at night. Headaches and other nerve pains are part of the misery, and it all comes from starved nerves.

Doctoring the nerves with poisonous sedatives is a terrible mistake. The only real nerve tonic is a good supply of rich red blood. Therefore to relieve nervousness and run-down health Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be taken. These pills enrich the blood, which tones the nerves, improves the appetite, gives new strength and spirits, and make hitherto despondent people bright and cheerful. If you are at all "out of sorts" you should begin taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BRITAIN DISAPPOINTED

LONDON, Nov. 9 (Associated Press)—The results of state emigration, for which the government designed a scheme of assisted passage to the dominions, has been very disappointing, according to Lieutenent-Colonel Buckley, chairman of the Overseas Settlement Committee.

Up to September 30 a total of 31,000 government assisted emigrants had left Great Britain under the scheme, this number falling short of the total it was hoped to absorb by some 60,000. Of the 31,000 who availed themselves of the facilities of the scheme, 23,000 travelled to Australia, 4,500 to New Zealand, and 3,800 to Canada.

Back to Work in Four Days

If you are a sufferer from kidney or bladder trouble, read how this man was relieved:—

"I have used Gin Pills for bladder trouble and general kidney derangement. I suffered from an aching back which interfered with my work on the railroad. It was so bad that I had to give up my work for about two months. Then I started using Gin Pills for the Kidneys, which gave me relief in four days, so that I could go back to work. I know Gin Pills to be a wonderful remedy for kidney and bladder complaints, and can recommend them to any one who may be suffering as I did."

GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor:

Dear Sir—In a recent editorial you refer to large enrolment (2,500) attending night classes offered by Windsor-Walkerville Technical School, and to the extraordinary interest in education and the extension of such facilities in the border cities.

The Windsor Board of Education is largely responsible for the interest taken by all classes, in educational matters. The board outlined a progressive policy a few years ago, decided to enlarge existing public and high schools, build new public schools of latest type where necessary, and to establish a technical school, Walkerville joining in the latter project. By this programme they expected to take care of all children coming under the adolescent Act, giving to each group, the education desired, or necessary to happy useful life. As this meant the expenditure of an enormous amount of money, the co-operation of everybody was necessary. A wise publicity campaign made the people aware of the need of more and better school accommodation, and taught them what technical education would mean to the adolescents and adults.

The result of taking the people into the confidence of the board has been remarkable. All have pulled together, the trustees of Windsor and Walkerville, the home and school associations, the separate school boards, the manufacturers' association, and the trades and labor council, and the municipal council, all are satisfied to pay the cost, because all are being offered the type of education suited to their various needs. The large enrolment at the technical school, since September, 700 in day classes, 2,500 in evening classes, shows how quickly the opportunity of vocational training is grasped, when offered to a community. Yours truly,

KATE MORRIS.

The Treaty of Versailles entrusted an interallied commission known as the Reparation Commission with the care of fixing before May 1st 1921 the amount of German indebtedness. This debt not to include war expenses but to have in view a long list of damages of all kinds: Germany was to guarantee her debt to a certain extent. Bonds to the amount of a hundred million gold marks was the minimum fixed at the time the Treaty was signed. The first instalment was due May 1st 1921 at the latest.

Immediately after the Treaty was signed the Reparation Commission felt the unwillingness of Germany who opposed all her demands. As early as April 1920 the Allies publicly stated that Germany had not carried out her undertakings as regard destruction of war material or reduction of the army or coal deliveries reparations or cost of armies of occupation. The Allies met at Spa from the 4th to the 16th July 1920 the Reparation Commission having declared Germany in default and decided if by Nov. 15th 1920 the German deliveries have not reached 6,000,000 tons the Allies would proceed to the occupation of German territory either the region of the Ruhr or some other. Faced with this Germany carried out her undertakings to the 15th November after which she again began to resist and put herself in default. The Allies again met in Paris January 1921 still Germany evaded her obligation. Again the Allies met in London February and March 1921. Lloyd George spoke in a very forceful manner to Germany saying the Allies have only asked for reparations in respect to charges cast upon our respective countries by material damage to property by injuries inflicted upon the lives and homes of the inhabitants. "We have asked no more we can take no less." An incredible amount of this devastation was done deliberately with a view to destroy essential means of production. As stated by Gen. Von Bissing on June 19 1915 the object of this was to provide that Belgium's recovering industry should not prejudice German industry. "Therefore" said Lloyd George "unless reparation is made by Germany it means that the victors will pay the price of defeat and the vanquished will reap the fruits of victory. We are convinced that the German Government is not merely in default but deliberately in default. Therefore unless we hear by Monday that Germany is prepared to accept the Paris decisions or proposal equally satisfactory we shall from that date take the following course under the Treaty of Versailles:

"Occupy the towns of Duisbough Ruhort and Dusseldorf on the right bank of the Rhine."

In spite of this Germany still followed her shuffling policy. Thus on May 1st 1921 the time the Reparation Commission was bound under the Treaty to fix the amount of German indebtedness France had not yet received a farthing's damages.

The Commission devoted 23 sittings to a conscientious hearing of 32 experts chosen by the Reich at which the total reparation debt of Germany was fixed at 132 milliard gold marks valued as on May 1st 1921. Many allied conferences followed and a partial moratorium was granted March 21 1921.

To support her application Germany alleged confusion in her finances the fall of currency and her state of economic distress. But she had done nothing to put her house in order and had followed since the peace a policy of waste and extravagance. She kept down railway fares at a lower level than in any other country; she increased the number and salaries of her officials; she had been sparing in the collection of taxes and had endowed the great steel magnates and ship-owners with all sorts of privileges and exemptions; she has rebuilt a large merchant fleet that is even now competing in all American waters with both the British and French fleets; she has made canals, multiplied telephonic lines. In short, she had undertaken, regardless of cost, all sorts of work which France and the Allies now find themselves obliged to postpone. To meet those expenses Germany had resorted to a formidable inflation, thus to the end if 1922, making her financial economic and monetary position worse and worse. She left a free hand to her powerful industrial magnates who stubbornly persisted in its policy of unrestrained inflation which brought about the indefinite depreciation of the mark.

WORKS, OR THE WORK OF GOD

There are a whole lot of people substituting works for the work of God, it's easier, more conspicuous, requires no self-discipline, but rather gives pleasure to the flesh. God might require some inconspicuous thing of us if we sought to please Him and there would not be the pleasure of gathering at meetings to gossip over the affairs of the neighbors and cause strife when we are called to be peace-makers.

I'm afraid many a church worker or social worker will find out their fatal mistake perhaps when it is too late and that Christ will say to them in spite of their works, "Depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Many people think that because they are working for the church they are working for God, but there are women who neglect their first duty, their home, and ruin their health doing works to pay off the debts of a worldly and ambitious church. God don't ask for such work, nor approve of such a church.

Also, there are men who will go to every meeting when perhaps it would please God better if they spent a little time in their own home and made themselves interesting and helpful to their own wife and family.

I am jealous for the old home life. We cannot sing truthfully, "Home, Home, Sweet, Sweet Home; there's no place like Home, there's no place like Home." But rather many are crying in their hearts, "Oh, the boredom of home life! I must get away to have a good time some place, for here I can't stay."

There came men to Jesus and said, "What shall we do that we might work the works of God," and He waved aside that word 'works' or performances, and said: "This is the work of God that ye believe on Him Whom He hath sent." And truly this is the first and all important work, to lose faith in our own self-righteousness or belief that there is any gain in our own imperfect performances, and believe on Him, not merely in Him. Devils believe in Christ. But we must build our works on Him, the things He taught about Himself and our duty to God and to man for only such works will be accepted by God.

TRAVEL DEVELOPING

PARIS, Nov. 10 (Associated Press).—The French Athletic Federation has announced its programme of Olympic preparation and the selection of the team which will represent France at Colombes in 1924.

Drawn up in collaboration with the heads of all the principal athletic clubs of Paris and the provinces, the programme calls for the elimination trials to begin immediately after the close of the cross country season, March 29th.

The selection will operate automatically, the men being chosen from the winners of five great pre-Olympic meets to be held every two weeks beginning Easter Sunday.

All the Olympic possibilities, whether they hail from Paris or the provinces, will be given an opportunity to show their ability. One of these meets will be organized at Marseilles for the athletes of southern France, while Strasbourg will look after the boys from the eastern departments. The other three will take place in Paris.

The winners in the five meets, as well as those finishing second, will then gather in Paris for a final tryout and definite selection of the four men who will carry the tricolor of France in each of the events.

Clavering opened his weary eyes and glanced over the darkened auditorium, visualizing a mass of bored resentful disks; a few hopeful, perhaps, the greater number too educated in the theatre not to have recognized the heavy note of incompetence that had boomed like a muffled fog-horn since the rise of the curtain.

It was a typical first-night audience, assembled to welcome a favorite actress in a new play. All the Sophisticates (as Clavering had named them, abandoning "Intellectuals" and "Intelligentia" to the Parlor Socialists) were present; authors, playwrights, editors and young editors, columnists, dramatic critics, young publishers, the fashionable illustrators and cartoonists, a few actors, artists, sculptors, hostesses of the eminent, and a sprinkling of Greenwich Village to give a touch of old Bohemia to what was otherwise almost as brilliant and standardized as a Monday night at the opera. Twelve years ago, Clavering, impelled irresistibly from a dilapidated colonial mansion in Louisiana to the cerebrum of the Western World, had arrived in New York; and run the usual gamut of the high-powered man from reporter to special writer, although youth rose to eminence less rapidly then than now. Dramatic critic of his newspaper for three years (two years at the war) an envied, quoted and omniscient columnist since his return from France. Journalistically he could rise no higher, and none of the frequent distinguished parties given by the Sophisticates was complete without the long lounging body and saturnine countenance of Mr. Lee Clavering. As soon as he had set foot upon the ladder of prominence Mr. Clavering had realized the value of dramatizing himself, and although he was as active of body as of mind and of an amiable and genial disposition, as his friends sometimes angrily protested, his world, that world of increasing importance in New York knew him as a cynical, morose, mysterious creature, who, at a party, transferred himself from one woman's side to another's by sheer effort of will spurred by—boredom. The unmarried women had given him up as a confirmed bachelor, but a few still followed his dark face with longing eyes. (He sometimes wondered what role he would have adopted if he had been a blond.) As a matter of fact, he was intensely romantic, even after ten years of newspaper work in New York and two of war; and when his steel-blue half-closed eyes roved over a gathering at the moment of entrance it was with the evergreen hope of discovering the consummate woman.

There was no affectation in his idealistic fastidiousness. Nor, of late, in his general boredom. Not that he did not still like his work, or possibly pontificating every morning over his famous name to an admiring public, but he was tired of "the crowd" the same old faces, tired of the steady grind, of bad plays—he, who had such a passionate love of the drama—somewhat tired of himself. He would have liked to tramp the world for a year. But although he had money enough saved he dared not drop out of New York. One was forgotten over night, and fashions, especially since the war, changed so quickly and yet so subtly that he might be another year readjusting himself on his return. Or find himself supplanted by some man younger than himself whose cursed awdacity and dramatized youthfulness would have accustomed the facile public to some new brand of pap flavored with red pepper. The world was marching to the tune of youth, damn it (Mr. Clavering was beginning to feel elderly at thirty-four), but it was hard to shake out the entrenched. He had his public hypnotized. He could sell ten copies of a book where a reviewer could sell one. His word on a play was final—or almost. Personal mention of any of the Sophisticates added a cubit to reputation. Three mentions made them household words. Neglect caused agonies and visions of extinction. Disparagement was preferable. By publicity shall ye know them. Even public men with rhinocerine hides had been seen to shiver. Cause women courted him. Prize fighters on the dour morn after a triumphant night had howled between fury and tears as Mr. Lee Clavering (once crack reporter of the gentle art) wrote sadly of greater warriors. Lenin had mentioned him as an enemy of the new religion, who dealt not with the truth. Until he grew dull—no grinning skeleton as yet—his public, after hasty or solemn digestion of the news, would turn over to his column with a sigh of relief. But he must hang on, no doubt of that. Fatal to give the public even a hint that it might learn to do without him.

"She lowered the opera glasses and glanced over the rows of upturned faces . . . scrutinizing them casually."

He sighed and closed his eyes again. It was not unpleasant to feel himself a slave who had forged his own gilded chains. But he sighed again for his lost simplicities for his day-dreams under the magnolias when he had believed that if women of his class were not obliged to do their own housework they would all be young and beautiful and talk only of romance; when he had thought upon the intellectual woman and the woman who "did things" as an anomaly and a horror. Well the reality was more companionable he would say that for them. . . . Then he grinned as he recalled the days of his passionate socialism when he had taken pains like every socialist he had ever met to let it be understood that he had been born in the best society. Well so he had and he was glad of it even if the best society of his small southern town had little to live on but its vanished past. He never alluded to his distinguished ancestry now that he was eminent and comfortable and he looked back with uneasy scorn upon his former breaches of taste but he never quite forgot it. No Southerner ever does,

The play droned on to the end of the interminable first act. Talk. Talk. Talk. He'd go to sleep but would be sure to get a crick in his neck. Then he remembered a woman who had come down the aisle just as the lights were lowering and passed his seat. He had not seen her face but her graceful figure had attracted his attention and the peculiar shade of her hair; the color of warm ashes. There was no woman of his acquaintance with that rare shade of blonde hair.

He opened his eyes. She was sitting two seats ahead of him and the lights of the stage gave a faint halo to a small well-shaped head defined by the low coil of hair. She had a long throat apparently but although she had dropped her wrap over the back of the seat he had no more than a glimpse of a white neck and a suggestion of sloping shoulders. Rather rare those nowadays. They reminded him together with the haughty poise of the head of the family portraits in the old gallery at home. Being dark himself he admired fair women although since they had taken to bobbing their hair they looked as much alike as magazine covers. This woman wore her hair in no particular fashion. It was soft and abundant brushed back from her face and drawn merely over the tips of the ears. At least so he inferred. He had not seen even her profile as she passed. Profiles were out of date but in an old-fashioned corner of his soul he admired them and he was idly convinced that a woman with so perfectly shaped a head long and narrow but not too narrow must have a profile. Probably her full face would not be so attractive. Women with cendre hair generally had light brows and lashes and her eyes might be a washed-out blue. Or prominent. Or her mouth too small. He would bet on the profile however and instead of rushing out when that blessed curtain went down he would wait and look for it.

Then he closed his eyes again and forgot her until he was roused by the clapping of many hands. First-nighters always applaud no matter how perfunctorily. Noblesse oblige. But the difference between the applause of the bored but loyal and that of the enchanted and quickened is as the difference between a rising breeze and a hurricane.

The actors bowed en masse in threes in twos singly. The curtain descended the lights rose the audience heaved. Men hurried up the aisle and climbed over patient women. People began to visit. And then the woman two seats ahead of Clavering did a singular thing.

She rose slowly to her feet turned her back to the stage raised her opera glasses and leisurely surveyed the audience.

"I knew it!" Clavering's tongue clicked. "European. No American woman ever did that—unless to be sure she has lived too long abroad to remember our customs."

He gazed at her eagerly and felt a slight sensation of annoyance that the entire house was following his example. The opera glasses concealed her eyes but they rested upon the bridge of an indubitably straight nose. Her forehead was perhaps too high but it was full and the thick hair was brushed back from a sharp point. Her eyebrows thank Heaven were many shades darker than her hair. They were also narrow and glossy. Decidedly they received attention. Possibly they were plucked and darkened—life had made him skeptical of "points." However Clavering was ovr of unamended nature holding nature except in rare moments of inspiration a bungler of the first water.

In spite of its smooth white skin and rounded contours above an undamaged throat it was subtly not a young face. The mouth rather large although fresh and red (possibly they had lip sticks in Europe that approximated nature) had none of the girl's soft flexibility. It was full in the center and the red of the underlip was more than a visible line but it was straight at the corners ending in an almost abrupt sternness. Once she smiled but it was little more than an amused flicker; the mouth did not relax. The shape of the face bore out the promise of the head but deflected from its oval at the chin which was almost square and indented. The figure was very slight but as subtly mature as the face possibly because she held it uncompromisingly erect; apparently she had made no concession to the democratic absence of "carriage" the indifferent almost apologetic mien that had succeeded the limp curves of a few years ago.

She wore a dress of white jet made with the long lines of the present fashion—in dress she was evidently a stickler. The neck was cut in a low square showing the rise of the bust. Her own lines were long the arms and hands very slender in the long white gloves. Probably she was the only woman in the house who wore gloves. Life was freer since the war. She wore a triple string of pearls.

He waited eagerly until she should drop her glasses. . . . He heard two girls gasping and muttering behind him. . . . There was a titter across the house.

She lowered the opera glasses and glanced over the rows of upturned faces immediately before her scrutinizing them casually as if they were fish in an aquarium. She had dropped her lids slightly before her eyes came to rest on Clavering. He was leaning forward his eyes hard and focal doing his best to compel her notice. Her glance did linger on his for a moment before it moved on indifferently but in that brief interval he experienced a curious ripple along his nerves . . . almost a note of warning. . . . They were very dark gray eyes Greek in the curve of the lid and inconceivably wise cold disillusioned. She did not look a day over twenty-eight. There were no marks of dissipation on her face. But for its cold regularity she would have looked younger—with her eyes closed. The eyes seemed to gaze down out of an infinitely remote past.

Suddenly she seemed to sense the concentrated attention of the audience. She swept it with a hasty glance evidently appreciated the fact that she alone was standing and facing it colored slightly and sat down. But her repose was absolute. She made no little embarrassed gestures as another woman would have done. She did not even affect to read her program.

II

Clavering left his chair and wandered up the aisle. He felt none of his usual impatience for the beneficent cigarette. Was he hit? Hardly. Inquisitive certainly. But he had seen so many provocative shells. Vile trick of nature that—poverty-stricken unoriginal creature that she was.

He glanced over the rows of people as he passed. It was not the play that was animating them. The woman was a godsend.

His gaze paused abruptly on the face of Mr. Charles Dinwiddie. Clavering's grand-aunt had married Mr. Dinwiddie's father and the two men so far apart in years were more or less intimate; the older man's inexhaustible gossip of New York Society amused Clavering who in turn had initiated Mr. Dinwiddie into new and strange pleasures including literary parties and first-nights—ignored by the world of fashion.

All New York men of the old regime no matter what their individuality may have been twenty years earlier look so much alike as they approach sixty and more particularly after they have passed it, that they might be brothers in blood as in caste. Their moustaches and what little hair they have left turns the same shade of well-bred white. Their fine old Nordic faces are generally lean and flat of cheek their expression calm assured not always smug. They are impeccably groomed and erect. Stout they may be but seldom fat and if not always handsome they are polished distinguished aloof. They no longer wear side-whiskers and look younger than their fathers did at the same age.

Mr. Dinwiddie's countenance as a rule was as formal and politely expressionless as became his dignified status but tonight it was not. It was pallid. The rather prominent eyes were staring the mouth was relaxed. He was seated next the aisle and Clavering hastened toward him in alarm.

"Ill old chap!" he asked. "Better come out."

Mr. Dinwiddie focused his eyes then stumbling to his feet and caught Clavering by the arm. "Yes" he muttered. "Get me out of this and take me where I can get a drink. Seen a ghost."

Clavering guided him up the aisle then out of a side exit into an alley and produced a flask from his hip pocket. Mr. Dinwiddie without ceremony raised it to his lips and swallowed twice gasping a little. He had reached the age of the mild whiskey and soda. Then he stood erect and passed his hand over the shining curve of his head.

"Ever seen a ghost Lee?" he asked. "That woman was there wasn't she?"

"She was there all right." Clavering's face was no longer cynical and mysterious; it was alive with curiosity. "D'you know who she is?"

"Thirty-odd years ago any one of us old chaps would have told you she was Mary Ogden and like as not raised his hat. She was the beauty and the belle of her day. But she married a Hungarian diplomat Count Zattiany when she was twenty-four and deserted us. Never been in the country since. I never wanted to see her again. Too hard hit. But I caught a glimpse of her at the opera in Paris about ten years ago—faded! Always striking of course with that style but withered, changed, skinny where she had been slim her throat concealed by a dog collar a yard long—her expression sad and apathetic—the dethroned idol of men. God! Mary Ogden! I left the house."

"It is her daughter of course——"

"Never had a child—positive of it. Zattiany title went to a nephew who was killed in the war. . . . No . . . it must be . . . must be . . ." His eyes began to glitter. Clavering knew the symptom. His relative was about to impart interesting gossip.

"Well?" he asked impatiently.

"There were many stories about Mary Odgen—Mary Zittiany—always a notable figure in the capitals of Europe. Her husband was in the diplomatic service until he died—some years before he saw her inParis. She was far too clever—damnably clever Mary Ogden and had a reputation for it in European Society as well as for beauty—to get herself compromised. But there were stories—that must be it! She had a daughter and stowed her away somewhere. No two women could be as alike as that except mother and daughter—don't see it too often at that. Why, the very way she carries her head—her style . . . wonder where she kept her? That girl has been educated and has all the air of the best society. Must have got friends to adopt her. Gad! What a secret chapter. But why on earth does she let the girl run round loose?"

"Twenty-eight! Mary must have begun sooner than we heard. But—well, we never felt that we knew Mary—that was one of her charms. She kept us guessing, as you young fellows say, and she had the devil's own light in her eyes sometimes." His own orb lit up again. "Wonder if Mary is here? No doubt she's come over to get her property back—she never transferred her investments and of course it was alienated during the war. But not a soul has heard from her. I am sure of that. We were discussing her the other night at dinner and vondering if her fortune had been turned over. It was at Jane Oglethorpe's. Jane and a good many of the other time abroad—stayed o her castle in Hungary during the first years of her marriage; but they drifted apart as friends do. . . . She must be a wreck, poor thing. She ran a hospital during the war and was in Buas Pesth for some time after the revolution broke out. I hope she had the girl well hidden away."

"Perhaps she sent the girl over to look after her affairs."

"That's it. Beyond a doubt. And I'll find out. Trent is Mary's attorney and trustee. I'll make him open up."

"And you'll call on her?"

"Won't I? That is, I'll make Trent take me. I never want to look at poor Mary again, but I'd feel young—— Hello! I believe you're hit!" Mr. Dinwiddie, having solved his problems, was quite himself again and alert for one of the little dramas that savored his rather tasteless days. "I'd like that. I'll introduce you and give you my blessing. Wrong side of the blanket, thought."

"Don't care a hang."

"That's right. Who cares about anything these days? And you can only be young once." He sighed. "And if she's like her mother—only halfway like her inside—she'll be worth it."

"Is that a promise?"

"We'll shake on it. I'll see Trent in the morning. Dine with me at the club at eight?"

"Rather!"

III.

The critics left after the second act to damn the play at leisure. Clavering remained in his seat. Forty minutes later, while the performers were responding to faint calls and amiable friends were demanding the author of the doomed play, the lady of mystery (who, Clavering reflected cynically, was doubtless merely an unusual looking person with a commonplace history—most explanations after wild guesses were commonplace) left her seat and passed up the aisle. Irresistibly, Clavering followed her. As she stood for a moment under the glare of the electric lights at the entrance he observed her critically. She survived the test.

A small car drew up to the curb. She entered it, and he stood in the softly falling snow feeling somewhat of a fool. As he walked slowly to his rooms in Madison square he came definitely to the conclusion that it was merely his old reporter's instinct that burned so fiercely, even when he had prodded Dinwiddie and shaken hands in a glow of anticipation. Certainly there was no fire in his blood. His imagination had not toyed for a moment with the hope that here at last . . . . He did not feel in the least romantic. But what man, especially after Dinwiddie's revelations, wouldn't feel a bit curious, a bit excited? Thank Heaven he was young enough for that. He must know who she was. Certainly he would like to talk to her. She knew the world, no doubt of it—with those eyes! European women, given the opportunity, could cram more of life into ten years than an American woman into forty. She had had her experiences in spite of that madonna face; he'd bet on it. Well, he wasn't falling in love with a woman who had too heavily underscored in the book of life. But he enjoyed talking to European women of the world. New York had been overrun of late with Russian princesses and other ladies of title come over in the hope of milking the good old American cow, and when he could divert them from their grievances he found them clever, subtle and interesting. It was unlikely that this woman had a grievance of that sort or was looking for a chance to get at the generous but elusive udder. Her pearls might not be real, but her gown was superlatively expensive, her evening wrap of mauve velvet lined with ermine, and her little car perfectly turned out. He'd look like a fortune-hunter with his salary of fifteen thousand a year and a few thousands in bonds . . . not if he knew it! But find out who she was, know her, talk to her, learn what he felt was an interesting history—quite another matter.

IV.

The next evening when he arrived at the club he found Mr. Dinwiddie fuming.

"What do you think!" he exclaimed as he led his guest to his favorite table in the corner. "That old rascal bluffed me! Bluffed me. Said there was no relative of the Countess Zattiany in the country that he knew of. Looked blank as a post when I told him of the extraordinary resemblance of that girl to Mary Ogden. Said he never heard of her. Laughed at the idea of a sub-rosa daughter. Pretended to be angry at such an aspersion on Mary's fair name—was in love with her himself like the rest of us. But he was lying and he knew that I knew he was lying. What'll you have?"

"Anything. Go ahead. I know by the glitter of your eye that you haven't finished."

"You're right, I haven't." He gave his order and leaned forward. "I've done a little prospecting on my own account. Mary inherited the old Ogden house over on Murray Hill. I happen to know that the lease ran out last year and that it hasn't been rented since. Well, I walked past there today, and some one is living in it. Boarding off. Windows open. Fresh curtains. A servant receiving a parcel at the arena door. She's there, mark my words."

"Not a doubt of it. Why didn't you walk boldly up and send in your card."

"Hadn't the courage. Besides, that girl never heard of me. I hadn't the ghost of an excuse."

"Why not put Mrs. Oglethorpe on the scent? She could call. Women are always fertile in excuses."

"I can't see what pretext she could trump up. She'd be keen enough, all right, but she hardly could tell this haughty creature with the unmistakable stamp of the great world on her that she knows she must be the left-handed daughter of Mary Ogden. Even Jane hasn't assurance enough for that."

"She might assume that this young woman is a member of the Countess Zittiany's family—daughter of a cousin or something—those extraordinary resemblances do recur in families. . . . That indeed may be the explanation."

"Not a bit of it. That girl is Mary's daughter."

"I'm inclined to agree with you. But it is understood that you can't hurl it at her. Mrs. Oglethorpe, however, could invent a pretty pretense—saw her at the theatre—struck by her likeness of her old friend—discovered she was living in the family mansion—felt that she must seek her out——"

"Um. That's not quite the sort of thing the New York woman does, and you know it. True, the war has upset them as it has every one else. They are still restless. I have met two opera singers, two actresses, three of these juvenile editors and columnists at dinners and musical evenings during the last month alone. I believe they'd lionize Charley Chaplin if he'd let them, but I understand he's more exclusive than we are. God! What is New York Society coming to?"

"You like straying outside the sacred preserves yourself occasionally."

"I do. But I'm a man. We always did stray a bit. But when I think of the exclusiveness of only a few years ago! Why, New York Society was a club. The most exclusive club in the world. London Society was Bohemia compared to it. It's the democratic flu, that's what! Aristocracy's done for."

"I'm not so sure. The reaction may be devastating. But it's a sign of grace that they've at last discovered sufficient intelligence to be bored with their somewhat monotonous selves. And Mrs. Oglethorpe always does exactly as she pleases. Better drop her a hint."

"Well, I'll try it. But while Jane may be high-handed, she has certain rigid ideas when it comes to Society and who shall enter its gates. So far she's made no concessions. She and a few others still keep a tight rein. Their daughters, though! And granddaughters! Jane's girls are replicas of herself with every atom of her personality left out—but Jim's daughter, Janet, is her grandmother over again and plus modern bad manners, bad habits, and a defiance of every known convention. Wretched little flapper. Gad! What are we coming to!"

"Never mind Janet——"

"Why don't you suggest it to Jane? She thinks more of you than of anyone else. I doubt if you could ask her anything——"

"Not much. She'd twig at once. I've had several hints lately that she has her eye on somebody she wants me to marry. You must do it yourself—and you must!"

"Well, if she won't, Mrs. Jim might. The younger women would know this girl like a shot if they thought there was any fun in it—then drop her if she didn't measure up. I don't know that I'd care to place her in such a position."

"I've an idea the fair unknown can take care of herself. I don't see her picked up and dropped. Probably it would be the deuce and all to meet her. I think my plan is best. You can rouse any woman's curiosity, and no one has more than Mrs. Oglethorpe. That would be the wedge. You'd meet her and then you could give her a dinner and invite me."

"All right. I'll try it. Something must happen soon. My arteries won't stand the strain."

V.

"Madam is not at home, ma'am."

"Is she not? Then I'll wait for her."

Mrs. Oglethorpe swept by the butler and he had the sensation of chaff scattering before a strong wind. In truth Mrs. Oglethorpe was an impressive figure and quite two inches taller than himself. He could only stare at her in helpless awe, the more so as he had recognized her at once. Leadership might be extinct, but Mrs. Oglethorpe was still a power in New York Society with her terrible outspokenness her uncompromising standards her sardonic humor her great wealth and her eagle eye for subterfuge. How could a mere servant hope to oppose that formidable will when his betters trembled at her nod?

Mrs. Oglethorpe had made her usual careful toilet. Her full long dress of heavy-pile back velvet almost covered with a sable cape swept the floor; changing skirts meant nothing to her. Like all women of the old regime in New York she wore her hair dressed very high and it was surmounted by a small black hat covered with feathers ruthlessly exposing her large square face with its small snapping black eyes and prominent nose. A high-boned collar of net supported what was left of her throat. She wore no jewels as she clung to the rigorous law of her youth which had tabooed the vulgar display of anything but pearls in the daytime. As she was too old and yellow for pearls she compromised on jet earrings and necklace. She carried a cane.

ONE COUNTRY WHERE AUTO IS NOT KING

By HENRY WOOD.

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

GENEVA (By Mail to United Press). — Although the automobile may be king in the United States, its name comes much nearer being "mud" in Switzerland.

However, while up to the present time "King Auto" hasn't enjoyed anything in Switzerland that could be classed even by the wildest flights of imagination as "divine rights," nevertheless, the fact that he is gradually winning a place, if not in the affections, at least in the tolerance of the people, has just been demonstrated by a referendum vote in the Canton of Grisons.

Heretofore, automobiles, absolutely prohibited from ever entering the sovereign precincts of the canton, are now allowed to enter, provided they get out as quickly as possible and provided they don't leave the highway which conducts them in the straightest line possible to the Julier pass and the Italian frontier.

The down-trodden position which King Auto suffers in Switzerland is due to various reasons.

First of all, every Swiss canton has the sovereign right to make its own laws governing automobile traffic.

Second, the great bulk of the Swiss cantons are agricultural or mountainous, with a rural or peasant population.

Third, there are no tin lizzies in Switzerland within the financial reach of all.

Fourth, the average thrifty, industrious Swiss loves to walk about his exquisite highways, which are amongst the most beautiful and perfect in Europe, and he dislikes exceedingly to have his little excursions on foot mussed up by big honking plutocratic cars.

Fifth, by means of the referendum vote, the average Swiss citizen is able to regulate the whole show to suit himself.

ORMAND FRENCH A TAXI DRIVER

He Drives Up to the Curb, Throws Open His Doors and Shouts "Taxi."

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—"Taxi, lady?" When the suave, courteous young man shown above wheels up to the curb and throws open the door, New York maidens who know their Social Register hop in gladly.

Behind the rubber-tired glasses, they recognize the features of Francis Ormond French, eldest son of Amos Tuck French, and cousin of William H. Vanderbilt, who, though his funds at the moment may be distressingly low, is nevertheless of New York's bluest blue blood.

"Broke" was the terse explanation given by young Mr. French to newspapermen who inquired why the lily-handed scion of the wealthy French family should be piloting a taxicab.

"Broke," he added, "and tired of breakfasting on a dime. A cup of Java and a sinker," said Mr. French, adopting in quite democratic manner the phraseology of his fellow unfortunates, "is not my idea of an adequate morning meal. I needed ready cash. I can drive cars expertly—so here I am."

His first day out Mr. French acquired the price of a good many breakfasts of the "ham-and" variety, in tips, ranging in size from a dime to a dollar.

To one young woman, who suddenly became all fussed up when she discovered her chauffeur to be the rather well-known Mr. French, he administered a sharp rebuke.

"Up to Central Park, Mr. French," she requested sweetly.

"Don't call me Mister!" replied he, haughtily. "I'm not a bus driver—I'm only a poor taxi pilot."

Mr. French is the brother of Julia French, who was divorced some time ago from Jack Geraghty, the family's chauffeur, with whom she eloped. She has one son, whose name has been changed to French.

RUSSIA SHOWS CASH TO WORLD.

Diplomats Accredited to Russia Inspected Soviet's Wealth in State Bank at Moscow.

(By WILLIAM J. LOSH)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (United Press).—Imagine, if you can, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon calling the diplomatic corps here into the Treasury Department some quiet afternoon to count the vaults and assure themselves that the nation's paper money is backed up by the proper amount of metallic reserves—not just for the fun of it, but so that they will go back to their offices and cable their home governments that American money is all right.

It will hardly be done here yet, but a similar performance has just occurred at one of the world's great capitals—Moscow.

According to an account which has just reached here all the diplomatic representatives accredited to Russia, thirty in number, went to the State Bank of the Soviets at Moscow on Sept. 14 and performed such an inspection.

They first went into the rooms where the new Soviet bills, "chervonetz," were being numbered and signed. The "chervonetz" are another step in the progress of the Soviets back up the hill. This new unit of money, by virtue of the sincerity of the Soviets in maintaining the proper reserves behind the notes in circulation, sells at a premium above the pound sterling and on a parity with the dollar, according to the reports reaching here.

The diplomatic party, according to the accounts received in Washington, after being duly impressed by the efficient manner in which the preparation of the bills for circulation was made, passed on to the vaults. The account continued:

Full of Real Money

"The enormous iron-vaulted hall was filled almost man-high with cases, bags and ingots of precious metals. In the cases there were deposited Russian and foreign gold coins and bars. Every case bore an inscription showing what amount of chervontzi is guaranteed by its contents.

"One of the cases that had been selected by the diplomats was opened, and its contents checked up according to the description attached to the case. It contained gold bars. All the vaults occupy four floors and contain 98 million gold rubles serving as a guaranty.

"From the vaults the party went to the accounting and weighing room. One of the bags taken from the vault was opened and its contents (1,000 Austrian gold coins at 20 crowns each) were counted in a simplified way by placing them on a measured square section of the table.

"After that the weight of the bars t en from the selected case was ascertained on a very accurate scale.

"They returned to the main building where, in a room containing safes, they examined the foreign bank notes and gold supplies which had not yet been placed in the vaults.

"Two safes were selected here for examination. In the first there were English and American bank notes for the amount of 25,000,000 gold rubles, while in the other there were gold bars and bags containing Russian gold rubles of the old model.

"One bag containing two thousand 15-ruble "imperials" was opened and examined."

That's the chant in Louisiana these autumn days. And in a 'possum recipe contest conducted in New Orleans, a mere man won first prize! He is Edward J. Ford, a white man, at that! Here is his prize recipe:

"Dress 'possum in same manner as young pig for baking, parboiling with cayenne pepper until fairly tender. Stuff with bread-crumb dressing, including chopped onions, chopped chestnuts and a little sage. Place 'possum in baking pan with a few peeled sweet potatoes around it, and bake in hot oven, basting with natural gravy that drips from 'possum and dressing while it bakes."

Shoe repair parlors that keep a phonograph busy for the stockinged customers have to take off their hats to one here. The boss discovered some liked music and some didn't. So he installed a line of booths and telephone receivers. Each is connected with a central point where a phonograph grinds continuously.

If you like the music, listen. If you'd rather read a paper, sit back and read it undisturbed.

It took Governor Parker of Louisiana and Mayor McShane of New Orleans to discover that the best dancing floor in New Orleans will never be used for a dance. That floor is the waxed hardwood fourth floor of the Federal Reserve Bank Building. It is used as a directors' room. Governor and mayor, at the dedication exercises, gracefully tried out a few steps on the floor and pronounced it the best they had ever danced on.

Now ladies passing through New Orleans financial district gaze yearningly, but in vain, at the steel-barred windows.

Druggist Wrecked By Motors Forty Times.

PARIS, Nov. 10 (Associated Press)—There is a corner drugstore close to the terminus of the Northern Railroad which possesses an irresistible attraction for motor-driven vehicles. Placed just below the meeting point of two rapidly descending streets, it has been wrecked forty times in the last thirteen years. Three months ago a motorcyclist drove through its glass front and died on the spot. A few days later a motor lorry crashed through into the middle of the shop, without causing any fatalities. Recently a taxicab went right through the store, breaking the large red-colored globes that still mark a drugstore in France, overturning the counter, and doing about $1,500 worth of damage to the stock.

The proprietor of the store complains that these repeated mishaps are ruining his business, his shop is forever under repairs, and customers go elsewhere.

NOT ENOUGN FINANCES FOR RUSSIAN SCHOOLS

Trotsky Adopts Program That Renders It Impossible to Enforce Compulsory School Attendance.

By JOHN GRAUDENZ

MOSCOW (By Mail to United Press). —The Commissariate of Education is the Cinderella among the Russian Commissariates. Owing to the extreme shortage of funds, it will take ten years to bring Russia's school facilities up to requirements to meet the population needs. Until then the law making school attendance obligatory must remain uninforced in many parts of Russia.

Trotsky has declared: "Industry, especially those branches supplying the army and navy, must be furthered by all means for the present, even at the expense of education."

His policy is being adhered to.

Everyone Must Work

The general principles of the Communistic Party is that "everyone must work and be a useful member of the community." "Accordingly," says P. A. Bem, head of the main social educational department for children, "the new Russian school follows a definite tendency to prepare the child for life and work, at the same time supplying it with a sufficient amount of general knowledge.

"The child is being trained theoretically and practically from the very beginning. The three basic points of the educational program are, first, nature and mankind; second, labor, and third, piety."

The United School of Labor consists of first and second grade schools. The first grade has a program of four years. Attending of this school is obligatory. The second grade school has a program of five years which, in turn, is split into two parts, respectively, two and three years.

Practical Education

For the practical education every village school has its own piece of land for practical lessons in agriculture. The city schools boast of workshops of all kinds, such as metalworks, carpenter, bookbinding, shoe making, etc., which acquaint the children with industrial life.

Special care is taken with regard to the social development of the children. Every school has a branch of the "Communistic Youth" organization for the elder, and the organization of the "Young Pioneers" for the younger.

"While formerly the universities mainly concentrated on giving the students a wide scientific and philosophical knowledge, their programs have now been adapted to the practical side of life and half of the working hours of the students are devoted to practical training of every kind." A. Z. Kaminsky, head of the Main Professional Education, told the United Press.

Specialization is one of the main points in view and the program of a number of faculties are being radically revised and changed.

University Courses

The course at the universities is three and a half years. In some technical institutions this period is prolonged to four years.

The conditions of life of the students is still very bad. The Government looks after 67,000 stipendiates, but the amount given them is not sufficient to carry them through. Besides two and a half dollars, each student receives a monthly ration of 560 pounds of flour, six and a half pounds of gruel, fifteen pounds of meat or fish and two and a half pounds of butter.

Besides the higher schools of education there are 94 so-called workmen's faculties, the students of which are workmen and peasants, the former considerably larger in numbers, who have received no regular edication in middle class schools, but who somehow acquired sufficient knowledge to be able to attend these faculties and secure some education. The number of students of these faculties is 35,650.

INDIGESTION GAS ON STOMACH PAINS AFTER MEALS

Many people suffer terribly from gas and pains in the stomach after every meal, and are kept in constant misery.

For the past 44 years Burdock Blood Bitters has been bringing hope and joy to thousands suffering from various forms of stomach trouble, helping them to eat three square meals a day; helping them to eat anything they wish, without having to suffer for it afte..

Mr. Fred. Nielson, Moose Jaw, Sask., writes: "All last summer I was troubled with stomach trouble and indigestion, and also gas on the stomach. I could not eat anything except some light food and even then I would be bothered with pains after each meal. I could not work a whole day without being done out. I had tried everything: doctors, medicines and pills, until I read about Burdock Blood Bitters. I have taken four bottles and it has nearly, if not completely, restored me to health again."

MA AND THE A UTO.

Before we take an auto ride, Pa says
, to Ma: "My dear,
Now just remember I don't need suggestions from the rear.
If you will just sit still back there and hold in check your fright,
I'll take you where you want to go and get you back all right.
Remember that my hearing's good and also I'm not blind,
And I can drive this car without suggestions from behind.

Ma promises that she'll keep still, then off we gaily start,
But soon she notices ahead a peddler and his cart.
"You'd better toot your horn," says
she, to let him know we're near:
He might turn out," and Pa replies,
"Just shriek at him, my dear."
And then he adds: "Some day, some guy will make a lot of dough
By putting horns on tonneau seats for women folks to blow."

A little farther on Ma cries: "He's signalled for a turn."
And Pa says: "Did he?" in a tone that's not enough to burn.
"Oh, there's a boy on roller skates," cries Ma. "Now go slow
I'm sure he doesn't see our car."
And Pa says: "I dunno,
I think I don't need glasses yet, but really it may be
That I am blind and cannot see what's right in front of me."

If Pa should speed the car a bit some rigs to hurry past,
Ma whispers: "Do be careful now,
You're driving much too fast."
And all the time she's pointing out
the dangers of the street,
And keeps him posted on the roads
where trolley cars he'll meet,
Last night when we got safely home,
Pa sighed and said: "My dear,
I'm sure we all enjoyed the drive you gave us from the rear!"

DISREGARD CONTRACTS AS MARKS RISE AND FALL

BERLIN Nov. 10 (Associated Press). —Berlin is filled with stories some ludicrous and some otherwise of the trouble that results from doing the business of everyday life in a currency that fluctuates beyond the bounds of reason or imagination.

In a hat store recently a customer selected a hat for 900 000 000 marks; handed over 100 000 000 on account and said he would come back the next day and pay the balance. He did but in the meantime the mark had so fluctuated that the same hat was priced 600 000 000 marks. The dealer insisted the customer carry out his contract to purchase at 900 000,000, but the customer refused and surrendered his deposit of 100,000,000 marks. An hour later he came back and bought the same hat for 600,000,000 marks, making 200,000,000 by breaking his contract.

This transaction is typical of the change which has come over both German wholesale and retail business. Agreements are not respected in the face of radical changes in exchange, and there is a constant effort to find some stable basis upon which to operate. The new gold currency is to be offered as a remedy, but its value running alongside the depreciated paper currency, may or may not be stable.

TO OPEN FREE PORTS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 10 (Associated Press).—Two of the four free ports created last year by presidential decree will undoubtedly be opened for commerce early in November, it is learned in official quarters. They are Salina Cruz and Puerto Mexico. The other two, Guaymas and Rincon Antonio, will not be ready for some time. At Salina Cruz and Puerto Mexico the work of enclosing the restricted areas and port improvements is progressing rapidly. By means of these free ports the government hopes to give a great impetus to the development of the natural resources of the country, especially those of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec.

BIG SALMON PACK

CORDOVA, Alaska, Nov. 10 (Associated Press)—The total salmon pack in Alaska this year will exceed 5,000,000 cases, it was estimated by E. M. Ball, assistant fisheries agent for Southeastern Alaska. Only two seasons produced an output larger than that of 1923, he said. A total of 5,922,330 cases were packed in 1917 and 6,677,-569 in 1918.

This year's large pack, Mr. Ball said, was due to increased production by canneries in Southeastern Alaska. In the Bristol Bay district, Southwestern Alaska, the pack this year was approximately 1,200,000 cases, compared to 1,474,221 last year, and in Central Alaska the pack for 1923 was 914,000, compared with 1922's total of 1,032,-000.

White Walls Not Best for Hospitals

NEW YORK (United Press).—Hospital and eye experts favor doing away with the white walls, the rule in the average hospital. These experts say that the use of white for the walls and ceilings came about in an endeavor to not only make the premises sanitary, but also to make them look sanitary. Instead of white, experts favor tan or buff, with tan preferred.

The tendency, according to the experts, has been to place too strong an emphasis on a wide variety of bright colors in convalescent rooms, for colors have been found to influence recovery.

In Japan is a settlement where the wives support the husbands and children and are the acknowledged heads of the family. The men keep house.

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a 16-oz. bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make 16 ounces—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

NEW BULL RING

MADRID, Nov. 10 (Associated Press) —There seem to be little danger of bullfighting dying out as the national sport of Spain, for some years at least. Although the people of Madrid and other cities have become somewhat bored because of the poor quality of the contests recently and despite stronger competition from other sports, the construction of a new bull ring of much larger dimensions than the present one is proceeding.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

Correct posture, in sitting, rising, standing, walking, stooping or lying, is of great importance to health.

When your spine is bent and the body is "slumped" or in a stooping position, both the chest and the abdominal cavity are narrowed and restricted. The action of the vital organs, in these two cavities, is interfered with. If kept up more or less all day, the loss in blood circulation will result in harm that can hardly be measured.

In climbing stairs hold the trunk erect. Use your feet and legs to lift you upstairs and not have your body bending over and swaying from side to side. The same thing is true about posture in sitting or during sleep. An erect back posture, during study or office work, will conserve your nerve force to a marked extent.

Sleep with your trunk straight and legs extended. A bent trunk or spine during six or seven hours of sleep will cause a decided loss in nerve force and interfere with proper circulation. It will cause uneasy and restless sleep and the waking hours may mean a severe headache or loss of appetite for a nourishing breakfast.

One of the most common forms of lack of proper posture is the bent or drooping shoulders, both in youth and adults. In children, this may be aided by having the weight of the clothing properly adjusted.

In adults, as a result of bad posture, the lower back muscles become strained. The effort to relieve this strain on the sacroiliac joints, causes bent back and drooping shoulders. The strain on these same joints, through improper posture, causes backache in many cases.

The strain is not alone common to the back, but is also felt in the legs. Many cases of so-called sciatica and rheumatism may be traced to improper posture.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines | New York Stock Exchange and Curb Prices

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.— (United Press.)— To-day's brief session of the stock market witnessed the severest test which the stability of the current recovery had undergone since is inception ten days ago. Abandonment by the United States of its plan for a reparations parley and another outburst of price cutting in the gasoline trade, were rather disturbing developments to come upon a market which had just experienced a sudden reversal of form and had enjoyed sweeping advances all through the list in a comparatively short time.

But it quickly demonstrated that the technical condition of the speculative structure had not been impaired by the extensive character of the recent rise. Following some early setbacks among the industrial leaders strength developed in several sections of the list.

Sharp gains took place in United States industrial alcohol, computing tabulating recording, Famus Players, Schulte and various other specialties, while pronounced buoyancy characterized the action of the low priced rails.

Industrials had scored a further rally at the start of the second hour and aggressive operations for the rise had been resumed in the low-priced rails, Southern Railway, Rock Island, Frisco and Erie First Preferred were featured on this movement which is known to have the sponsorship of influential banking interests.

Copper shares, which for months have been the heaviest drag on the market outside of the Oil group, also displayed the effects of attention being given them by certain large interests which have an optimistic viewpoint regarding the future of the metal.

The close of the market saw higher prices, disturbing news developments over night were reflected in a genrally reactionary tone in the stock market at the start of the session to-day.

Washington's rejections on the proposed reparations inquiry and the sweeping cut in gasoline in the Chicago territory were events calculated to be unsettling under any circumstances.

But coming on the heels of the recent sharp advance in the general list, it was the occupation for comment that no greater recessions took place. Steel, Baldwin, Studebaker, Can, and in fact all the leaders of the current upswing suffered losses from their recent highs, but the decline in stocks of this class proceeded in an orderly style and a number of specialties continued to display strength.

Before the end of the first hour it was evident that the influence of the unfavorable news was waning and the trading fraternity was paying more attention to the optimistic character of the weekly mercantile reviews which reported a large daily turnover in general business and a substantial potential demand. A slight rallying tendency developed in Baldwin, Steel and other issues which bore the brunt of the early selling. Oils acted especially well in view of the sharp cut in mid-continent crude, followed by a two cent reduction in gasoline by Standard Oil of Indiana.

Wall Street is beginning to wonder whether or not there is not more back of the recent cuts in crude and gasoline than the much discussed over-production. On the basis of the present crude oil and gasoline prices it is well known thta there is little if any profit. There are a number of companies that are reporting deficits. Independents have been hard hit, evidently the banks have decided that new oil financing would meet with a cool reception as long as demoralization exists in the crude oil and gasoline market.

Closing prices: United States Steel 94 1-4, off 1-4; Texas Company 38 3-4, off 1-8; Pan American Petroleum 60 5-8, up 3-8; Baldwin 125, up 1-8; American Can 101, up 5-8; Gulf States Steel 80 1-2, up 3-8; Cosden 26 1-2, off 1-2; Famous Players 65 1-2, up 1 1-4; Producers and Refiners 18 1-4, off 1-4; Davison Chemical 57 5-8, up 2 1-8; Dupont Car 13 1-8, up 1-8; Stewart Warner 87 3-4, up 1-2; California Petroleum 21 3-4; Amn. ENGLAND FACING CURRENCY CRISIS LIKE IN GERMANY

Reported Future of British Isles Will Depend on Rate The Currency Printing Presses Run.

By MILTON BRONNER.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—On the rate of speed at which currency printing presses in England will be run may depend the future of the British Isles.

One of the greatest political, economic, financial and industrial battles of modern times is being waged on the gear ratio of the money mills.

Shall the printing press, which ruined the currencies of Bolshevik Russia and republican Germany, be used to print more paper money for Great Britain?

Britain is struggling to decide whether to pursue the present policy of deflation or reverse its position and start inflation—or merely stand on the tight wire, balancing as long as possible between the hazards of inflation or deflation.

Deflation means retiring much paper money now in circulation and which is largely legal tender, because the Government so decrees.

Inflation is the printing and subsequent circulation of more money.

There are two mighty causes at work which have made hitherto conservative British business men, bankers and editors squint at printing-press methods:

FIRST—the fact that countries whose currency is depreciated in value like France and Italy are at work and are undercutting Britain's trade.

SECOND—That the great industrial districts of Britain are either idle or working on half time, with one million men unemployed, with the prospects of more being idle this winter and with the immense burden of supporting these jobless people by the payment of Government doles.

Dollar Enters.

And the dollar comes into the thing, too. The champions of inflation say that the eye of the British Government has been fixed too much upon New York. The London masters of finance have been too much concerned in how the English pound sterling stood in relation to the American dollar. They say it is far more vital to know how it stands in relation to the French franc, the Italian lira and the Serbian dinar.

The argument runs—have a little inflation, cheapen the pound as compared with the dollar, and bring it nearer to the level of old customer countries; trade will once more flow to England, factories will once more be busy and the number of unemployed will disappear.

Since 1920 Great Britain has pursued a policy of deflation. She has been taking much paper money out of circulation. Now no less a man than Sir Eric Geddes, President of the powerful Federation of British Industries, in a speech at Glasgow, said that if the Government abandoned its policy of currency deflation trade would be at once stimulated.

"A policy of continuous deflation," said he, "means a rapid and continuous fall in prices, dislocation of business, an increase in the burden of the internal debt and continuous effort to adjust wages and costs to the constantly falling level of prices."

Urge Investigation.

Both he and the organization of which he is the head therefore urged that the Government should appoint a commission composed of bankers, manufacturers, traders and labor men to investigate whether a further policy of deflation was to be pursued. He urged a monetary policy that would keep the price level stable.

Reginald McKenna, formerly Chancellor of the Exchequer and at present head of one of the five big billion dollar banks of London, said in Belfast:

"When unemployment is greatly in excess of the normal, we should abandon unhesitatingly the deflationary policy which is a cause of unemployment. But I do not say we should pursue a policy of monetary inflation."

However, in another place he wrote as follows:

"A policy either of inflation or of deflation should never be adopted except as a corrective, and the degree of unemployment at any given time will always furnish a test of the right medicine to be applied."

The advocates of the printing press say that if this means anything, it means that there is a great deal of unemployment, more paper money should be issued.

In the meantime the battle lines are being formed. The Federation of British Industries lines up for moderate inflation. The Association of British Chambers of Commerce is bitterly against it. Papers like the London Express and the weekly Spectator oppose further deflation. Papers like the Daily Mail and the weekly Outlook bitterly assail any other policy. And the debaters in Parliament are still to be heard from.

Business Success

There is nothing that creates confidence in oneself like a bank account.

Many a bright young business man steps briskly along the street to his office each morning with a happy, confident appearance, which is the envy of others. These young men are confident because they have the guarantee of a steadily increasing savings bank balance behind them, giving protection to those at home. They are not disturbed by the daily problems of their business, which they invariably solve successfully.

These bright young men of initiative and ability are the hope of our tomorrow.

Many of them carry substantial savings accounts in The Bank of Toronto. We invite you to join them — Canada needs bright, thrifty, capable, business men. A friendly reception awaits you at any one of our Branches.

The Juniors will be started at 10.15 a.m. from a mark 300 yards beyond the five-mile post on the Lakefield road. The exact location is telephone post number 186 several miles beyond Nassau. The winners are expected to finish about 10.45 o'clock. The tape for both races will be immediately in front of the Y.M.C.A. door.

The seniors will break away at 10.30 from a point about half a mile north east of the Lawless Hotel at Lakefield. Both courses have been measured with a spedometer by Charlie Thorpe and Doug Loomis and are slightly longer than the old Examiner races prior to the war.

The seniors are expected home around 11.30 o'clock. Arrangements have been made with Chief Gimblett to rope off the finishing course, and Chief Newhall has promised a detachment of his force to regulate traffic and try to keep a clear avenue down to the finish line.

Note for Seniors.

They may motor up if they wish or go by train which leaves at 8.30 a.m. The Great War Veterans of Lakefield have placed their club rooms at the disposal of the runners who will find a warm room to dress in and cars to take them from the Vets' quarters to the starting place. RENAULT-WILLS FIGHT DROPPED

Canadian Prefers to Take His Time Before Meeting Negro.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—Prospects of a match between Jack Renault and Harry Wills in the near future at Madison Square Garden virtually disappeared today when Promoter Tex Rickard announced he had dropped negotiations for the present.

Rickard began efforts to land the match shortly after Renault's knock out victory over Floyd Johnson, seeking it as a charity affair to be held around Christmas time. The Canadian heavyweight, however, turned down Rickard's offer asking for more time before opposing the "brown panther," while Wills also displayed no eagerness for the match.

A contest between Renault and Billy Miske who knocked out Bill Brennan a few days ago at Omaha, now is in prospect.

PROPOSE ANOTHER IN MEMORIAM RACE

Give Zev New Chance If Negotiations Carry.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 9. — Prospects for a match race between In Memoriam, winner of the Latonia Championship last Saturday, and the Rancocas Stable's Zev, runner-up in that race, to be run at Churchill Downs Friday or Saturday of next week, became promising this afternoon following an exchange of telegrams between S. C. Hildreth and Colonel M. J. Winn.

In a telegram to Colonel Winn, General Manager of the Kentucky Jockey Club Mr. Hildreth, trainer for the Rancocas Stable expressed a willingness to race the conqueror of Papyrus and winner of the Kentucky Derby against In Memoriam over a route of one mile or more for a side bet of $25,000, or "as high as Mr. Wiedemann, (owner of In Memoriam), wishes."

Carl Wiedemann Newport sportsman and owner of In Memoriam, is quoted as having said in a telephone message to Louisville newspapers that he was unwilling to make a definite statement relative to the proposed race until after he came to Louisville Saturday and ascertained the condition of In Memoriam and the tracks. Mr. Wiedmann is quoted as having said however, that if conditions could be agreed upon he would be glad to send his horse against the Rancocas Stable's crack.

Boxer Loses Coin For Unfavorable Showing.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 9—A charitable organization to-day was given $1,809.70, representing the share of Bill Brennan, New York, prizefighter for his match here Wednesday night with Billy Miske of St. Paul. The money presented by the local American Legion Post, was not given to Brennan on the ground that he made an unfavorable showing. He was knocked out in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-round bout and subsequently was suspended temporarily from boxing in Nebraska by the State Boxing Commission, pending an investigation.

MASTER BATSMAN.

It is a question if baseball will ever produce a better or more consistent batsman than Ty Cobb. A perusal of his record shows that from 1909 until 1919, covering a period of 11 consecutive years, he batted .368 or better. Some feat.

SENATORS PLAY IN TOURNAMENT

Compete in the Winnipeg Tournament—Champion Team Goes West.

OTTAWA, Nov. 9. — Manager Tommy Gorman of the Ottawa Hockey Club confirmed to-night the press despatches from the west, stating that the world's champion Senators would play a series of games at Winnipeg, competing in the big 4-cornered tournament against Calgary, Edmonton and Regina. The Ottawas have completed arrangements with Manager Holmes of the Winnipeg Amphitheatre and will leave for the west next Thursday night arriving at Winnipeg Saturday evening in time to witness the first match between Calgary and Edmonton. They play Regina on the 19th and 24th of November and if successful against Regina they will then face in the final the winner of the Edmonton- Calgary battles.

Mr. Gorman stated that the Ottawas would take to Winnipeg the identical squad that won the championship at Vancouver last March plus Jack Darragh who was unable to go to the coast for the world's series. Eddie Gerard has been under a doctor's care owing to throat trouble but he will be all right in time to accompany the Stanley Cup holders west. Immediately after the matches at Winnipeg, the Ottawas will return to play two games against Edmonton in Ottawa, opening the new auditorium on the night of Saturday, December 1. Manager Gorman and ten players will be in the Ottawa party.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, November 10 (Canadian Press). — Government estimates touching the available supply of corn had a depressing effect yesterday on the price of wheat as well as of corn.

Wheat closed weak, 3-4c to 1 1-8c net lower, December $1.05 1-8 to $1.05 1-4, and May $1.10 1-4 to $1.10 3-8.

Corn finished 1c to 1 7-8c down; oats unchanged to 3-8c to 1-2c off, and provisions varying from 5c decline to 30c advance.

With 5,000,000 bushels more of corn in sight than at this time last year, a big rush to sell took place as soon as the market opened.

Wheat dealings were of relatively small proportions, and the weakness of corn was so pronounced that any immediate upturn of values was out of the question, even if warlike news from Germany could have been regarded as bullish. As a matter of fact, the details of military strife and of apparent failure to bring about a reparations conference generally were viewed as disconcerting to friends of higher prices for wheat.

Breaks in foreign exchange rates tended to make export business in wheat still more difficult than has been the rule of late, and a fresh sinking spell in the wheat market here just before the close was ascribed partly to this circumstance.

Buying power at the day's end was of insufficient volume to absorb the offerings, the bulk of which came chiefly from holders who had purchased on yesterday's declines.

Corn tumbled rapidly at the opening, but commission houses switched to the buying side and substantial rallies ensued. However, the demand from purchasers failed to hold out, and the final quotations were at about the day's lowest level, notwithstanding that receipts were expected to continue small for a considerable time.

Oats eased down with corn and wheat.

Provisions were governed mainly by the action of the hog market.

Lard touched new high points for the season.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, November 10 (Canadian Press). — Cattle, receipts 3,000; most killing classes generally steady; one load good handyweight steers, $10.50; best yearlings, $9.85; bulk canners, $2.50 to $2.65; vealers were steady; bulk to packers, $9.00 to $9.25; stockers and feeders slow to steady; bulk, $5.50 to $7.00.

Hogs, receipts 31,000; closed extremely dull; bulk good and choice, 200 to 325 pound butchers, $7.30 to $7.60; top, $7.65.

Sheep, receipts 7,000; fat lambs, strong to around 15c higher; sheep strong; bulk fat lambs, $12.75 to $13.00; most good and choice feeding lambs, $12.75 to $12.90.

LORD MAYOR OF LONDON REQUIRES LOTS OF CASH

(By Milton Bronner.)

LONDON, November 6. — Beginning on 1st November, and continuing for one year, Sir Louis A. Newton will every month dig down into his jeans, draw forth a bunch of kale, and proceed to spend it with a lavish hand. Which, translated into Londonese, means that the aldermen of the city of London have just elected him Lord Mayor.

On 9th November alone he will spend about $15,000 to give himself a nice Lord Mayor's pageant down Fleet Street to the Law Courts and back, and to spread a rich feast for some 700 invited guests, including some of the greatest in the land. All this to celebrate his formal induction into office.

Thereafter the calls upon his purse will be endless. Which is why the Lord Mayor is always a rich man.

To the uninitiated it must be explained that the gigantic Metropolis is divided into various boroughs, each of which has its own Government. Thus there is a Mayor of Holborn, of Westminster, of Shoreditch, etc.

But the most important of all the London boroughs is the City of London. When you say City here you always mean the square mile of territory which comprises the oldest and most important part of the Metropolis, and includes the great banks and financial institutions and many of the famous buildings. It alone has a Lord Mayor. The others are a mere garden variety of Mayors.

Here is how a Lord Mayor is made.

The people vote for aldermen who have a life job. From their own body in rotation in order of seniority they choose a Lord Mayor each year. Each alderman, if he lives long enough, is sure to be Lord Mayor some day.

The City is generous enough with its chief executive. He presides over the Councilmen and aldermen, and acts as a Police Magistrate. For this he gets £10,000, or about $50,000 a year. He is also given Mansion House, all furnished, as his official residence.

But all this is a mere drop in the bucket. Out of his own pocket the Lord Mayor usually spends $100,000, or more. One recent Lord Mayor spent $300,000.

To begin with, he must give four great banquets, which are fixed events. One of these is his own banquet on the day he is sworn into office. Then there is a banquet for the bishops and chhrch dignitaries, another for the judges, and another for the bankers, at which the Chancellor of the Exchequer usually makes one of the most important speeches of the year.

If for any reason the King wants to come down into the City, he has to get formal permission from the Lord Mayor. Such visits are usually made in state, and often there is a generous banquet, all of which eats up the Lord Mayor's money.

Finally the Lord Mayor is supposed to head all big charities. For instance, when the Japanese earthquake news reached London the present Lord Mayor at once called upon the citizens to contribute to a relief fund. And, of course, the Lord Mayor led the list with a substantial donation.

PRINCE OF WALES ACCEPTED HOUSE

From Col. E. W. Leonard And His Wife of St. Catharines, Ont.

LONDON, Nov. 10.— (Canadian Press Cable.)—The Prince of Wales to-day accepted Chatham house, St. James' Square, the gift of Col. R. W. Leonard and his wife, St. Catharines, Ont., to the British Institute of International Affairs for the Institute's headquarters. His Royal Highness accepted the premises on behalf of the empire. He said they owed it to Chatham, who had lived in this house, that the British flag flew in Canada to-day.

The Prince announced that an Englishman, Cecil Power, had lost no time in following up the lead of the Canadians, Col. and Mrs. Leonard, by promising to contribute £10,000 for the erection of a hall behind Chatham House as a meeting place for the institute. It gave him peculiar pleasure, he said, to accept at Canadian hands this generous gift to the whole empire for a great imperial purpose.

Chatham House, No. 10 St. James' Square, which in the course of time was the residence of W. E. Gladstone, as well as the statesman Chatham and also Lord Derby, has been given by Col. and Mrs. Leonard for use by the institute as a school of foreign affairs. The objects of the institute are research discussion and the issuance of publications which will enable public men throughout the empire to follow the course of foreign affairs and by study and mutual instruction to equip themselves as guides of public opinion. The institute is debarred by its constitution from propaganda and it can neither formulate nor advocate policies.

Lord Carzon, Earl Balfour, Viscount Grey of Falloden, Lord Robert Cecil, Lloyd George and J. R. Clynes, M.P., the labor leader, are at the head of the institute. The Prince of Wales is visitor of the institute, he having accepted this office a short time ago.

Benefit Soccer Game Monday

Junior Teams Play A Deciding Tussel.

An ideal way to spend Thanksgiving Day afternoon is to attend the benefit soccer game between De Laval, Junior League champions, and Canadian Packing Co., Mayor Taylor challenge cup winners, on behalf of William Williams, the local G.W.V.A. football player, who unfortunately broke his leg in a senior League game at Nicholls Oval well over six months ago. No doubt a good number of fans will turn out for the benefit, also to witness an excellent brand of soccer put up by the Junior squad.

Throughout the Junior League games, the De Laval have held the superiority during the last two seasons, and eliminated the ever-improving C.P.C. by the odd goal for League championship. But the C.P.C. broke even again with them in the Taylor cup final. The players of each team are anticipating a fast and clean game, which will be emblematic of a championship.

Kick-off at 3 o'clock at King Edward Park. Referee, J. L. Howarth.

CORINNE GRIFFITH AND CONWAY TEARLE AT THE CAPITOL THEATRE

In "The Common Law" the screen version of the novel by the well known author, R. W. Chambers, which opens a three days' engagement at the Capitol Theatre on Monday an old problem is presented in a new way—the problem which often occurs in the life of wealthy young men of whether to choose love or fortune. Beautiful Corinne Griffith in the role of Valerie West, an artist's model, and Conway Tearle, as her employer, are deeply in love with each other but Conway's screen parents strenuously object to the marriage and are planning to force their son to marry a cold-blooded society girl whom he does not love and in this way enable him to climb the social ladder. The father threatens to cut his son off without a cent if the latter persists in carrying out his plans to marry his model. In the usual "cut and dried" type of fiction or drama the hero would unhesitatingly renounce all claims to the paternal fortune and choose the course of true love. But it is just here that "The Common Law" displays originality and is more true to life than its predecessors of similar nature, for the hero in this case listens to the paternal admonitions and turns his back upon Mr. Cupid. Nor does he alter his decision to the very end of the story. "Terrible!—Unmanly—Conduct unbecoming a hero," you ejaculate. Quite true, but it is in keeping with the character, for the artist is not regenerated by love until the very end of the last reel, and then his parents withdraw their opposition to the match and all ends as it should. This is only one of the points wherein "The Common Law" differs from previous stories built upon this theme. The popular Elliott Dexter also has a prominent role in the cast, that of Querida, another artist.

CAPITOL PATRONS ASKED TO NAME THEIR FAVORITE STAR

The Capitol Theatre has an open date for three days, November 26, 27 and 28 and Manager J. C. Kennedy is asking Capitol patrons to select the star they wish to see those three days by holding a Popular Star Contest. As patrons enter the theatre they will be handed a ballot upon which they are requested to write down the name of their favorits movie star. A ballot box will be placed in the foyer of the theatre in which all ballots must be placed. The star with the most votes will be shown his or her latest picture at the Capitol theatre. The contest will start Monday and will continue for ten days, closing Wednesday night, November 23rd.

The idea of having patrons select the star they wish to see is decidedly a new and novel idea and has never been tried before but it is confidently expected that Capitol patrons will take a lively interest in the voting.

The wide connections and associate companies of Famous Players Canadian Corporation makes it possible for them to secure for Peterboro the latest picture of any star regardless of who the winner may be.

AT THE ROYAL.

SPECIAL AT ROYAL FOR HOLIDAY. JACK LONDON'S "ABYSMAL BRUTE" WITH REG'D DENNY.

Page by page in every way it follows the book to the letter.

This Coueistic expression aptly describes the fidelity with which Hobart Henley followed the printed version of Jack London's famous story, "The Abysmal Brute," which opens at the Royal Theatre on Monday with Reginald Denny as the star.

Transcribing the book to the screen exactly as it was set forth in the great author's work, this celluloid transplantation of one of the most appealing stories ever conceived, proves far more entrancing on the screen than it did in binding. The broad scope of the camera enhances the story with scenic value, plus a personality registered on the screen by Denny, far in excess of the written expression of even such a great author as Jack London.

The story concerns a young prize fighter who finally succumbs to the heart punches of Cupid, and becomes engaged to a social leader without divulging his life's "vocation." How she spurns him when she discovers that he is a "box-fighter," only to have him whisk her away in cave-man fashion and lead her to the altar, forms a theme that for genuine heart interest, comedy, pathos and drama, will undoubtedly stand as a cinama monument.

Denny is perfectly at home in the title role, through his former pugilistic endeavors in real life, and gives a portrayal that will win him, both feminine and masculine admirers, and firmly establish him as a matinee idol and box office attraction extraordinary. Mabel Julienne Scott is equally as convincing in the leading femine role, while others who do much toward making the picture the instant hit that it is, are David Torrence, Buddy Messenger, Hayden Stevenson, Charles K. French, Craufurd Kent and many other well known players.

AT THE REGENT.

"SPORTING LIFE" IS BASED ON FAMOUS OLD ENGLISH PLAY.

Maurice Tourneur's Photoplay Exciting and Filled With Thrills.

Showing a phase of English life that under the stress of the war may never be seen again, "Sporting Life," Maurice Tourneur's splendid picturization of the famous Drury Lane melodrama which scored so heavily two decades or more ago, is one of the greatest motion picture spectacles produced in this country in many years. "Sporting Life" will be shown at the Regent Theatre Monday.

The scenario by Winthrop Kelley departs from the original play mainly in the elaboration of detail. The general outline is not disturbed, the plot concerning itself with Lord Woodstock's winning of the Derby with his mare Lady Love, and his stepping into the ring to take the place of an "unknown" pugilist whom he had backed heavily and who had been drugged through the agency of Olive de Carteret, the vamp, at the instigation of her husband, who is Lord Woodstock's deadly enemy. The story has to do with the attempt of de Carteret to ruin Lord Woodstock.

The romantic element is provided by the Earl, who is in love with the daughter of his chief trainer. Her sister loves Joe Lee, a prize fighter, not wisely but too well, and when she attempts suicide, her father on learning the truth, becomes the willing tool of Mrs. de Carteret in doping Lee just as he is to step into the ring. Lord Woodstock takes his place and not only wins the fight but thousands of pounds as well.

The production is a notable one from every angle, while the support is exceptionally good. The principals in the cast are Ralph Graves, Warner Richmond, Charles Craig, Constance and Fair Binney and Willette Kershaw.

HUMOROUS SKIT BY LADIES' AID

Scenes In a Union Station Put on by Trinity Methodist Church

"Scenes in a Union Station" was the title of a very bright little skit, put on in Reid street hall last evening by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity Methodist Church, under the leadership of Mrs. W. H. Lytle and Mrs. M. Lyle and attended by a packed house which thoroughly enjoyed the humour of the piece and the excellent acting of the cast, which was composed of men and women and junior members of the church.
The scene was laid in a country station and the majority of the performers all in costume wore old-fashioned outfits. Various habitues of the station and transient travellers entertained the audience with a jolly evening of fun.
Among those taking part were:—Mrs. W. H. Lytle as Mrs. Brown and her son Johnny, played by HarveyKing; Mr. Ray Brown as the ticket agent; Mrs. R. Bugg as Aunt Miranda Mrs. R. A. Watterworth as Mrs. Hummer in an excellent characterization; S. J. Ridyard as Uncle Joe; Wilfred Derry as a very comical dude; the Misses Adie, Foster and Carter, as three flappers; Mrs. Ray Brown as Mrs. Larkin as a very loquacious traveller, waiting for her train; Jimmy Ridyard as a bootblack; Margaret Wolstenholm as Aunt Miranda's daughter; Mr. Bateman as Mr. Jones left with a crying baby to mind Miss Corneil as the mother of the crying baby; Mrs. Morley Lyle and Mr. D. Fleming as Josiah Potter and his wife, Mary, returning from a city visit; Mr. Fred Preston as Mr. Armstrong, with his five small children, played by Irene Wright, Mabel Neville, Jack Wolstenholm Billy Widdiss and a very cleverly simulated baby; and Mrs. George King and Mr. Oswald Smith as Mr. and Mrs. Martindale, the lady in this case being a very trying person, wht demanded a great deal of attention and food.
A bride and bridegroom, in transit, were enacted by Miss Flossie Derry and Mr. Ham attended by Messrs Rehill and Ferguson. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Preston were a pair of elopers, with Mrs. J. Wolstenholm and M. D. Fleming as their parents and colored people in attendance at the station were the Misses Sargent and Wolstenholm, and Messrs Jackson and Cranfield.
A little Italian violinist was enacted by Roy Rome, who played several violin selections during the portrayal of the role, with his sister Margaret Rome, as a small attendant. Miss Alberta Rehill presided at the piano, and a pretty vocal duett was rendered by Mrs. E. Kitney and Mrs. H. Doig.

SOCCER
LONDON, Nov. 10.— (Canadian Press Cable.)—Soccer games in the First Division of the English League to-day are interesting for the fact that clubs which played each other last Saturday will again meet to-day. Cardiff City will give W. Bromwich which an opportunity to avenge the 3 to 0 defeat which the Welshmen scored against them in the former contest .League leaders, after yielding their pride of place to Huddersfield for the space of one week, resumed their position by virtue of the victory.

Mr. and Mrs. John Coughlin, Rubidge Street, have just returned from Toronto, where Mr. Coughlin attended the funeral of his nephew, Jack Coughlin.
Miss Ethel Smithson, of Fenelon Falls, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. Redpath, 144 Murray Street.

The Armistice Day tea held yesterday afternoon in the Officers' quarters at the Armouries, by the 57th Regimental Chapter of the I.O.D.E. with the three other local chapters co-operating, was very successful. There was a large crowd of ladies in attendance during the afternoon, and a handsome sum was realized for the work of the War Memorial Fund of the I.O.D.E. in Canada, which already supports 36 students in Canadian universities, and five students taking post-graduate work overseas.
The big rooms of the Officers' Quarters were very attractive. The junior chapter of the I.O.D.E. in the city, the Major Bennett organization, made its debut yesterday, with a new set of officers for the younger girls who now comprise the personnel of this chapter, and conducted a dainty little booth for the sale of home-made candy, offered in little poppy holders .Miss Bertha Hill is regent of the Major Bennett chapter.
The guests were received by officers of the three major chapters of the city, Mrs. C. S. Stapleton representing, as first vice regent, the 57th Regimental Chapter, in the absence of its regent, Mrs. E. B. Clegg, the Otonabee chapter being represented by Mrs. H. E. Stenson, the Peter Robinson chapter by Mrs. F. C. Weber. Mrs. A. Robinson and Mrs. J. Gemmell assisted at the door.
In the tea room, where the pretty table was centred in brilliant fashion by a large silver basket of huge scarlet poppies, and arranged with red candles in silver candelabra, Mrs. D. Walker, Mrs. Homer Meyers and Miss M. English had charge. Tea was poured by Mrs. A. Stevenson and Mrs. R. R. Hall, assisted by members of the three chapters; the Misses Sara Robinson, Maude Rush and Alberta Meyers representing the 57th Regimental, Mrs. A. Weddell and Mrs. R. Burns the Otonabee, and the Misses Helen Hewson and Maida Connor the Peter Robinson Chapter. Mrs. Jno. Holmes was convenor of refreshments.
A very enjoyable musical programme was in charge of Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, and included instrumetnal selections by Mrs. F. Hills, Miss Olga Fowler and Miss Lois Garrett, a violin number by Mrs. P. Hooper, accompanied by Mrs. W. A. Logan, and vocal solos by the Misses Edna Borbridge, "The Barley Sheaves," and Miss Audrey Huycke, "The Poppies," for which Miss Olga Fowler acted as accompanist.
Miss Meta Meredith is in Toronto for the week end and will attend the Varsity-McGill Rugby game.
Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch of the Clinic staff left to-day for a fortnight in Rochester, Minn. While there he will take up at the Mayo Clinic Post Graduate work in diseases of the heart and nervous system. He is accompanied by Mrs. McCulloch.
A very pleasant afternoon tea, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Andrew's Church, was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. M. Waddell. Mrs. Waddell, with Mrs. F. L. Robinson, president of the society, received the guests in the drawing-room, where assistants were Mrs. C. McClelland, Mrs. G. W. Gilman and Mrs. A. Frost. The pretty tea-table, charmingly arranged with pink roses and pink tulle, was presided over by Mrs. W. D. Wilgar and Mrs. B. L. Barns, assisted by Mesdames Foster, Henderson, Weir, Breckenridge and Jamieson.

Annual Event At The Local Y.W.C.A.

The swimming pool at the Y.W.C.A. was packed last evening with the crowd of people who assembled to view the swimming exhibition, which has become so popular an annual event at the Association, and which last night surpassed in attendance and interest any previous event of its kind.
The races and competitions proved exceptionally interesting, being keenly contested and the winners received much applause from an enthusiastic crowd.
The silver cup donated by Miss E. Morrow to the winner of the greatest number of points in the various contests was captured by Miss Marguerite Mason, with 21 points.
Other contestants were as follow: Mary Dunlop, 20 points; Dr. Phyllis Young, 15; Matilda Dunlop, 11; E. Armstrong, 11; W. Davidson, 7; V. Ash, 6; B. Foster, 6; M. Wood 5; G. Foster, 5; D. Tyrer, 5; M. McCullough, 5; B. Edmondson, 5; Mrs. F. D. Craig, 4.
The relay race was won by the team led by Dr. Phyllis Young, which included Marguerite Mason, Ruth Sutton, B. Edmondson, M. McCullough, Mrs. F. D. Craig, M. Dunlop, E. Armstrong, I. Terrace, D. Tyrer, G. Ash V. Davidson, B. Foster, G. Foster, M. Wood, and M. Dunlop.
The umbrella race was won by Marguerite Mason, in a final effort, the three heats going respectively to Barbara Foster, Evelyn Armstrong, and Marguerite Mason
Miss Mason also won the open race, against Arleigh McKone and Matilda Dunlop
Miss Mason Dunlop captured the award for swimming under water, against Mrs F D Craig and Gertrude Comstock.
The candle race went to Violet Davidson, awards for style to Dr. Phyllis Young, with Mrs. F. D. Craig and Mary Dunlop competing, and Marguerite Mason was first in her back stroke with arms, against Mary Dunlop and Mary Menzies.
The balloon race was won by Mary Dunlop.
Judges for the various events were Miss C. F. Littlefield and Miss Olive Bettle of Toronto
Miss Bettle also conducted an examination for the silver award of merit, competed for by Miss Grace Allen, who successfully passed the tests, in a manner pleasing to both judges.
Two tiny tots, Betty Manning and Marguerite Dunlop, passed an elementary test in a manner that brought much applause from the audience. They exhibited great pluck in bringing up a heavy object from the bottom of the pool, and generally conducted themselves in a manner that reflected great credit on their own hard work and the careful training of their instructress, Miss Littlefield.
During the afternoon, Mary and Matilda Dunlop both passed tests which entitle them to bronze medallions, and did good work in last evening's programme after an afternoon of exacting work.
A feature of last night's entertainment was a well-staged mock rescue by seven-year-old Anna Edmondson, who jumped from the high balcony into the pool to rescue Mrs. F. D. Craig, acting as a drowning person. The small girl showed great skill in her exhibition.
The interest and amusement of the audience was aroused throughout the evening by the different stunts performed by the smaller contestants, in trying to perform things they had not attempted before.

Presentation of Prizes.
The presentation of prizes, made by Mrs James Wood, followed the programme, those receiving awards being:
Marguerite Mason (silver cup) and umbrella race; Matilda Dunlop, open race; Mary Dunlop, under water; Violet Davidson, candle race; Dr. Phyllis Young and Mrs. F. D. Craig, style ;Ina Terrace, back stroke with arms; Evelyn Armstrong, balloon race and diving; Dr. Young and Mary Dunlop.
At the conclusion of the programme, the pupils of Miss C. L. Littlefield presented her with a handsome silk parasol.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.
Those who believe Satan's lie — ("thou shall not surely die")—must have a hazy and indefinite idea of the resurrection. Jesus having paid the "death" penalty for sin, mankind must, as a matter of course, be released from death, hence the necessity of the resurrection. As Jesus gave Himself a ransom for all, all shall be resurrected. Paul in writing to Timothy mentions, "who is the Saviour of all mankind, especially of them that believe." 1 Tim. 4: 10. So we see there is a general and a special salvation. Those who have the special salvation are (in the present life) heirs of eternal life, whose hearts have been purified and their lives made right. Only the truly righteous shall obtain eternal life. God has so arranged things that man in a state of disobedience cannot live for ever. Gen. 3, 22, 23, 24.—M. T. Butcher. 1d112 5494

CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES SUPPORTED POINCARE IN REPARATIONS PLANS

Expert Committee to Study German Resources is New Plan of French Premier -- Majority of 200 Supports Policy.

SEARCH FOR CAPITAL

PARIS, Nov. 13.— (By Webb Miller, United Press Staff Correspondent.)— France will submit to the Reparations Commission to-day a fresh proposal for settlement of the German debt to take the place of the inquiry proposal which America abandoned, it was learned from a reliable source. The Commission was to meet at 3 p.m. Louis Barthou, French chairman, will suggest that the members, as well as assistant members representing all nations participating in the Commission, act as expert committee to study German resources.

This was said to be Premier Poincare's plan to take the place of the proposal for an expert inquiry into Germany's capacity to pay, which Secretary Hughes withdrew because he thought the conditions of France's acceptance would render it useless.

Poincare's plan conformed to Article 234 of the Versailles Treaty, it was said. As was reported in previous United Press despatches, the plan was to search for German capital so as to find ways of making Germany pay all and also to hear the evidence of German experts as to their country's present capacity to pay.

Find German Capital.

The suggestion for hearing the German experts was made in the last note from Chancellor Stresemann to the Reparations Commission pleading that Germany at the moment was unable to pay anything.

The plan for searching for exported German capital was one suggestion made by France as a possible problem for the expert committee proposed by Secretary Hughes to solve.

France has made known that she would facilitate examination of French bank accounts to find traces of German investments if England and the United States would do likewise. It was doubted in some quarters to-day whether England would agree to this because it was believed that considerable German capital had been invested since the ruin of the Germany currency.

It was expected that Chairman Barthou would also suggest to-day that the committee appoint at least one financial expert to collaborate with the proposed Reparations committee in its examination.

The agenda for the Reparations Commission to-day also included discussion of a reply to the German note of October 24 in which the proposal to send German experts was made.

Poincare Victorious.

Premier Poincares' foreign and domestic policies was submitted to the acid test for Parliamentary approval soon after the opening to-day of what promises to me the most momentous session of the French Chamber since the Armistice.

The Chamber of Deputies passed a vote of confidence in the Poincare government by a majority of over two hundred.

Opponents of the national bloc which Poincare heads had prepared for a fierce onslaught, hoping to unseat him before the general elections which take place in a few months. Thirty-seven interpolations on his home and foreign policies had already been announced, the chief points of attack being:

1. That Germany is in open defiance of her treaty obligations, that the Crown Prince has returned, that Berlin rejects military control.
2. Reparations are not being collected.
3. France is isolated, even Belgium leaning toward England.
4. The failure to induce America to re-enter the European field for which Poincare is personally blamed.
5. The Ruhr is non-productive

Burglars Visit Lakefield Shop

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 13. — Between Saturday night and Sunday afternoon the general store of Sherin and Sons was broken into by burglars who succeeded in making their escape with two or three hundred dollars worth of merchandise.

The store was entered through a back window which had been left open. The articles taken were mostly clothing, including sheepskin coats, rubbers underwear and other articles.

The burglary, which was discovered on Sunday afternoon by John Sherin is being investigated by Police Chief R. J. Webster who expects developments shortly.

UPTOWN SHOPS WERE MENACED

Bandits, it is Said, Looked Over Several With View to Plunder--Police Notified.

No trace had to-day been found of the bandits who swept the west end of the city on Saturday night and Sunday morning, but information given the Examiner indicates that they had been planning coups on a large scale in the business section of the city and were well acquainted with the city.

On Friday, it is said one of the men entered one store and asked for a particular brown shade of velour hat. He was fitted from a case in the front of the store and proceeded in turn to all the mirrors in the store, working towards the back. He peered into the back part of the store partitioned off for desk accommodation. Throughout his inspection of the store he mumbled to him self and did not speak more than two or three sentences of intelligible language.

On Saturday, two men entered the fur store of William Lech and Sons Limited 413 George street, and asked to see ladies' fur coats. One of the men appeared to be English and the other had a foreign accent. Both were well dressed.

They were shown several coats, although from their actions, Mr. Lech was suspicious of their intentions. One of the men occupied his time in gazing around the store, apparently noting every feature, while the other examined the furs on display. These men displayed a good knowledge of furs immediately noting the difference between coats made of American and Canadian furs, which are not always distinguishable by the average customer. They were profuse in their thanks—too profuse for men Mr. Lech said.

On Saturday night Mr. Lech interviewed Chief of Police Newhall, telling him of his suspicions. It is thought that the bandits may have been watching the store and followed Mr. Lech when he went to the police station, thus being warned that attention would be paid to the store byt the police.

Miss Mervin's Story

Miss Mervin had accompanied her father John Mervin, from the store on Hunter street to their home on Monaghan Road. She stood by the garage after emptying the radiator of the car.

Three men approached and demanded the young lady's parcel. One of them caught her by the shoulder, and although they menaced her there was no violence applied at first. On her refusal to hand over the parcel which the men doubtless thought contained the $400 or $500 which she carried, one of them hit her on the head She fought them off but they snatched the parcel and fled with it. It contained only dry goods

It was thought at first that Miss Mervin had been struck with revolver or stone, but the instrument of assault was found near the scene of the hold up next day. It is a rubber pipe loaded at the end with lead—a murderous weapon in the hands of reckless men.

A few minutes after Miss Mervin gave the alarm, the police were on the spot.

Left their Tools

On decamping from the home of Lieut. Col. Ackerman on Chief Newhall's approach, the men who were working there left behind them the tools of their trade consisting of keys, jemmy, file and about fifty rounds of ammunition. The keys were for Yale locks and others, including skeleton keys and a Ford car key.

They stole a large city car for their trips around the city, it is said returning it after their escapades to within a block of the place where they got it. They are believed to have had their own car parked on Monaghan Road, and had the details of their get-away carefully planned.

Very accurate descriptions of the men are available Chief Newhall having seen them fairly distinctly, and the merchants on whom they called having taken particular note of them.

BRITISH HOUSE MAY DISSOLVE BEFORE FRIDAY

Premier Baldwin Takes Firm Stand in Favor of Protective Tariffs—May Hold Election in Dec.

CANADA'S INTEREST

LONDON, November 13. Canadian Press. — Dissolution of Parliament before the coming week end was forecast by Premier Baldwin at the opening of the new session of Parliament to-day. He did not see why the date could not be next Friday. He made only a brief statement, and said in substance he was thoroughly convinced that protective tariffs were necessary to solve the unemployment problem

Since the late Bonar Law had promised there would be no fundamental change in the Government's fiscal policy, during the lifetime of the present parliament, Baldwin said his only course was to place his views before the country.

Conservatives Return.

To-day's meeting of Parliament was merely a resumption of the session interrupted by the summer vacation and so was not marked by any ceremony such as attends the opening of a new session when the King appears in state.

Prime Minister Baldwin's announcement of the adoption of a policy of partial protection as a remedy for unemployment, has wrought an immense change in the conditions under which the House meets, and members, most of them, very unwillingly, learned in the last few days, that they belonged to a moribund body and would have to incur the trouble and expense of seeking re-election if they wished to retain their mandates.

According to some well informed writers there has been a rather sharp division in the cabinet over the question of holding an election before or after Christmas, and this has been much discussed at recent meetings of the Ministry.

Yesterday was a day of conferences apparently looking mainly to the return of Austen Chamberlain and Lord Birkenhead into the inner Conservative fold, from which they have been excluded since the death of the Lloyd George Coalition. Both men and Sir Robert Horn conferred with the Premier and it is believed they will point Baldwin's associates to the coming fight for protection.

Canada Interested.

Canada's interest in the coming election is quickened by the offers of increased preferences on Canadian goods, made by the Baldwin government at the Imperial and Economic conferences just closed. It is thought here that a victory for the present British government would mean the possibility of extensive development in preferences between the United Kingdom and the Dominions, while its defeat is regarded as likely to set back the clock of Imperial preference for some time to come.

Canada's chief concern in the preferences proposed is in regard to fresh apple and canned salmon, although there are possibilities of trade development here in a number of other lines. Particularly this is so in canned fruits and to some extent in honey, beet sugar and tobacco.

The announcement of an election early in December is taken here to mean that there will be no effort to bring the proposed preferences into effect until after the voters of Great Britain have passed upon them. If Premier Baldwin comes back to power, he is then expected to go ahead rapidly with this legislation; but a defeat for him is regarded here as likely to put an end to these offers.

The House of Comons after a brief discussion adopted a motion by Prime Minister Baldwin appropriating the whole time of the House to the government for the remainder of the session. The vote was 270 to 90.

If Parliament is dissolved on Friday nomination will occur on November 23rd and elections on Dec. 6th.

SALVATION ARMY MEETINGS.

On Monday evening, in the Young People's Temple of the Salvation Army, a Thanksgiving banquet was held, which was a great success. About four or five hundred persons were present. Immediately after the banquet there was a concert in the New Temple put on by the Army Band and the Songsters. Mr. J. M. Greene presided. Brigadier and Mrs. Morrow, Brigadier Walton and Adjutant and Mrs. Beer, all of Toronto, were present. A large crowd was present at each of the opening services.

LLOYD GEORGE TO CLOSE A BREACH WITH ASQUITH

Two Leaders Will Work Together in Fight With Premier Baldwin on Free Trade Issue

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(By L. C. Wilson, United Press Staff Correspondent.)— David Lloyd George and former Prime Minister Herbert H. Asquith have closed their breach and will fight Premier Baldwin on the Free Trade issue at the General Elections now scheduled for December 6th.

The two former Liberal Prime Ministers will unite their forces that parted company in 1916 and conduct a joint campaign, it was learned in political circles to-day.

While such a move was not unexpected by many political observers there yet had been a great element of doubt as to whether two bitter political opponents, Asquith and George, could be brought together. Therefore the announcement of re-union furnished one of the big sensations of the day.

The Evening News states Asquith will lead the re-united party. It is recalled that Lloyd George in answering interviews when he landed at Southampton from a visit to Canada and the United States last week, said he would work with anybody who would serve the country faithfully.

EXILE IS NOT READY RETURN

British Satisfied Ex-Emperor Will Remain in Holland for the Present

BERLIN Nov. 13. — (Canadian Press).—It is officially denied here that former Emperor William has been authorized to return to Germany.

British Government officials are inclined to doubt the Brussels news paper advices to the effect that twelve passports have been handed ex-emperor William authorizing him to travel in Berlin. They are of the opinion that the recent visit of Dr. Kan of the Dutch Ministry of Interior, to Doorn was for the purpose of cautioning the former war lord that the Allies would not view his departure from Holland with the same equanimity that of his son.

In view of the fact that the ex-Kaiser is specifically mentioned in the treaty of Versailles as the chief war criminal and that the Dutch government already has given the Allies undertaking that he would not be allowed to return to Germany. The British diplomats are confident that Holland will not incur the displeasure of Allies by allowing the ex-emperor to slip through her hands.

British Government officials reiterated this afternoon that they were entirely satisfied with adequatiey of assuranes given by Holland that ex-emperor William would not be allowed to leave Dutch territor. They say that up to the moment they have not reason to suppose the former war lord proposes to decamp and if he has any such intention they are confident the Dutch government in view of its pledge, will frustrate the attempt. No new representations therefore, have been made to Holland.

MARK STREET HAD SPECIAL SERVICE

Two Day Celebration of the Church's Anniversary.

One of the biggest events that Mark street Methodist church has ever known has just passed; the long-expected two days celebration of the church's anniversary, which passed off without a disappointment.

On Sunday the church began to fill long before the time appointed for commencement of services. As a tribute to the fallen and a commemoration of Armistice Day, two minute silence was observed by the congregation standing and, led by the choir under the capable leadership of Mr. V. Boorman, singing "Oh God, our Help in Ages Past," followed by a hymn of Thanksgiving, "Come, ye Thankful People, Come."

The sermon by Dr. Joliffe of Queen's University, Toronto, was well received, the speaker taking for his text The Forgiveness of Sin, which clearly defined the forgiveness of our Saviour, and will remain long in the memories of the congregation.

In the evening the anthem by the choir was well rendered: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates," and "Lead, Kindly Light," the melody taken by different voices. The solo for Armistice Day was rendered by Mr. V. Boorman, entitled "There is no Death," which followed a prayer by Dr. Joliffe. The doctor's text for the evening sermon was based on the story of "The Carpenter's Son.!" The offering for the day was over-subscribed.

On Monday night, at five o'clock, the tables for the fowl supper, held in the Sunday School rooms, began to fill, people attending until as late as eight o'clock, with as many as fifty people lining the aisles at one time, awaiting a turn. Later, a pleasing programme was given, including an instrumental selection by Miss Jean Hurl, vocal solo by Miss F. Stenton and Miss M. Agnew, and a reading by Miss A. Throope. After which the Trinity Sunday School orchestra, directed by R. Gliddon, was given a royal welcome. The orchestra, introduced by Mr. V. Boorman, gave several pleasing numbers which were much enjoyed by their audience.

At the close of the programme, Rev. R. Bamforth, pastor of the church, thanked the orchestra and all who had helped with supper arrangements, his words being seconded by Mr. W. Gamble, recording steward of the church. With the singing of the National Anthem, the happy gathering came to an end.—(Contributed).

"The Worker" to Be Prosecuted

"Armistice Day" Editorial Will Be Subject of Libel Action.

TORONTO, Nov. 13.— (Special).—Malcolm Bruce, editor of The Worker, said to-day that he stood by his editorial and that he had nothing to retract. "They lumping the whole business in order to make the virtues of some of the collectors cover the whole trouble," he said in regard to the fact that many of the collectors were Salvation Army girls. "That is only a cheap appeal to a sort of chaurenism,' continued Mr. Bruce. "It is utilizing the mob phychology of such days when hypocrisy has full sway in order to prejudice people against the party. While undoubtedly there were many estimable women engaged in the collection there were many undsirables who were urging men to fight in the war and did not do any thing more useful than collect money."

The editor of the Worker denied that there was anything filthy intended by his article. "That term can be applied to anybody who prostitutes his talents," he answered. "If it is understood properly it shows no desire to besmirch the womanhood of the province. There were many estimable women engaged in that work particularly those of the working class. It was chiefly applied to those women that do nothing else in the way of work.'

"Proceedings will be taken against the Worker, a Toronto publication, for printing an article entitled "Armistice Day Deflecting in the character of Tag Day Women Workers" " Chief of Police Dickson stated today.

"The Crown Attorney has been consulted and I have given instructions that some action be taken. I looked up the Criminal Code and the charge will be laid under defamatory libel or seditious libel. The writer of the article is well known to the police."

Chief Crown Attorney Eric Armour, K.C., stated: "The matter is under consideration."

"It is a matter for the Attorney General to take action," declared Mayor Maguire.

"I can speak with some knowledge of the splendid service that has been rendered not only by the women on Tag Day, but on every occasion when women workers are wanted in Toronto," said he. "Toronto is blessed by the women who have made many sacrifices and it ill-becomes a man like Bruce or anybody else to speak in such an insulting way about them."

The Globe this morning, denouncing the publication of the editorial in the Worker, asks the question, "Must we stand this " "If you only knew how hard it is for these women to come out early in the morning stand on the corners in the cold or the sun Tag Day after Tag Day, sometimes to be insulted," said Mrs. A. E. Gooderham, who was in charge of the motors on Poppy Day, "It is only the love of humanity that makes them do it. I think that is deplorable at the present time when we should try to bridge the gulf that divides people that any man should do this terrible thing. Such a statement simply makes me ill when I think of these wonderful women who Tag Day after Tag Day stand on the street corners. For my part I wish they could get some other way of financing these things.

"That I don't know," said Mrs. Gooderham, in reference to legal action. "That is the spirit we have to fight against," she added.

THEFT CHARGES GET LONG TERM FOR LOCAL MEN

Three Men Admitting Many Thefts and Housebreaking Sentenced to 2 Years Less 1 Day.

STOLE GUM BOXES

Gerald Chatten, Harry Ward and Morley James, charged with thieving, were this morning sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley to long trems in the Ontario Reformatory. terms and Chatten, having been charged on previous occasions, were sentenced to straight terms of two years less one day, while James, being a first offender, was sentenced to not less than three months and not more than two years less one day. This will give the parole board an opportunity to work in his behalf.

Numerous petty thefts and major burglaries weer admitted by the offenders. Among them were the following: On October 13 Chatten admitted breaking a silent salesman with James and Scheweir in front of Hickey's gents' furnishing store and stealing shirts, collars, ties and garters. On October 15 thty stole two gum boxes from Braund's store at Albert and Park streets, which they broke on the C.P.R. track. On October 16 with James and Ward he stole the gum box from Mrs. Heasman's store at Rutherford and Patterson streets. On October 17, with James, he stole a gum box from Curran's store on London and George street, also Hooper's gum box and Routley's.

On November 1 he broke and entered the Dominion pool room on George street and stole cigars, cigarettes and money.

Chatten said he was started on his career of crime through reading stories in which the ease with which such escapades could be carried through was explained.

Other Thefts.

Harry Ward admitted stealing two gum boxes, one from Inkpen's store at Princess and Park streets and the other from Young's store at Lansdowne and Park on October 1.

Chatten and Earl Scheweir were his companions in all of these escapades. Scheweir has not yet been tried.

The round-up which gathered in these offenders was conducted by the police last week following investigation by them of numerous complaints. Finger prints taken at the scenes of the burglaries played a big part in the identification of the youthful offenders.

DR. H. S. BELAND WAS IMPRESSED

Was Motored to Cobourg Where He Addressed Another Meeting'

The Hon. Dr. H. S. Beland, Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment immediately after the meeting Sunday afternoon at Peterborough, in the Opera House under the auspices of the G.W.V.A., was motored to Cobourg by Mr. G. N. Gordon, M.P., where he addressed a very large meeting in the Victoria Opera House held under the auspices of the G.W.V.A., and Daughters of the Empire.

The Hon. Dr. Beland expressed himself as very much impressed with the industrial development of Peterborough; and particularly at the fresh appearance of the City; its well kept lawns, and homes.

He said that the enlistment in Peterborough was an outstanding feature; and he remembered well, when he returned from his imprisonment in Germany, learning of the splendid position Peterborough took.

MISSIONARY WORK SALVATION ARMY

Commissioner Sowton Tells of Army's Work in Foreign Fields.

A most interesting lecture on the Army's missionary work in foreign fields was given by Commissioner Charles Sowton before a large audience at the Salvation Army Temple on Sunday afternoon, when special services marking the opening of the new Temple were continued. Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., was chairman, and with him on the platform were visiting Army officers and Ald. N. E. Phelan. Mr. Bradburn commended the Army for the work being done in Peterborough, and throughout the world, and said it was fitting that dedicatory services should be held on the anniversary of the signing of the Armistice. The speaker expressed the belief that the Great War would not have been brought about had the nations of the world been imbued with the spirit of brotherliness so well exemplified in the work carried on by the Salvation Army.

Commissioner Sowton spoke of the missionary effort in Java, South America, Africa, Korea, Japan, China and in India, where he was situated for some years to preach the Gospel of a God of Love to a people whose religion was one of fear.

A story in connection with the opening up of work in China was interesting. It had always been the desire of the late founder of the Army to start work in China. Funds, however, could not be spared, and he never lived to see his wishes fulfilled. It was one of the General's last requests to his son, now General Bramwell Booth, as the grand old man of the Army lay dying. The work, finally, was made possible when a rich trader in London died and bequeathed to the Army part of a fortune made by him in trading between Liverpool and the East.

Best wishes for the continued prosperity of the Salvation Army were conveyed on behalf of the City, by Ald. N. E. Phelan, who was called upon to speak.

MARRIED.

HOW BIG CHAIN BUSINESS GREW OUT OF A LOAN

Success of Woolworth Enterprise Due to Attention to Details Rotary is Told.

NUMEROUS STORES

Interesting details of the manner in which the Woolworth chain store enterprise has developed from one store into a concern doing over $200,000,000 worth of business in a year were imparted to the Peterboro Rotary Club at its luncheon today by Rotarian F. A. Hungerford, manager of the local branch, in speaking on his classification.

Rotarian Hungerford told of the start of the business by Woolworth with $400 borrowed from his father and of the development of the enterprise until the various chain stores were amalgamated into the present concern, whose activities were steadily expanding. At present there were nearly as many Woolworth stores in England as in Canada, and as one was being added every three months, there would soon be more in the British Isles than in this country.

The speaker dealt in a most interesting manner with the business methods followed by the firm, emphasizing the attention to detail that was paid and the stopping of the leaks through which profit often escaped. From the sale of waste paper and packing boxes a considerable revenue was obtained, insurance rates were kept down by complying with the suggestions of insurance experts, and breakages and damage in shipments were carefully checked up.

Rotarian A. Mowat, of the Educational Comittee, following instruction from international headquarters, gave a concise and meaty address on Rotary principles, advising Rotarians to worthily represent their profession in Rotary and Rotary in their profession, to carry the principle of the square deal into all their business relationships, to inculcate a faith in honest work, to spread a spirit of tolerance and to cultivate ideals.

President McElderry, who was in the chair, announced that next week's meeting would be held on Wednesday, when the District Governor, Andy Wallace, would be the guest of the local club.

Smith's car was badly damaged, the radiator, lamps and mud guards being smashed. The injured horse had to be shot. It had jumped the fence from the field in which it was pastured and wandered onto the highway in front of the car.

He Had No Thanksgiving Dinner

The motto of the Kiwanis Club is "We Build," and we are trying so far as it lies in our power, to build a healthier and happier race of children here in Peterborough. The greatest asset of any city lies in its young people. It is the little ones of to-day who will be citizens of to-morrow, and who will hold the future of our city in their hands. In helping them to grow up stronger, healthier and wiser, we are building in the truest sense of the word. In order to help this work we have staged—

The Kiwanis Revue

Grand Opera House, Nov. 20-21

The curtain goes up on a scene in the sunny south land where the magnolia blooms and the mocking bird sings. There are some beautiful songs, and some beautiful music, and a vein of keen humor running underneath the whole, that ensures you many a hearty laugh, and precludes one dull moment throughout the entire evening. You are assured of an entertainment worth more than the price of admission and your dollar will bring One Hundred cents worth of health and happiness to some under nourished little youngster who had no Thanksgiving Dinner, and who is striving with all his feeble might to make the grade alone. You can procure tickets from any Kiwanian or at the Box Office. Given under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club of Peterborough.

A GERMAN CHEMIST SLAYER WHOSE TOUCH MEANT DEATH

Robert Huber's Record of Murdered Victims Includes Relatives and Friends and Whole Families.

By GUS M. OEHM

BERLIN (By Mail to United Press). —Robert Huber, whose every touch meant death, whose record of murdered victims includes relatives and friends, whole families and mere acquaintances; whose weird profession of poison and bacilli murdering brought him wealth and power, influence and position—today sits in a Munich jail beginning his 15-year imprisonment.

Huber, whose mania was to kill by chemical means, thwarted the efforts of police for months. Even when he was captured the court refused to convict him of more than "robbery" in connection with his last escapade, wherein he stole a quantity of valuable jewelry from two of his best friends—man and wife—who were found near death from poison the morning after.

Poisoned All He Touched

Huber's trail was full of circumstantial evidence—whomever he touched died mysteriously and quickly of some strange poisonous disease—or developed serious illnesses, abscesses, etc., as a result of poisoning.

Huber is a chemist. As a child he learned the trade, working at odd times in various laboratories, until he finally obtained a medical degree.

Huber worked with erysipelas bacilli, atropine, digitalis and arsenic. Wherever he went he carried a little flask and whenever he left someone with whom he had come in contact became suddenly and mysteriously ill—often fatally.

Became Rich

Huber became rich. His demoniac activities, which destroyed his friends and relatives to his financial gain, brought him from boyhood poverty to wealth in maturity. As he sat across from an acquaintance in an express train dining car he carelessly applied atropine poison—with fatal results.

Relatives Die Mysteriously

Huber married into a rich family. One by one the members thereof died—poisoned mysteriously—until only Huber and his wife remained. The only evidence against Huber brought out at the trial proved that he had obtained erysipelas baccilli from the body of one of his dead relatives. He claimed his scientific researches explained this.

Another circumstance brought out at the trial was that Huber's father-in-law died of arsenic poisoning in his food shortly after submitting to a foot massage by his son-in-law, Huber. Here again Huber declared it was merely a coincident, though Huber's mother-in-law and sister-in-law had both died under somewhat similar circumstances.

Caught at Last

His most recent "circumstances" saw used to put him in prison. Huber, in need of ready cash, became acquainted with a rich young couple named Grimm. He visited them, going to their suburban home in his automobile. During the night the couple developed cramps—the result of digitalis poisoning. Huber, also apparently ill from the same cause, left immediately for his home, leaving his automobile behind. Investigators, thoroughly angry, started after Huber in the automobile, but Huber had tampered with the machine, which broke down en route.

Later, Huber was arrested and tried. The mild sentence—fifteen years in jail and fifteen years' loss of citizenship for robbing the Grimm pair—was a surprise to followers of the case. The court held that proof of Huber's guilt in connection with the string of deaths connected with his every move was not sufficient to convict. So they put him in jail for stealing.

SOMEWHERE IN FLORIDA

To be somewhere in Florida where the sun is always shining, where the golden oranges hang in clusters on the trees, the palms stir gently to the warm balmy breezes and 'Where the sweet Magnolia Blooms' is the thought in the minds of hundreds of Canadians every winter.

This year there will be the usual exodus of Canadians to the south. When Canadians at home are skating and skiing, those in the south will be surf bathing, sun-bathing on the warm sands, deep-sea fishing, golfing, etc.

When making arrangements for the trip south consult any agent of the Canadian National Railways for particulars of service. Winter tourists fares are now in effect, valid to return up to June 15th, and good for stop-over at all important points.

WHOOPING COUGH STOPPED BY VICKS

TORONTO MOTHER SAYS NEW VAPORIZING SALVE "WORKED WONDERS.

The quick direct treatment for colds of children and grown-ups too, is an application of Vicks over the throat and chest at bed time.

Not only is Vicks absorbed through the skin, but its healing vapors of Camphor, Menthol, Eucalyptus, Turpentine, etc, are breathed all night directly into the affected air passages.

Relief usually comes by morning. Just as good, too, for cuts, bruises, burns and itching skin troubles.

Mrs. Wiliam Morrison, of 114 Sheridan avenue, Toronto, says: — "Last fall our baby had whooping cough so bad that we were afraid of losing her. I heard about Vicks VapoRub from my neighbors, and decided to try it. Every morning and night I applied it as directed, and it worked wonders. It seemed to break up the cough and ease her especially through the night when it was the most troublesome. I have also used Vicks with colds with good results, and would not be without it."

PRICE THREE CENTS — PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1923 — PRICE THREE CENTS

DAVID S. BYRNE UNDER ARREST IN MONEY DEAL

Borrowed $10,000 From Toronto Friend to Complete Alleged Estate Transaction.

FRAUD IS CHARGED.

TORONTO, November 12. — Woven around the record on the slate at No. 2 Police Station, Dundas Street, "David S. Byrne, attempted fraud, $10,000; arrested by Detective Johns," is a story, whether fact or fiction remains to be seen, which involves an estate valued at between 50 and 100 millions of dollars.

The leading figure is none other than David S. Byrne, evangelist, known as the "Millionaire Preacher," and claimant as sole heir and executor to the immense estate of Wm. G. Byrne, late Chicago broker and multi-millionaire. He is said to have borrowed moneys to complete a transaction with an Australian syndicate which, he claims, offered him $60,000,000 for possession of the estate he says he is to inherit.

Byrne, at the time of his arrest, was raising money to go to Australia, it is understood, to complete a deal in connection with the estate, and he fears that his creditors, influenced by interests hostile to the deal, have been moved to swear out a warrant for himself which it is expected would provide difficulties for the completion of the deal.

David Byrne will be remembered as the donor of a memorial to the memory of the late Joseph Scriven, author of the hymn, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," at Port Hope, in October, 1919.

The complainant, James Richardson, Durie Street, is now in Florida investigating the authenticity of the will. Richardson, when approached by Byrne made out his cheque without consulting his solicitors, who on learning of the cheque having been issued, stopped payment at the bank. Richardson then left for Florido and is expected to return this week.

NEW LIFE PULSES IN BODY POLITICS

Many Reasons For Canadians to Be Thankful, Says Rev. Geo. Stafford.

OTTAWA, November 12th. — Canadian Press. — "We believe we are nationally convalescent and new life hope and life are pulsing through through the body politic," declared Rev. George Stafford, of Aylmer, Ont., preaching a united Thanksgiving service here to-day.

He saw reason for thankfulness that editorially in the press of Canada righteousness was commended, and wrong condemned. He said the Canadian Press would compare favorably with the best that had been found anywhere. He thought that the interest in education in Canada bade fair for the future of the Dominion, so that they anticipated the future with confidence and thanksgiving. For the spirit of industry that possesses the Canadian people he thought there was cause for thanksgiving to God. Industry was reviving, foreign trade increasing, national revenues growing, and the year had been crowned with abundant harvests, he said.

COMMUNITY OF FREE NATIONS

Mackenzie King Quotes King George's Theory of Empire As Expressed to School Children.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Right Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, and Hon. William Robertson Warren, premier of Newfoundland, were the guests at luncheon yesterday of the corporation of the City of Edinburgh. Earlier in the day the University of Edinburgh conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws upon the two premiers.

Replying to the toast to the Canadian and Newfoundland premiers Hon. Mr. King declared that those who belonged to the British empire felt that it offered opportunities for the realization of all the capacity that might be latent in human nature to a greater degree than was possible in any other part of the world.

Principal Albert Ewing of the University of Edinburgh, presided over the distinguished gathering at the laureation ceremony and conferred the degrees upon the overseas premiers. In his address Premier King dwelt on empire government and declared that if he were seeking to break up the British empire he thought he would seek the way of an Imperial Council or a cabinet sitting at Westminster shaping the policy of the entire empire. The Imperial Conference had made clear the line of distinction between that form of an attempt at government of the empire as a whole, he said, and the theory best expressed in the words of His Majesty King George to the school children on Empire Day that the British Empire was a community of Free Nations. That, he thought, summed up the theory of the government of empire which would be enduring and safe and permit all that was needed in the way of expansion.

Ramsay MacDonald to Challenge Government.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Addressing a labor meeting in London to-night, J. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, said he would to-morrow challenge the Government in Parliament on its unemployment policy and its European policy, which had sacrificed every ideal and left Europe more militaristic and more war-like than in 1913. He denounced the Government's protectionist proposals as a cure for unemployment and declared that he had never known the Labor Party so enthusiastic for a straight fight.

MAY DISSOLVE PARLIAMENT IN PRESENT WEEK

Baldwin's Interview With King Gives Color to Rumors of Approaching General Election.

BEFORE CHRISTMAS.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(Canadian Press)—The British Parliament will resume its labors today without special ceremony, to proceed with the unfinished stages of humdrum measures like the Workmen's Compensation Bill and similar measures. That was the prospect when the House of Commons adjourned for the Summer recess; but the fates have ordained otherwise, and the members reassemble under the shadow of a great political crisis and probable dissolution within the coming week, to test the opinion of the country on the vexed controversy of protection versus free trade, which is agitating the political world as it has not been agitated except by a similar controversy launched in 1905 by Joseph Chamberlain and by the debates on Irish independence.

May Dissolve Soon.

It was not known here today exactly what would happen, although it is stated with a show of authority that Parliament will dissolve next Thursday. The fact that the Prime Minister had a conference with the King yesterday gives color to this report, as Mr. Baldwin would require his Majesty's formal consent to such a course. Conservative headquarters, however, declined last night to confirm or deny the story, being content to say that nobody knows except the Prime Minister.

After the formal business of the Commons tomorrow, the Government will move a resolution to take the whole time of the House for the remainder of the session. The debate on this resolution may provoke a declaration from the Premier of his intentions, or he may wait until the leader of the Labor or Liberal Party challenges the Government to outline its policy on unemployment.

December Elections.

Although there is a great variety of opinion among Government supporters as to whether dissolution should occur immediately or be deferred until January, or even June, the general belief last night is that the decision will be for December elections.

Th opening business of Parliament will be tributes by the Party leaders of the late Prime Minister, Andrew Bonar Law.

The Premier last night appointed a committee to advise the Government in connection with the preparation of proposed duties on manufactured goods. The committee is composed of Lord Milner, Chairman; Sir Algernon Firth, Sir Peter Rylands, Sir William Ashley, W. A. F. Hewins and A. Pugh, the last named being an experienced labor leader.

CHILD FELL UNDER WHEELS OF WAGON

Son of Patrick Perdue of King's Wharf Suffered Broken Rib.

KING'S WHARF, Nov. 13.—Raymond, the little three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Perdue, had misfortune to break one of his ribs Friday. In climbing into the waggon he fell underneath the wheel. He was at once taken to Lindsay, where medical attendance was given and he is doing nicely now.

Mr. Wilfrid Goslin is busy filling the silos for Messrs. Wm. C. Herlihey and Jos. Guiry of this place.

Messrs. Walter Herlihey and Wm. Flynn are at present pressing hay for the people here, which was a bumper crop.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos Sullivan and Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Perdue and family spent Sunday the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hennessey, of Ennismore.

Mrs. John Winn has returned home after spending some time in O'Neill's hospital with her little son, Clare, who is not able to come home yet.

Miss Ruby Perdue spent Sunday, the guest of her sister, Mrs. Eugene Maloney of Ennismore.

REPORT KAISER GIVEN PASSPORT TO RETURN TO THE FATHERLAND

Brussels Paper Publishes Expectation the House of Hohenzollern Will Be Restored to Power--Kaiser or Crown Prince to R egain Suzerainty.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 12.—The former German Emperor received German passports for himself and his suite this afternoon, according to the Gazette.

It is expected, the paper adds, that the Hohenzollern Monarchy will be restored on December 4, the former Emperor or the German Crown Prince ascending the throne.

PRESS CORPS AWAIT PRINCE.

OELS, Nov. 12.—The former German Crown Prince had not arrived at Oels up to 8 o'clock to-night, unless he has succeeded in escaping the vigilance of the waiting correspondents who have besieging all visible entrances to the castle for the past twenty hours. There is no information here respecting the route he is travelling, or where he spent Saturday and Sunday nights.

ALLIES PROPOSE TO ACT.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—The Allied Council of Ambassadors, after an hour's discussion of the German reply to their protest against the return of the former Crown Prince, decided to-day to refer it to their respective governments. If the replies from the Governments are received in time, the Ambassadors will met again on Wednesday.

SOCIALISTS BOW TO HER LORDSHIP

Countess of Warwick Says Family Opposition Is "the Act of Cads."

LONDON, November 12.—(Canadian Press Cable.) —Fun is being poked at the ceremonious manner in which fellow socialists receive the Countess of Warwick when she arrives at the meeting places in connection with her campaign as socialist candidate for the Warwick and Leamington division of Warwickshire. Her ladyship is getting crowded audiences.

"Make way there please," comes the order in awed tones from self-appointed heralds on her arrival, and then with still more awesome inflexion, "The Countess of Warwick."

One observer contrasts this with the manner in which plain people like the Prince of Wales, Premier Baldwin, or even the ordinary commoner, are content merely to arrive at the platform. The countess has offered a lengthy explanation concerning the support being given to Captain Anthony Eden, her conservative opponent, by her family connection.

Lady Brooke, daughter-in-law of the countess, is a prominent worker in the interests of the conservative candidate while the son and daughter of the countess are likely to also give him their support.

"The use made of this situation," declares the countess, "is the act of cads."

FEDERAL MINISTERS RETURN TO OTTAWA

Premier King May Return Home Via Halifax Instead of New York.

OTTAWA, Nov. 10. — (Canadian Press).—The approaching session of Parliament, the opening of which is expected about the end of January, or early in February, is heralded by the return of the Cabinet Ministers to the capital. Already a number of those who have been absent in various parts of the Dominion are back in their Ministerial offices, and from this time on meetings of the Cabinet will probably show an increased attendance.

Premier King was understood to be sailing on the 21st for New York, but later advices indicate the possibility that he may return via Halifax instead.

The impending by-election in Halifax, made necessary by the appointment of Hon. A. K. MacLean to the Exchequer Court is regarded as one chief reason for the proposed change.

There is some conjecture as to the programme for the coming session, but no definite information as to the plans of the Government is yet available. It is practically certain, however, that the Canadian banking situation will be pretty thoroughly discussed both in committee and out when the House meets.

The failure of the Home Bank and the suffering of depositors and shareholders, resulting from its fall will furnish food for a lengthy discussion in the Banking and Commerce Committee.

Get Formal Refusal From United States To Join Conference

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press.)— The United Sttaes formally declined in effect to participate in any expert survey of Germany's capacity to pay reparations, the scope of which is limited as proposed by the French government. The French ambasador last night cabled United States' reply to his government. If Premier Poincare should stand pat on his insistence on limitation of reparations survey, the United States would not participate ,and the entire project probably would be abandoned.

Saw Herd of Elk Beside Railway

SUDBURY, Nov. 12.—(Canadian Press).—A fireman of the Canadian National Railway operating west of Hornepayne, reported on Saturday night he had seen five large elk about one mile west of Hornepayne alongside the railway. This is the first time elk have been reported in that section.

CRUSTACEANS IN PREFERRED LIST

Canned Lobster, Crabs and Crayfish Will Enter Britain Free.

LONDON, Nov. 12. — (Special Cable to the Canadian Press by George Hambleton, staff correspondent.)—Canned lobster, cray fish and crabs will rank with canned salmon in the preferential tariff offer made by the British Government to the Overseas Dominions at the Economic Conference. When the offer has been given legislative effect all foreign products under this head will be liable therefor to a duty of ten shillings per hundredweight while the empire products will be admitted free.. The British government has also intimated that it would be prepared to propose to parliament the imposition of a duty of ten shillings and sixpence per hundredweight on such foreign dried fruit as apples, pears and peaches as the dominions would consider of interest to their export trade. The original offer of a preference on dried fruit applied to figs, raisins, plums and currants. Dried fruit from all parts of the empire will be admitted to Britain free.

Apart from the foregoing the official ceremony of the Economic conference issued to-night merely gives in technical form the conclusions already indicated.

REPORTED HITLER EVADED CAPTURE

Said to Be Rallying Remnant of Forces Near the Austrian Frontier.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(Canadian Press)—Despatch to the Daily Mail from Berlin says martial has been proclaimed throughout Bavaria, and that death sentences pronounced by court martial are to be executed within three hours. Despatch adds that, according to a communication from Munich, Hitler escaped and is believed to be as Rosenheim, near Austrian frontier trying to rally his followers. Former Crown Prince Ruppercht of Bavaria has declared himself as strongly against an insurrectionary movement in Bavaria.

General Erich Ludendorff last night was observing the fifth anniversary of the German as prisoner in custody of Federal troops. The man who as commander in chief of German forces, and accredited with having lost world war for Germany, is an ignoble prisoner of the young republic he so thoroughly despised and against the fragile existence of which he has plotted, openly and in secret ever since he retired to his recationay Bavarian stronghold.

The status of Ludendorff and Hitler, when he is taken, as political prisoners has not yet been defined, and for the moment capture merely marks the physical collapse of Hitler's tragi-comic "Pursch" in which the world famed Quartermaster General of the German army became engulfed.

BRITAIN TURNS ATTENTION TO HOME PROBLEMS

Has Abandoned Thought of Immediate Reparations Enquiry — Denies Rumors of French Rift.

ENTENTE NEEDED.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(Canadian Press)—In consequence of the failure of the negotiations between France and the United States at Washington over the scope of the proposed expert committee of inquiry, Great Britain has abandoned all thought of an immediate reparation inquiry, either with or without the paritication of France.

The British Government will henceforth devote itself to pressing domestic problems, awaiting a more propitious moment to re-open the reparations question. There is not the remotest chance, it is declared of the Government convening a plenary economic conference jointly with the United States without French participation. If such a step were taken, British officials feel that it is in no way certain that Belgium would abandon her close association with France, nor is it clear that Italy would feel free to enter wholeheartedly into a circumscribed conference without her French ally.

The Government authorities repudiate the recent talk about an impending break with France, arguing that the existence of the Entente is the only anchor whereby the European Ship of State can be prevented from going on the rocks.

Preliminary negotiations concerning the future of Mosul are in progress at Constantinople. Norville Henderson, the British Charge, represents Great Britain and Adnan Bey Turky. It is expected that this will lead to a fuller talk at London.

New South Wales Labor Opposes Conscription.

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Nov. 13.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuter)—Speaking at an anti-war demonstration here yesterday Labor Leader Charlton declared that the labor party of New South Wales was against the sending of Australians overseas to fight. Charlton added that the labor party would take the first opportunity of "knocking out" compulsory training.

26 Appeals in Capital Cases

Ottawa, November 12. — The report of the Secretary of State for the fiscal year ending March 31, shows that 26 capital cases were dealt with jointly with the Department of Justice. Of the 26 cases, the death sentence was carried out in nine, which were executed, and in the remaining nine cases, new trials or reprieves were granted. Licenses or tickets-of-leave were granted in 1275 cases, and temporary licenses in 13.

These temporary licenses are issued for the purpose of allowing prisoners to leave prison for medical examination or treatment.

ISSUES REBUKE TO BIRKENHEAD

Divine Denounces His Speech Belittling Idealism in National Affairs.

LONDON, Nov. 13.— (Canadian Press.)—Lord Birkenhead has been severely rebuked by several religious leaders for his speech which he delivered in St. Andrew's Hall Wednesday as rector of Glasgow University, and in which he declared that idealism in national affairs was impracticable and might easily become a deadly source of national peril. He further declared on that occasion that politically and philosophically the motive of self interest was, must be and ought to be, the main spring of human conduct.

"Such sentiments are the principles of Wingle," declared the six-foot bishop of St. Albans, Right Rev. Michael Bolton Furse, who made a great name for himself in South Africa. "More cruel principles from the lips of any public man I never had the misfortune to read. He says idealism is sloppy folly. He forgets the sloppy folly of Flanders, and on the high seas of Jutland, and the sloppy folly of men who made England safe for us and for him to live in peace and plenty and enjoy his pension of £5,000 a year which, no doubt, he has earned."

Dr. Johnn Clifford, the venerable Non-conformist, declares that the speech of Lord Birkenhead has been recived with loathing and disgust.

CREW RESCUED FROM BURNING LAKE STEAMER

Also Discover Two Castaways Who Had Been Without Food 104 Hours on Lake Erie Island.

SIGNALS FAILED.

PORT CLINTON, Ohio, Nov. 13. —(Canadian Press)—News of the burning of the lake steamer Wesee, owned by the Border Transit Company of Sandwich, Ont., and the rescue of her crew of nineteen off Middle Sister Island, in Lake Erie, near here, early yesterday, reached here yesterday afternoon when the freighter Conneaut landed two fishermen who had been marooned on the island. The cause of the fire was not learned.

The crew of the Wesee, which was bound from Sandwich to Cleveland to load coal, succeeded in escaping in small lifeboats. After battling with heavy seas for several hours they landed at Middle Sister Island, where they found Martin Bosom and Harley Bass, who had been without food for 104 hours. Attempts of Bosom and Base to attract attention by burning signal fires failed.

The Conneaut, which was enroute from Cleveland to Alpena ,Mich., attracted by the burning Wesee, landed at the island and picked up the twenty-one men. It took the Wesee's crew to Sandwich and then brought Bosom and Bass here.

Bosom and Bass said they left Petit Cote, Canada, early Thursday with a power boat which they were to bring to Port Clinton. The boat sprang a leak a few miles from shore, and the men landed when the boat was washed ashore by the waves Thursday night. The island is not inhabited but they found shelter in a deserted fisherman's cabin.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1923.

A SUCCESSFUL CELEBRATION.

Congratulations are due the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association for the very successful observance of Armistice Day under its auspices.

The simple, impressive service at the cenotaph, carried out with dignity and solemnity, was a touching tribute to the memory of the city's heroic dead, and the memorial meeting that followed in the Grand Opera House was equally in harmony with the spirit of the occasion.

The presence as principal speaker of Hon. Dr. Beland, Minister of Pensions, was a feature, and the Minister's references to his experiences in Germany as a prisoner of war, his tribute to the valour of the Canadian forces, his expression of belief that the human touch was required in dealing with veterans' problems, and his eloquent plea for a more friendly and closer relationship between the English and French-speaking peoples of the Dominion were appropriate to the anniversary.

The turnout of veterans was one of the largest in the history of the association and should do much to help in the rebuilding of the local branch.

THE ARMISTICE CELEBRATION.

Among returned soldiers and many other citizens there seems to be an unanimous opinion that the attempt to combine the celebration of the anniversary of the Armistice with the annual observance of Thanksgiving Day is a mistake.

The feeling among the veterans is that the Armistice celebration should be held on the actual date of the historic event, and not on the Monday closest to it, and hence it was that almost everywhere throughout Canada the ceremonies in connection with the commemoration of the end of the war took place on Sunday, while yesterday, the day set aside by the Government as the occasion for such celebrations, was a blank.

There is a lack of definite leadership in this connection that prevents an unanimous national celebration such as is held in England.

Toronto, for example, held its celebration of Armistice Day and the observance of the two-minute period of silence on Saturday, most other centres on Sunday, and hardly any communities chose Monday, the official day so far as the Government was concerned.

If it were understood definitely that regardless of the date chosen for Thanksgiving Day, the ceremonies celebrating the end of the World War would always be held on November 11, the actual date of the Armistice, the confusion that now exists would be done away with

LACK OF THOUGHT—OR OF COURTESY?

Observation of the conduct of a number of motorists during the events that marked the Thanksgiving week-end suggests that the adoption of a courtesy code by the automobile fraternity might not be a bad thing for themselves and a very excellent thing for the public.

Not that Peterborough lacks courteous drivers—there are, fortunately, many of them who have every regard for the convenience of others and who handle their cars like gentlemen.

But, alack, there are some motorists who act as if they alone had any right to be on the street.

Some of them were noticeable during the ceremony at the G.W.V.A. when necessarily the road had to be blocked to allow a squuare of veterans to be formed around the cenotaph.

Several cars were driven along the crowded street in the midst of the ceremony, as if Murray street was the only thoroughfare open to traffic, and it was a matter of life and death to get through.

So, too, with the road race yesterday when thoughtless motorists following closely on the heels of the leading runners blocked the street a block away from the finish and compelled the next flight of contestants to pick their way through a maze of cars.

Had there been any necessity of sprinting for positions the runners would not have had a chance.

Incidents such as these make many people wonder if there are not too large a percentage of motorists who believe that they are a law unto themselves.

SATURDAY NIGHT'S RAID.

Peterborough has been so long immune from crimes of violence that it was with a distinct feeling of shock that citizens heard of the episodes of Saturday night.

Hold-ups and thugs with revolvers and that kind of thing have been occupying a prominent place in the newspapers, it is true, but this city has been so singularly free of anything of that nature that Peterborough was a little dazed to realize hat armed bandits had made an attack upon a local girl and had engaged in a gun fight with the police.

There is, however, no particular reason why the city should consider itself an island of safety so far as the operations of the numerous crooks at work in Ontario are concerned.

They have been operating with considerable success in all parts of the Province, not only in the larger centres, but in towns and villages, and with high-powered automobiles at the service of the gunmen, no community has any right to consider itself safe from raids of this kind.

Fortunately, Saturday night's attack was frustrated by the bravery of the young girl assailed by the bandits, who succeeded in saving the money that was the object of their attempt, and their effort at burglary met with no better result.

The incident will cause Peterborough people to realize that in spite of the immunity we have enjoyed here there is always the chance of a repetition of such episodes, and that it is well to be on guard when money or valuables are being handled.

It was a new experience early Sunday morning for residents of the west ward to be awakened by revolver shots.

ONTARIO'S SWIFT PACE.

When the public accounts of Ontario for 1900 and 1922 are laid side by side they afford instructive, albeit disturbing reading. In fact, it is only by such a comparison that the modern pace of the Province is realized. That pace in the matter of expenditure and debt is rather alarming, and plainly calls for some checking influence, says the Ottawa Journal.

Public accounts for 1900 does not disclose the exact amount of debt in that year; but it is reasonably clear that the amount was not in excess of $25,000,000. The Province then had a population of 2,182,947. In 1922, with a population of 2,933,662, the debt of the Province had been swollen to $287,681,569. Thus, while population was growing by 34.4 per cent., capital liability was increasing by over 1,000 per cent. Since the fiscal year 1922 an addition of $55,000,000 has been made to the debt; so that at the present moment the amount outstanding is greater than was the net debt of the Dominion down to 1909.

Several very interesting and suggestive facts attach to the revenues of the Province. For the year 1900 the total receipts from all sources was $6,248,997. Looking at the financial statement for 1922, and comparing it with the revenue details for 1900, the following features arrest attention:

	1900.	1922.
Succession duty	$226,677	$6,303,285
Corporation tax	nil	5,567,396
Amusement tax	nil	1,505,581
Motor vehicles tax	nil	3,477,430

It will be observed that from special sources, representing direct taxation in every instance, the Province received nearly three times as much as was the total revenue in 1900. Under such circumstances it should not be surprising that within twenty-two years an income of $6,248,997 has been raised to $44,730,840. Such buoyancy in revenue ought to have avoided all need for borrowing. It did not, however. The official statement shows that in 1922 the Province borrowed $84,562,067. The actual expenditure for the year was $89,328,566, of which $51,885,480 was on capital account. A growth in that regard of over $85,000,000 since 1900 is somewhat startling, especially when the pace is maintained by borrowing on a rapidly rising scale.

No one would for a moment suggest that Ontario is rushing headlong toward bankruptcy. Her ability to pay may not even have been strained. Enormous resources lie at the back of the Province. Taxation might even be carried further without seriously injuring a prosperous population. But we should all soberly realize that ability to pay, natural resources, and the possibilities of taxation after all have distinct limits. Is it a prudent thing to carry expenditure to any one of those limits? Perhaps a more searching question would relate to the necessity for doing so.

SUPERPOWER.

Imagine a network of transmission lines, connecting every available source of electric power in Canada, delivering current to every town, every city and every industry; driving railroad trains, doing chores for the farmer and serving the housewife. That is superpower. It is a vision which the logic of events will compel all over the North American Continent.

In Ontario we already have the nearest approach to superpower that the world has yet seen. Hydro is a big enterprise now, but it is only a start. Back in the first decade of the present century, when Hydro had its beginnings, the wise ones said that 10,000 horsepower would be about the limit of the enterprise. Power was first turned on in the Niagara system in August, 1910; before the end of the next year the 10,000 horsepower figure had been exceeded. Since that time, Hydro's troubles have been mainly a matter of getting power, always more power, from some source or other to supply a market that the public utility men of 1910 didn't know existed—the homes of the people of Ontario.

In 1926, Sir Adam Beck says, Hydro will be up against it for power. There will be a way out in the end. We can, and will, dam the St. Lawrence and develop more than a million horsepower there. We'll probably have to scrap the Ontario Power and the Electrical Development plants at Niagara and double the efficiency of the water they are using by leading it around to the end of the gorge as was done in the Chippewa development. That is unless the ever-growing demand for energy forces the abandoment of Niagara Falls as a spectacle.

But all these things will take time. None of them will be ready by 1926, when we must have more power. Auxiliary steam plants must be built to bridge over the interval between the installation of the last two units at Chippewa and the time when the waters of the St. Lawrence will be put at work.

Ontario does not want to increase its present coal bill with the United States. For this reason steam plants are objectionable; but, in common with all things mechanical, great advances have been made in the art of extracting the latent energy of coal and turning it into electrical energy. To build a straight steam plant, burning raw coal under boilers would seem a foolish policy in Ontario. But to build plants which would use the soot and the smoke and in addition to producing electricity turn out gas, coke, motor spirits, tar and fertilizer, would be to minimize the disadvantages that are incurred from having to import coal.

These plants could be a permanent part of the system. The coke they would produce by a method which uses practically all of the volatile matter in the coal would help rid Ontario of the domination of the Pennsylvania anthracitebarons. We could cut our coal bill by importing less expensive varieties. We could reduce it in the end altogether by using Canadian bituminous coal, brought to Ontario by vessel from Nova Scotia.

We need not worry because the growth of Hydro is going to force us to build steam plants. They will not raise our present costs. They are a part of the superpower vision, which will, within a score of years, cover all of Canada and drive all our trains. Hydro, gigantic as it is, is but a beginning. Ontario, as a pioneer in the superpower idea, is showing the way to greater things.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Armistice was signed five years ago, but a lot of people in Europe are still looking for the peace.

It took a long time for the crime wave to hit Peterborough, but evidently it has arrived at last.

Those hold-up men should get a better calendar. The police pay does not run out until the 15th.

Getting out of Canadian penitentiaries is becoming too easy an operation. The Westminster escape, following upon a similar incident at Kingston, calls for a rigid investigation.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, November 12 (Canadian Press). — Fresh downturns to-day in the price of wheat accompanied new breaks in foreign exchange, with sterling touching the lowest point of this year.

Wheat closed unsettled at 3-8c to 5-8c ot 3-4c net decline, December $1.02 1-2 to $1.02 1-2 to 5-8, and May $1.07 58 to 3-4 to $1.07 3-4.

Corn finished 5-8c to 3-4c to 1 1-8c up: oats unchanged to 1-4c higher; and provisions varying from 2c off to a rise of 10c.

Bears in wheat had an advantage from the fact that sterling showed nearly 10 points drop within one week, a fall equal to 2 1-2c a bushel on wheat. Besides, considerable notice was taken of talk current in some quarters that wheat market conditions were the most bearish ever known. On the other hand, it was asserted that wheat prices were so low that bread has become the cheapest of foods the world over.

Strength which developed in the corn market tended also to rally the wheat after December delivery had reached as low as $1.02

Much of the wheat buying that helped to bring about recoveries in price, though, appeared to be from shorts who were in a position to collect profits. Owing to this temporary character of the support for the market, rallies failed to hold well in the last part of the day, especially as all North American markets except Chicago were closed, and some hedging pressure here from the North-West was in evidence. Furthermore, it was expected the United States supply total to-morrow would show an increase.

Wet weather prevailing in the West was chiefly responsible for an upward swing in the corn market. Fears were expressed that the dampness would bring about delay in the movement of the new crop, and that the quality of the grain would be injured. Moreover receipts here were less liberal than had been looked for.

Oats were firm in sympathy with corn.

Provisions, although at first easier, owing to weakness of the hog values, advanced later in response to strength of corn and cotton.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Aiken Will Reside in Millbrook.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 13. — The fact that Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Aiken are removing from Fallis Line to Millbrook to reside was the occasion for about fifty of their friends and neighbors gathering at their home on Friday evening, November 9th, for a final social good time together. Mr. John H. George acted as chairman, filling the office most capably, and explaining the object of the gathering during his address, with many reminiscences of the years that Mr. Aiken has occupied the homestead on Fallis Line, he and his wife proving themselves worthy citizens, helpful and dependable both in the church and the community.

Among other speakers were Mr. A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., W. Fred Fallis, ex-Warden A. J. Henderson, all of whom referred in the highest terms to Mr. and Mrs. Aiken, and expressed their sincere regret at their removal from the neighborhood.

The following address was read by ex-Warden A. J. Henderson, and Mr. Aiken was presented with a handsome gold-headed cane, and Mrs. Aiken with an electric iron, Messrs. Stewart J. Fallis and Wesley Fallis making the presentation:

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Aiken.

Dear Friends,— Your neighbors, and other friends, have gathered here this evening to wish you well in your new home at Millbrook. We are aware of the fact that we are losing two of our most highly respected residents, but we indeed are pleased to know that you are not going far from the old Fallis Line, and we shall often see you. You have certainly been excellent neighbors, always ready to help whenever such assistance was required. In church work you have both been active and we shall miss you at the services. Mr. Aiken has been a loyal member of L.O.L. No. 40, and we trust he will continue as such. We can ill afford to lose such able advocates of Orangeism from the Fallis Line Lodge.

Will you, Mr. Aiken, accept this cane, and you, Mrs. Aiken, this electric iron, as tokens of the high esteem in which you are both held in this community? May you both be blessed with continued good health and happiness is the sincere wish of all. Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors,

A. J. Henderson,
Stewart J. Fallis,
Wesley Fallis.

Fallis Line, November 9th, 1923.

Mr. and Mrs. Aiken were deeply affected by the kindness and thoughtfulness manifested by both the words and the gifts, and the former made suitable reply on behalf of his wife and himself. Afterwards a sumptuous supper was served and the remainder of the evening spent in games and social good fellowship together.

MARMORA HEARS FIRST LECTURE

In University Extension Course—Dr. Coleman's Address on Destructive Elements of Nature.

MARMORA, Nov. 13.—On Friday evening in the Town Hall the first lecture in the University Extension Lecture course was given by Doctor Coleman. The evening was made doubly interesting by the presentation of medals to those who had won them last year in the Continuation School.

Rev. P. C. Watson, as chairman, spoke of the value of the lecture course and of the value of education in general. He also spoke highly of the school-board who took enough interest in the pupils to present these medals.

Mr. Marrin, chairman of the Continuation School Board spoke of the work of the staff of teachers who are so splendidly urging the pupils on, although he regretted the fact that Mr. Payette, the principal of the school, was leaving, he congratulated him because he had been so successful. Mr. Payette has received the position of Inspector of Separate schools in Northern Ontario and will leave the school next week. Mr. Marrin also referred to the kindness of the Hon. Robert Cook in doing all he could to aid this school.

Mr. Airhart the Reeve of Marmora spoke a few words concerning the work of the pupils and teachers, the benefits of the school and the financial part of the work. He called forward the pupils whom medals were to be awarded and introduced them to Doctor Coleman.

Medals Presented.

In third form for the year's work James Shannon received the first medal and Grace Stiles received the second medal. Howver, on the departmental exams Mildred Baxter did exceptionally well so, as a result she was awarded a special medal.

In the second form Hazel Williams received the first medal and Hilda Thomson received the second.

In the first form Marion Neal and Barbara Emery were presented with medals. These pupils had evidently worked hard all year or it would not have been possible for them to win these rewards.

The music for the evening was provided by the Deloro Quartette and was certainly enjoyed by all.

"The Tooth of Time."

Dr. Coleman spoke on the subject "The Tooth of Time". He spoke of the various elements of the air as weathering forces. Oxygen is the strongest chemical element in the air and it has very strong combining force. Carbon dioxide or carbonic acid gas does also a vast amount of work as a weathering agent.

Another "Tooth of Time" is the water vapour or moisture in the air.

Mr. Coleman illustrated his lecture with lantern slides. His pictures were of almost every land and many of them he had taken himself while travelling.

He showed how the inscription on a tomb-stone is worn away. The carbon dioxide works on the marble. He accounted for the fact that the face of the sphinx which he showed on the screen was blurred, by the changes of temperature in Egypt.

Granite is attacked less than marble but still it too wears away.

Wind is a weathering agent, for example, Dr. Coleman showed some boulders which had been on a cliff of sandstone but the wind had blown away the sandstone.. Frost is another very important "Tooth of Time." It cracks the stone and destroys it.

Rain attacks any soft material. This is noticeable at Scarboro where cliffs have been worn away by rain probably leaving one high point jutting out.

An interesting picture shown by Dr. Coleman was one where a large hill of soft earth had been washed away by the rain but wherever a boulder had protected the earth beneath it a pillar of perhaps 25 or 30 feet remained with the boulder as a cap.

Water forms caves, underground channels, canyons, etc. These all show how time destroys the form of our land.

Landslips are caused by the water undermining the earth.

Waterfalls and waves and tides make great changes in the form of the land they attack.

These are only a few of the agents of which Dr. Coleman spoke. His lecture was exceedingly interesting.

The second lecture of the course will be held on November 23. Dr. Chant will be the lecturer.

A dose at bedtime of DR. CALDWELL'S LAXATIVE SYRUP PEPSIN Made them feel jolly again

Good Health in Happy Old Age

THE chief concern of elderly people is their health, and that is best assured by regular daily bowel movement. There is no truth, however, in the notion that because you are old you need a "strong physic." In fact, just because you are old a mild laxative is better for you. The trouble with purges and cathartics and physics is that they shock the system and weaken it and make the muscles of digestion flabby. Mr. John Muse, 128 Prince Edward St., St. John, N. B., says Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin is the best medicine on earth and Mrs. George Luth, Pope, Man., who is in her 79th year, has found it easy to take, gentle in action and entirely satisfactory.

Does Not Gripe

You can be sure of satisfactory evacuations every day if you will take a spoonful of Laxative Syrup Pepsin at night when you retire. You will not need to take it very long as a few doses will soon encourage the bowels to act for themselves. The popularity of this wonderful family remedy has become so great that it is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. Because of its mildness and freedom from griping it is especially ideal for the extremes of ages, for children and for elderly people.

Effective at Small Cost

Get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin at any drug store. The formula is on the package, and the cost less than a cent a dose. Take it when you feel heavy, sleep poorly, have headache or night cramps, for these are also symptoms of constipation. Give it to the children when they are restless, feverish or have a cold. Laxative Syrup Pepsin will keep you and your family free from constipation, a condition that lowers the vitality 25 per cent and raises the blood pressure 28 per cent. Freedom from constipation lessens the pain of kidney trouble, neuritis and rheumatism.

NEW VENTURE OF W. A. A GRATIFYING SUCCESS

Thankoffering Innovation By Millbrook Presbyterian Women Will Be Re eated —W. M. A. of Methodist Church Held Reception.

MILLBROOK, Nov 10.—The November meeting of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of the Methodist church was held at the home of Mrs. John Hatherly on Wednesday afternoon, with twenty-eight members in attendance. The chair was taken by the president, Mrs. (Rev.) S. T. Tucker, who led in the opening worship period. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the Secretary, Mrs. C. W. Richards, and a number of business items received attention among these being the appointment at the request of the quarterly board of the church, of a committee from the Auxiliary who will welcome those attending the special services which will be held for the next two weeks commencing Monday, November 12th. A similar committee was appointed at the Ladies' Aid meeting on Tuesday. those from the latter organization being Mrs. McKnight, Mrs. A. J. Brown, Mrs. G. Locke, Mrs. J. L. Byam and Miss A Hampton. These from the Auxiliary are Mrs. G. E. Burnham, Mrs A. Kennedy, Mrs. Tucker, Miss M. Needham, Miss S. Dean, Miss Burnham.

Group A, under the leadership of Mrs. B. R. Raper were responsible for the programme on Wednesday, and Group B under Miss Hampton's leadership will have charge of the December meeting which is to be held at the leader's home. Mrs. F. Smith gave a reading, "Each members share," several interesting items from the mission fields were contributed in response to the "Watch Tower," and the third chapter in the study-book, "Building the Nation," was taken up in a capable manner by Miss M. E. Hetherington. "Immigrant Builders" was the subject of the chapter which dealt with the contribution made to the Canadian nation by the French, British, Scandinavian, German. Austria-Hungarian, Italian, Slavic, (Finns, Russians Poles, Ukrainians), and Oriental builders in a comprehensive survey concluding with a brief outline of the problem ahead of young Canadians in this twentieth century. "While unto us the ends of the world have come it is a very difficult and delicate business to weave these "ends" into the beauty of a well-patterned fabric."

Social Hour

Illness prevented some who had promised to contribute to the programme from being present. Mrs Hatherly served dainty refreshments at the close and a very pleasant social hour was enjoyed. Before the guests left for home a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the hostess who made a suitable reply expressing her pleasure in entertaining the Auxiliary, and extended a cordial invitation to have the gathering meet in her home again during the year. Among those present were: Mrs. J. Spence, Mrs. B. Raper, Mrs. F. Smith Miss Widdis Miss Mary Widdis, Mrs. H. A. Earle, Mrs. G. Locke Mrs. T. Luxon, Mrs. W. Mullen Mrs. A. J. Brown, Mrs. Irwin Hatherly, Mrs. Hilliard Lang, Mrs. Offa Williamson Mrs. F. Johnston, Mrs. S. T. Tucker, Mrs. E. S. Burnham, Mrs. C. W. Richards Miss A. Hampton, Miss M. E. and Miss Stella Hetherington, Mrs. A. Kennedy, Mrs. G. Fallis, Miss M. Needham, Mrs. Weatherup Mrs. G. Freelove, Mrs. J. McKnight and others.

A New Venture

The officers of the Woman's Auxiliary of Grace Presbyterian church made a new venture this week in connection with their annual thankoffering which proved so successful that it will be probably be repeated another year as a similar occasion comes round. Invitations were mailed to every woman in the congregation stating that the W. A. officers would be "At Home" in the church parlors on Wednesday after noon requesting each to be present and enjoy the programme provided and a social time together. Envelopes for the thankoffering were enclosed also descriptive leaflets giving information re the amount asked for from this source by the board of management and the purpose to which it will be devoted.

In spite of the unfavorable weather there was a good attendance, and a generous response was made to the financial appeal, the thankoffering in practically every missionary organization being one fund which invariably reaches a fairly high figure

Rev. G. S. Gervan gave a most instructive talk on conditions in the mission fields in North China, while the duet contributed by Mrs. H. W. Johnston and Mrs. Gervan was much enjoyed. A trio by three of the C. G. I. T. group, Jean Gervan Kathleen Fowler and Elizabeth Russell also gave pleasure to the listeners. Tea was served at the close and a delightful hour, or two of social intercourse followed before the gathering dispersed. The hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. G. S. Gervan president, Mrs. H. W. Johnston, Mrs. J. R. Eakins, Mrs. W. E. Ball, Mrs. R. J. Doak and Mrs. W. Deyell.

Entertained at Home

Miss Anna Russell entertained the Presbyterian group of Canadian-Girls-in-Training at her home on the 7th Line, Cavan on Tuesday evening about thirty availing themselves of the kind invitation to be present. Miss Russell is mentor of the group and deservedly popular with her girls. The regular meeting was held and a practical demonstration in sewing given, after which games of various kinds were indulged in everyone entering heartily into the fun and a thoroughly happy time enjoyed together.

Mrs. Russell assisted by her daughters Misses Anna and Marguerite served delicious refreshments at the close and a hearty vote of thanks was passed before the girls finally left for home. Messrs. H. W. Johnson, G. S. Gervan, W. E. Hall and E. Lancashire kindly gave the use of their cars in conveying the guests to and from the village.

Paid Official Visit

Miss May Gemmel, who represents the Presbyterian church on the National Girls' Work Board, recently paid an official visit to the C.G.I.T. group of Grace Presbyterian church Millbrook, giving them a very fine address and a practical demonstration of singing games, etc., and clearly explaining the programme as prepared for the groups which they are expected to carry out in order to obtain recognition at headquarters in Toronto. Miss Gemmel also met the group at St. Enoch's church, Garden Hill, the same evening where she delivered a similar address and gave helpful practical suggstions and demonstrations.

ARMISTICE MEET HELD IN MARMORA

Marmora War Veterans Remember Comrades Who Answered Last Call.

MARMORA, Nov., 13.—The people of Marmoa on Sunday showed they have not forgotten Armistice Day nor has the memory of the departed ones been forgotton.

Through the efforts of the local branch of the G. W. V. A., o service was conducted in the Town Hall on Sundoy in memory of those who lost their lives in the service of their country.

Rev. P. Caiges—Watson, rector of St. Paul's Auglican church was in charge. The local choirs were supplemented by that of Deloro and the music rendered was beautiful and well adapted to the occasion

The hall was filled to capacity.

The Veterans from Marmora Deloro, and vicinity as well as from neighboring towns turned out some in uniform, some in mufti, and marched from the G. W. V. A. club rooms to the Town Hall where the service was held.

The service was adapted from a service used in England on Armistice Day. It opened with one minute silent prayer and meditation for the fallen comrades. After this the National Anthem was sung. The Rev. P. Caiger-Watson then led in prayers, thanking God for Victory but especially for Peace.

The next part of the service was an eloquent address by the Reeve of the village G. B. Airhart. Mr. Airhart pictured the thoughts and sensations first of the men at the front and then of the ones who stayed at home, at the hour of eleven o'clock on Nov. 11 five years ago. He thought that much the same thoughts of thankfulness to God existed, or should exist in the minds of the people as it did then. In giving his idea of the connection of the fallen heroes to their relatives here on earth Mr. Airhart mentioned, that while he didn't go so far as men like Canon Doyle in defining this relationship ,he did think that, although the bodies of those men soon became but dust their spirits were comparatively close, closer indeed than most of us think.

The choir then rendered the hymn "Rock of Ages."

Rev. P. Caiger-Watson in commencing his sermon, said that Mr. Airhart had started to explain just what he had in mind the connection of relationship between the living and the dead. He said, that on occasions like this men's minds were on the whole in the same line of thought, that some great unseen force shaped the thoughts of a whole nation in the same direction.

Taking as his text 1 Cor. 15-9, "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men the most miserable." In the course of his sermon he remarked "that we are most miserable if we have taken hold of Christ only in regard to our earthly life. They were gathered together that day from a different point of view. They had an outlook which gave them the possibility to be thankful. No German bullet or gas could conquer the men who died, because they were immortal Whilst there was much to be thankful for in our lives, there were also things to be ashamed of. There was great indifference being shown to religion. We have got to accept Christ as our leader so as to thank God for spiritual benefits as well as for material ones." Again reverting to the address of the Reeve he continued, "The bonds existing between relations cannot be broken for they are as immortal as our souls. Whatever our hardships or how full our lives may be, of joy or sorrow, we are not men and women passing out into darkness. We are made in God's likeness and he has called us unto salvation. We get nearest to our departed relatives in the duties of our daily lives. Only when we turn from standards of righteousness to walk in ways of lawnessness do we part from those loved ones gone before. In conclusion the speaker reviewed the evidences of the resurrection, and spoke of the great hope, that it gives to all mankind..

At the conclusion of the sermon the hymn, "O God Our Help in Ages Past" was sung. The closing hymn, "God of Our Fathers, Known of Old," was sung, during which the Veterans, followed by the relatives of the fallen soldiers, and then the congregation, filed out The procession thus proceeded to the Roman Catholic cemetery, where the usual burial service was conducted by Rev. Father Traynor. Father Traynor then gave a short address, dealing with the horrors of war and the need of this Thanksgiving for the glorious peace. Volleys were fired by a firing squad over the graves of the departed heroes and beautiful wreaths were placed over their resting places. The Last Post was sounded and the procession left for the Marmora cemetery, where a similar ceremony was held.

A TALK TO WOMEN

When you spend your money, don't you like to get the best possible value? If so, when next you need a household ointment, buy Zam-Buk. Why? Here are a few reasons.

How long will a jar of dripping keep good? When it turns rancid would you like to apply it to a sore place? Now most ordinary ointments have animal fats and oils as a base. These are disguised by perfumes and coloring matter, but that does not make matters better. Zam-Buk, on the contrary, is free from all fats and oils and animal products that may go rancid. Zam-Buk is made from pure herbal essences and juices—Natural Healers; Nature's own remedies.

Many ointments contain mineral compounds such as lead, zinc, etc., and coloring matters. Zam-Buk does not. Its coloring is the green of the herbs of the field.

WHAT SCIENCE SAYS

Mr. W. Lascelles Scott, the great English chemist, says; "After exhaustive analysis I have no hesitation in certifying absolutely purity and herbal nature of Zam-Buk. It contains none of the impure animal fats and irritating minerals found in ordinary ointments. The antiseptic and bactericidal (germ-destroying) powers of Zam-Buk exceed those of carbolic acid, without inflaming, the most tender skin. 1

"IT SAVED MY HAND"

"A sore on my finger turned to blood-poisoning. After frightful agony the doctors amputated the finger. The hand and arm became terribly swollen and inflamed. Doctors again operated, scraped the bone—in vain. Said hand must be amputated. I refused and tried Zam-Buk. I persevered and complete healing resulted. I believe if I had used Zam-Buk first I would have saved my finger."—(Sgd.) John Evans, 87 Lawrence St., Halifax, N.S. 2

A MINISTER'S TRIBUTE

Rev. A. D. McLeod, of Harcourt, N.B., writes: I know of nothing like Zam-Buk. Visiting throughout an extensive mission, I see many sick and afflicted people, and have been amazed at the good Zam-Buk is doing daily. For old wounds, bad ulcers, eczema, and all skin diseases, it is unexcelled." 3

Zam-Buk being made from nature's own healing balms, is more powerful than ordinary ointments—better value. It can heal where other remedies fail. Read the extraordinary case of Mrs. Jeffrey in panel No. 4.

Zam-Buk, as soon as applied to an injury or skin trouble, kills all disease germs and prevents blood poison, inflammation, etc. Professor Scott, the great English Chemist, experimented with Zam-Buk in this connection. Read his findings in panel No. 1.

Zam-Buk draws from a wound or sore all the poison before healing. Read how it thus saved Mr. Evans' hand, (panel No. 2.)

Zam-Buk, if applied to skin diseases, injuries, etc., will save you money, pain, and perhaps save a limb, as in the case reported in panel No. 5.

Zam-Buk is best for children. Scores of mothers have proved this. In a nut-shell, here are Zam-Buk's points of superiority—It is herbal—not fatty. It is pure—not adulterated by minerals hidden by cheap perfume. It is antiseptic—kills all germs. It is the most powerful known healer. It does more and goes further. It keeps indefinitely—never goes bad. It is suitable alike for the skin of adults and of children—even babies. It cures old and stubborn skin diseases as well as injuries and diseases of recent date. Its price brings it within the reach of everybody. Only 50c box, 3 for $1.25. Zam-Buk, like diamonds, is imitated. Protect yourself, insist on the genuine Zam-Buk.

USE ZAM-BUK FOR

Eczema, Ulcers, Blood Poison, Piles, Cold Sores, Chapped Hands, Festering Cuts, Bruises Scalds and Burns. All druggists and stores sell at 50c box or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

ULCER FOR 30 YEARS

Mrs. Jeffrey of 31 French St., Methuen, writes: "For thirty years I suffered intensely with an ulcer which commenced on my ankle and spread to my knee. I used every known remedy, and had medical treatment, but only got temporary relief. Some days I could not walk! I had despaired of ever finding a cure when I heard of Zam-Buk. I persevered with this remedy and the ulcer is healed." 4

$4 SPENT ON IT SAVED 2 FINGERS

"I cannot express my gratitude for what Zam-Buk has done for me," writes Mr. J. V. Besnard, of 539 Craig St. E., Montreal. "In an accident at work my hand was so badly crushed the doctor said he would have to amputate two fingers. Naturally I didn't want this, so decided to try Zam-Buk first. I applied Zam-Buk daily, and by the time I had used $4 worth, the injury was completely healed. My fingers were saved!"

Just another illustration of the healing power of Zam-Buk. Accidents will happen. It may be your turn next. Better get a box and keep it handy. Send coupon below and receive a free trial box. 5

The Joys

Of whiter, cleaner teeth

Let this test reveal them

Here is a way which has brought to millions prettier teeth and safer. You will never go without its benefits when once you find them out.

Accept the test we offer. Watch the results for a few days. They will be a revelation.

By fighting film

The results come by fighting film on teeth—that viscous film you feel. Under old methods, much of that film resists the tooth brush, clings and stays.

Soon the film discolors, then forms dingy coats, so white teeth lose their beauty.

Most tooth troubles are also due to film. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. And they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Few people, in old-way brushing, escape the film-caused troubles.

Ways of escape

Dental science has now found two effective film combatants. One acts to disintegrate the film, one to remove it without harmful scouring. Able authorities proved these methods by many careful tests. Then a new-type tooth paste was created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

Careful people of some 50 nations have adopted this tooth paste, largely by dental advice.

Pepsodent meets the new-day requirements, based on modern research. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, also its starch digestant.

Those are Nature's agents for neutralizing acids and digesting starch deposits. Pepsodent gives them manifold effect, while old ways reduced their power. Thus it brings new cleanliness, new protection, without using harmful grit.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

You will be surprised and delighted. Cut out coupon now.

Protect the Enamel
Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

ARMED BANDITS IN PETERBORO STAGE BATTLE

Jean Mervin Attacked Outside Her Home — Lieut.-Col. C. H. Ackerman's Home Received Attention.

REVOLVERS USED

Three murderous hold-up men paid particular attention to the west end of Peterboro on Saturday night and Sunday morning, staging one hold-up in the city, one attempted burglary, and another hold-up on the gravel road. Although desperate characters, and, judging by their actions, capable of any act, they were beaten off in every case, in one case only after exchanging shots with Chief of Police Newhall.

Miss Jean Mervin, daughter of John Mervin, was held up at her home on Monaghan Road on Saturday night while on her way from the store where she is cashier carrying between $400 and $500 in cash. On turning to enter her home she was confronted by three men, who attacked her, and demanded her money. Miss Mervin pluckily put up a fight which beat her bandits off until one of them hit her on the head. Finding that they would finally overpower her she thrust a parcel at her attackers which they seized and made off. After a few minutes they found they had been fooled by the astute young lady, the parcel containing only wearing apparel. Disgusted, they threw it away.

Miss Mervin telephoned the police station and men were on the scene of the hold-up inside two minutes. They scoured the district and threw a cordon around the city, but saw nothing of the bandits.

Pitched Battle.

Chief Newhall left his car at the boundary and was keeping watch there when he saw a man moving in the direction of Lieut.-Col. C. H. Ackerman's home. The Chief approached quietly on the lawns and was close to the house before he was seen. In a gruff voice he was ordered to "Stand back," and on his command to the man to stand still a shot was fired, which went wide of his head by only an inch. The Chief was in the light of a street lamp, while his antagonist was in the shadow of the house. The Chief replied and the man fell.

Knowing the tricks of such men, Chief Newhall stood back and ordered the man to get up. He made a spring for the back fence, firing at the Chief as he went over.

Chief Newhall gave chase through the back gardens and over fences, occasionally being shot at, and on two occasions taking careful aim at his antagonist, on both occasions, he believes, making his shots tell. On one the bandit was perched on a fence when the Chief's bullet struck him in the shoulder and he fell from the fence, swearing.

Great inconvenience was caused the police by young men who came from their homes and ran through the gardens at great risk to themselves, and contributing to the getaway of the bandits. One young man was at the same time menaced by Chief Newhall and another policeman, refusing to halt on ther call.

The bandits, it is believed, had their car waiting and made their escape.

On Gravel Road.

At about three o'clock on Sunday morning the bandits swept down Monaghan road and on to the Highway in a large car without lights. They were pursued by the police car which was, however, unable to keep up the speed set by the escaping bandits on the level. At Bewdley all trace of them was lost in a heavy fog.

On Sunday it was learned that shortly after the car disappeared at Bewdley a general store at Campbellcroft was entered and stripped of cash, merchandise and everything of value.

While patrolling the boundary after the hold-up two of the policemen saw a car speed down the gravel road to Charlotte Street. They gave chase but failed to round it up until it had reached McDonnell St. on Aylmer. Here they were told by the occupants who had come from Toronto, that they were mistaken for the bandits. The car had escaped from the bandits near Fraserville, the occupants said, and thought the police car contained the men who had attempted the hold-up there.

Police Car Punctured

It was found by the police that their car had been put out of action by puncturing the tires. There were eight holes in a hind tire and five in the spare indicating the genius of the bandits The fact that the spare tire was punctured could not be told by handlight and it was not until time had been wasted in replacing the punctured tire that it was found the spare also was useless. Meantime, however three other cars had been commandeered by the police to carry them to the scene of the disturbance.

FUR BOW-KNOTS.

Bow-knots of fur are placed on the new frocks just as one of ribbon or silk might be—on the shoulder, hip, or directly in the front, after the fashion of a bow-tie.

NARROWER SKIRTS.

Skirts for next spring are to be much narrower, it is rumored, and it is believed they will be much shorter, too.

INITIALED HATS.

Initials are now seen even on hats. New Paris importations in millinery show them on the brims and crowns of the new tailleurs.

A Thought

CAVANVILLE HAD AN ANNIVERSARY

Church Well Filled Both Morning and Evening—Special Music.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 13.—Cavanville Methodist Church was appropriately decorated with fruits, vegetables, grain, etc., on Sunday for the occasion of its annual Thanksgiving services, Rev. G. Carruthers, B.A., of Cartwright, being the preacher for the day, exchanging with the pastor, Rev. R. T. Richards, who took charge of anniversary services at Cadmus, one of Mr. Carruthers' appointments, in order to leave the latter free to supply on the Cavan circuit.

The church was well filled both morning and evening in spite of unfavorable roads and weather, and the services were marked by an unlifting spiritual atmosphere, bringing broadening vision to speaker and listeners. The special musical numbers prepared by he choir included, in the evening, the anthem, "Life's Fleeting Day," with solo by Mr. R. Sutton, and trio taken by Messrs McDowell, Carley and Sutton, and a duet, "He Guides," by Misses Muriel Matchett and Margaret Lang, Mrs. A. Kennedy supplying the alto in the chorus.

The minister chose his text from John xiv., I, "In my Father's house are many mansions," prefacing his sermon by a brief outline of some of the things for which, as Canadians, we have reason to be thankful, a subject calling for special consideration at this season. The mistaken idea that we think we live for the things which we have achieved, but which soon lose their lustre, was pointed out by the speaker, who stated that we really live for the things which we still hope to attain, which are out on the sky-line, the power, peace, wealth maybe, fame, love which lie beyond—these are the things which keep life going. The cynic will probably contend to the contrary but the fact is there is a vast difference between the cynic and the critic since the latter is a valuable asset to society and is often right in his conclusions, but the cynic because he is unsympathetic cannot be right, and this class are but the superficial observers and thinkers outside the Church, throwing stones and giving nothing of themselves in service to humanity or to God.

The promise of the text Is one given by the Saviour to stir the soul, to put hope in the spirit as one goes about the daily, humdrum tasks. It is also a call to the best that ever can be. "In my Father's house are many mansions," and the Father's house is in the human soul, while the "mansions" are the things we may do and become by the power resident in ourselves through the divine touch of God.

Three "mansions" possible in human experience were mentioned by the speaker. First the capacity to get joy out of sorrow which is the challenge of life since from sorrow we are never free. But to "learn to sip nectar from the rim of the glass of sorrow," to trust and smile bravely when grief and affliction have laid heavy hands upon what is held dearest, may charm away half the woe, and though the heart naturally shrinks and cries out that such action is not possible, "you can do just that because of the Master's promise."

"Thrice blessed are they who heal us of our own despisings," was the second point of the speaker, who urged that the soul should realize its own worth. Nothing so kills ambition, and the desire to live, replacing hope with despair as the feeling, "I don't count." "Doing the lower when the highest is possible, is the greatest tragedy of human life," hence the vast importance of realizing what you may be and reaching out, by God's help, to fulfill His plan.

Lastly, God opens the golden gate into Christian service and to possess this "mansion" lies within the reach of everyone. Men may be saved by going out after their brothers. Sin abounds at all times and in all places, but "grace does much more abound." Given a concrete task for service and even those who seem the most hopeless and indifferent will respond beyond the most sanguine expectations. This is the reason why millions lie "in Flanders' fields" to-day—they gave all in response to the call to a definite service.

"Where cross the crowded ways of life,
Where sound the cries of race and clan,
Above the noise of selfish strife,
We hear Thy voice, O Son of Man."

Sunday marked the twenty-first occasion when Thanksgiving services have been observed in the Cavanville Church, Rev. H. V. Mounteer, who has since passed to his reward, having been the pastor when the present church building was erected.

Your wife's salary—what is it?

WE ask the question to emphasize the fact that wives do not get salaries: they just work for their board and clothes. They can't lay aside anything for times of sickness or old age. Their husbands are supposed to do that for them.

It is selfish of a man not to make provision for his wife in the event of his death. To be sure the law gives her a definite portion of his estate; but supposing he leaves no estate? Business risks, bad investments, hard times, luxuries—these may eat up the estate and leave her penniless.

An Imperial Life policy will provide the one definite, sure and easily obtained provision for your wife; and she deserves something definite and sure—doesn't she?

To-day—while you are insurable—ask us to send you our free booklet "The Creation of an Estate." It explains how you can in this way make provision for your family if you die, or for your own old age.

ARMISTICE DAY PARADE OF CITY WAR VETERANS IN HONOR OF WAR DEAD

Hon. Dr. Henri S. Beland Represented Dominion Government at Peterborough Memorial Service—Address by Judge Huycke.

CENOTAPH TRIBUTE

Peterborough's dead were remembered on Sunday by hundreds of citizens who filled the Grand Opera House, taxing the seating accommodation to the utmost. Between five and six hundred veterans paraded for a drumhead service at the Cenotaph, and later marched to the big commemorative service in the Opera House, making an imposing array. Rangers' Band, under Lieut. W. H. Peryer; the Machine Gun Pipe Band under Pipe-Major John Smith; and the 57th Regiment Bugle Band, headed the parade ,and took a prominent and pleasing part in the services

The Cenotaph service reflected in its simplicity the spirit of the men in whose honour the monument is erected Gathered in a hollow square around the plain memorial, the soldiers were reminded by the throbbing drums and plaintive bugles of those other days when they laid many comrades under the sod of Flemish and French battlefields that had been won by their bravery and sacrifice.

A rolling of the drums that swelled until it beat its way to the heart of every hearer, a lowering of the flag to half-mast, a sounding of the "Last Post," and the placing of wreaths on the Cenotaph—this was the tribute paid by the veterans of Peterborough to those other veterans who did not return. Full of dignity and impressive to the hundreds of civilians who gathered to join the soldiers in their service, its full significance was known only to those who had seen those die in whose honour it was done

Public Service

At the public service in the Grand Opera House, presided over by Dr. N. H. Sutton, the speakers were the Hon. Dr. Henri S. Beland, Minister of D.S.C.R. in the Dominion Government; G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons; His Honour Judge E. C. S. Huycke, Rev. (Captain) James Rollins, overseas chaplain; and the chairman.

Dr. Sutton, in the opening address explained the aims of the G.W.V.A., and referred to the occasion marked by Sunday's services.

"We celebrate to-day," he said, "the successful accomplishment of a long and arduous task, when on 11th November, 1918, the Armistice was signed. We remember amid our rejoicing that the sad part of to-day's celebration is that many of those who started out with us are not to-day here, and never will be."

Dr. Sutton declared strongly in favour of maintaining the celebration on the day on which the Armistice was signed. "It shall not be made a convenience for a travellers' association or any other matter of convenience," he said, amid loud applause. "There is too much associated with the day to have it juggled around for convenience' sake."

In introducing Dr. Beland, Mr. Gordon remarked that the distinguished visitor had chosen Peterborough out of a long list of invitations he had received. The executive of the G.W.V.A. decided some months ago that in view of the number and quality of the men who enlisted from this city, it was fitting that Armistice Day should be marked by the presence of a Minister of the Crown. Dr. Beland, knowing what had been done by Peterborough and the sacrifice that had been made here, accepted the invitation.

Dr. Beland, because of his experience in a German prison and his services to the country, is particularly fitted to hold the portfolio of Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, Mr. Gordon said.

Most Memorable Date.

Dr. Beland, with his inimitable French accent and his graceful, and graphic gesures, won the hearts of his audience, who could have listened with pleasure to a much longer discourse from him.

"It is doubtful whether when history chronicles the story of the Christian era any date will be set down as more memorable than the 11th of November. We all agree that no day has so much significance in modern history as the day of the Armistice," he said. "It was my happy privilege, after three years spent in a German prison, to have entered again this dear country of mine when the news was flashed from continent to continent that the great heroic struggle had at last come to a end. From continent to continent and from ocean to ocean the angel of victory was coming and touching as it were, with the tip of his wing, the flag that is dear to us all. Human language alone is inadequate when it comes to expressing the sentiment that event provokes It was made up first of joy, of relief, of enthusiasm. The four years of great achievement which are and will remain the most crucial test of human endurance, had come to an end.

"But although everywhere the feeling of hope was permeated with the sentiment of joy there was something doleful and dismal about the occasion . Though rejoicing, though hymns of praise and gratitude ascended to the throne on high, yet deep in the soul and in the most tender part of everyone's heart there was a pain—a regret—a sorrow. Though we had accomplished the worthy task, yet we could not conceal from ourselves the dire fact that fifty thousand of our brave sons had to remain on the other side for ever."

Never Doubted Result.

Remarking that on this the fifth anniversary of the armistice, the expectations that were hopefully nourished have not been realized, Dr. Beland declared he is an optimist ."I was an optimist when in my cell, within a stone's throw of the Imperial palace in Berlin, I was praying for the success of the Allies. During those grey years we had many gloomy days, but we never doubted the result—the ultimate result." (Prolonged applause.) "Even on the fateful Easter when the tall blonde, N. C. O. Schmidt came to me and confided the information that the Germans were bombarding Paris, I tried to persuade my interlocutant that it was a phyiscal impossibility.

But Schmidt said "it is true!" The British prisoners and I got together and framed a resolution regarding the information. We put the motion formally and passed it unanimously—it was: "It is a lie." —(Laughter and applause.)

Dr. Beland related many incidents of his prison experiences, his references to the overbearing Germans, and his witty sallies bringing from his audience spontaneous laughter, and his occasional lapses into pathos sweeping his hearers along into a realization of the terrible toll of war. He told of the fall of Antwerp, of his serving as doctor under the Germans until his arrest, and of his imprisonement with men of all possible nations in the world, even neutrals," he said. At a time when German sailors had been reported killed by British sailors an edict was sent forth that a certain number of British prisoners would pay for every German sailor killed. "We did not know," the speaker said, "when we would be called down into the prison yard and shot."

Sympathy Needed.

The task of presiding over the Department of Soldiers Civil Re-Establishment is arduous but agreeable, Dr. Beland said. A rigid hand administering the law must give way in this Department, to the human touch and a sentiment of sympathy.

In an eloquent appeal to his hearers to keep green the memory of the men who well in the Great War the speaker said: "Let us never forget those who have departed this life in the cause of their country. It is well that we should have these public demonstrations, that we should pray for them in public, that we should exalt their conduct and courage and set them for an example for ourselves and our children. But it is more important that at the very bottom of your souls, in a corner of your hearts, you should erect an altar to them, and there, within yourself, enshrine their memory with spiritual and fadeless flowers. This spirit of gratitude should stir among us until every heart has ceased to throb. To-day is a day of the dead."

Appealed for Concord.

Eloqtently and touchingly referring to the unity of the men who died, Dr. Beland urged the creation of a spirit of concord in the world. "Let us try to bring together for the sake of concord in the world the great nations, United States and the British Empire. Let us attempt to promote a sentiment of brotherhood and fraternity between the two big elements that constitute the population of Canada, the English and the French. We are the offspring and descendants of the two most chivalrous races in the world, and by a decree of providence we live in the land of Canada alongside each other, Let us carry on this spirit of brotherhood in a true spirit of Canadianism.

We have before us the symbol of all the noble acts of man. Let us imitate them. Let us imitate those who have given us not so very long ago the symbol of sacrifice—the sacrifice of human life for the cause of humanity. Only in this way can we do our duty to God, our country and humanity."

Requiem.

Rev. James Rollins and Rev. O. G. H. Lloyd, conducted a requiem in which the reading of "Greater love than this hath no man," and the 23rd Psalm, struck responsive chords throughout the audience. "Nearer My God to Thee," was sung by Messrs. Everett, Coleman, Devey and Smith.

The "Last Post" was sounded by buglers of the 57th Regiment, and the rolling drums preceded a two minutes' silence that was pregnant with emotion, followed by the singing of "There is no Death," by John Smith.

His Honor Judge Huycke.

His Honor Judge Huycke gave an address vibrant with feeling in commemoration of the Peterboro men who made the supreme sacrifice. He referred to the long honor roll that was printed on the Armistice page in Saturday's Examiner. "It is of them I think," he said. "Rupert Brook spoke truly when he said that his lonely grave would be for ever and for ever a part of England. On the fields of France and Flanders, everywhere the flag of England waves, there are spots in all those places that are and will be for ever part of Canada.

If there is anything that the people of Peterboro are proud of, and should be proud of, it is the spots in France and Flanders which are made by the hallowed dust of Canadians who lie there, for ever part of Canada and part of Peterboro. These men have taught us that gold is but dross, that prosperity is but a fleeting shadow, they have given their lives for a sacred idea—for you and for me—that babes may sleep uninjured and unterrified. There is an inspiration in those sacrifices that cannot fail to touch the people of this land. Holiness has come back to this country, and honor and love. They have taught us what honor is. The boys who are living and here, and more than all the boys who have died, have brought us into our heritage,"

Wreaths on Cenotaph.

Among the wreaths placed on the Cenotaph were tributes from the Sons of England, Lansdowne Lodge, in memory of F. Thomas, R. Gifford, I. Chandler and G. Sadler; from N. Edward, in memory of Jack Ranger, from G. N. Gordon, from the 57th Sister I.O.D.E.; from the Peterboro Branch G.W.V.A.; from Dr. Henri S. Beland; from A. Ranger in memory of Jack and G.....y; from Otonabee Chapter IO.D.E.; and three in memory of Fred Stanley, Fred Cooper and Trevor Cuffe.

R. J. Devey led the singing in the Opera House service, S. Whatley, Secretary of the G.W.V.A., was responsible for the arrangements, and took part in both services, marshalling the parade.

TORONTO NURSE Speaks in Praise of WINCARNIS

"As a Graduate Trained Nurse, I have for many years attended patients, in both hospitals and private homes, for whom Wincarnis had been prescribed, and I have observed that the preparation always caused an improvement in these cases.

I have repeatedly been astonished at the quickness with which weak and nervous patients respond to the restorative and strengthening action of Wincarnis. I have often personally derived great benefit from the use of Wincarnis myself when in a run-down condition after a particularly hard case.

I learned of Wincarnis while nursing in England, and since coming to Canada I have found physicians just as enthusiastic in praise of the tonic effect of the preparation. I always feel more confident of a happy convalescence when attending a patient for whom Wincarnis has been prescribed."

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Clive Roberts Barton

MRS. CUCKOO BIRD'S STORY

"Goodby," called Nancy and Nick happily. "We'll tell the Fairy Queen all about you."

Mister Cardinal Bird flew out of the magnolia tree and Missez Cuckoo Bird flew after him, her wings flashing lilac and green in the sunlight.

Next came the Twins, not flying, but walking faster than any little boy or girl ever walked before, in their magic shoes.

They were on their way to an oleander tree in Dixie Land where Missez Warbler was sitting on her nest.

Missez Warbler was as cross as Tweedle Dum because somebody had laid an extra egg in her nest and expected her to hatch it. hSe was telling people that Missez Cuckoo had done it.

So now they were on their way to Missez Warbler's nest to find out all about it.

The minute Missez Warbler saw them she began to call out, "Here she comes! Here comes that lazy Missez Cuckoo, who won't build her own nest and who expects other people to bring up her children! Have you anything to say for yourself, Missez Cuckoo?"

"I've been trying to say something all along," said gentle Missez Cuckoo, "but everybody talks so much. I haven't had a chance. You're mistaken. I do build my own nest- I know people say that I don't, but I do. I never laid an egg in anybody else's nest in my life. I have a cousin over in Europe (who is a disgrace to the family) and she does it, but American cuckoos are very different. We only try to be useful and eat up as many bugs as we can. And we sing to make people happy."

"Then if you have a nest, why aren't you on it?" asked Missez Warbler in surprise.

"That's another thing that we cuckoos do in Dixie Land," explained Missez Cuckoo. "Two or three mother cuckoos often have a partnership nest and take turns keeping the eggs warm so the others can be out destroying bugs. It's my turn now and I must be going."

Just then a new voice called out, "Ha, ha, ha! I've been listening! That's my egg in your nest, Missez Warbler. I don't mind your knowing." And Missez Cow Bird flew away before anybody could say a word.

"Oh, we're awfully sorry!" apologized Missez Warbler kindly to Missez Cuckoo.

"You're right we are, Missez Cuckoo!" declared Mister Cardinal Bird. "And for one I am going to stop gossiping. Why didn't you tell us before?"

"My friends knew it," said Missez Cuckoo softly. "And when strangers jump at conclusions without knowing what they are talking about it is usually best to let them alone. Goodby, everybody, I must go now."

"Goodby," called Nancy and Nick happily. "We'll tell the Fairy Queen all about you."

Full Power Out Of Every Stroke!

PEOPLE who skate for the first time on C.C.M. Automobile Skates are delighted with their easy, free-running qualities.

The reason for this is largely due to the Special Chrome Nickel Steel used. This steel takes a hard, keen, smooth-running edge, which enables you to get full power out of every stroke. A little effort gives much speed!

The blades of C.C.M. Skates also have a tough interior "core", thanks to an ingenious C.C.M. method of heat treatment, which eliminates brittleness and makes C.C.M. skates practically unbreakable. They will stand very severe usage without bending or snapping.

There are C.C.M. Skates for hockey, for racing, for figure skating, for pleasure skating. Skates for men, women, boys and girls. 14 different models, from 90c to $15 per pair. From the lowest price to the highest, each one a good skate for the price asked.

Scars That Worked Death Failed Confessed Slayer

Astrologer Lay on Sick Bed and Plotted Configurations of Evil With Necromancer's Art.

MARSHFIELD Nov. 13.—Flickering like evil portents in the blue vault above the stars and planets moved in their courses to wigwag death for Mrs. Ebba Covell here in the most weird and brutal astrological murder ever recorded in modern times.

Shining down through the heavenly night over lovers' trysts and peaceful homes their pin-points of fire radiated cruel charts of crime for Arthur Covell her brother-in-law confessed murderer who lay on his sick bed with a broken back and plotted configurations of evil with a necromancer's art.

Today this man branded archdemon by the law lies behind bars of steel where he has been lodged, that the witchery of his zodiac plots may no longer be abroad in Coos county.

Charged With Murder

First degree murder charges have been placed against the 46-year-old astrologer and his 15-year-old nephew Alton Covell whom the uncle has confessed he used as a hypnotic tool to suffocate the women to death with an ammonia-soaked rag.

The boy himself a strange problem in psychology has unfolded a tale almost incredible in this day of science picturing himself as his uncle's death agent who with arms of steel wrapped themselves about Mrs. Covell's neck in the embrace of death.

Scarcely out of knee trousers he occupies an adjoining cell to his astrologer kin who when Jupiter was in ascendancy to lend imagined support to his machinations wrote cabalistic messages of plotted crime and handed them to his nephew-ally for execution.

Super-Detective Work

Expose of the demoniac workings of the astrological plotter however might never have been brought about had it not been for Luke S. May famous Seattle criminologist who arrived on the scene to find the slain woman's chiropractor husband falsely charged with her death.

Bungling authorities had ascribed her end to a broken neck and fastened guilt upon the husband believing he had manipulated a vertebra in her neck by means of his chiropractic knowledge.

Scoffing the theory already held May exhumed the woman's body for research purposes at his laboratories and discovered the ammonia burns which are only produced on dead tissue.

From then on his trail was blazed straight to the astrological hell-hole of Covell and the nephew accomplice through the agency of an impromptu course in planetary lore which gained him admission to the astrologer's confidence.

Finds Death Code

Going without sleep for days May when opportunity presented itself unearthed among the soothsayer's effects a ciphered code couched in zodiac hieroglyphics which when transcribed proved to be assignments of murder to the 15-year-old nephew.

Among other instructions the gruesome markings contained a proscription list of 29 persons whom Covell had marked for death.

The boy was to murder first, and then carry out the wishes' household goods through windows and doors which the uncle with great elaboration of detail had showed him how to remove beforehand.

To obtain a confession of guilt May in the melodramatic role of an ultra Sherlock Holmes waited until the planet Jupiter was in ascendancy of power for him and setting against Covell.

Then he struck aided by imaginary power from the astral body of which Covell the astrologer stood in mortal terror.

Tricked Into Confession

Confronted with indisputable facts of his cunning bared by the crimnologist who then stood in the graces of Covell's favorite star the soothsayer spewed up his guilt and begged for the hangman.

The same subterfuge worked equally well when applied on the nephew who in addition to confessing his stepmother's murder revealed scores of additional crimes which he charged his uncle had planned for him to perpetrate at future dates.

Swift justice is promised by officials to the confessed slayers who slew in obedience to configured demands from the heavens.

Sheriff's deputies are also checking on several still unsolved murders in the county believing the crimes can be laid to the door of Covell.

The slain woman whose death brought about the astrologer's downfall was Covell's sister-in-law. It is believed she was killed because of her knowledge of crimes to be committed.

Science vs. Alchemy

How many additional accomplices besides the nephew were used in conduct of the murder combine has not yet been determined. But police are confident that there were others and are now checking to find out.

Forged wills of those marked for doom were found pressed between the pages of the zodiac murder book proving that Covell was actuated by a motive for gain in his deviltry.

As the stars were inclined he went forth to slay.

Twinkling in their blue vault they whispered death and destruction. But murder will out.

It is so in every case and proved true in Covell's instance—when the planetary wigwag semaphored his end in a strange battle between modern science and the alchemy of the soothsayer.

THREE MEN ESCAPE FROM PENITENTIARY

Climbed the Walls of the Penitentiary Yesterday in the Fog.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 13.—(Canadian Press).—George Van Horst, convicted murderer, serving a life sentence; Roland H. Smith, serving a 15-year sentence for manslaughter, and Herbert Burton, serving six years for highway robbery, all of whom, it was said, had climbed the New Westminster Penitentiary walls yesterday during the fog and escaped, were found yesterday on the roof of the prison, where they had been hiding since evading their guards in the fog.

Capture of Bandit Butler Reveals Romantic Record

Nothing Is Lacking--Story Replete With Mystery, Love, Murder, Fidelity and Honor of Thieves.

By JOHN O'BRIEN.

PARIS (By Mail to United Press).—When Alphonse Mourey, the international bandit who held up the household of the New York banker, A. R. Shattuck, and got away with several thousand dollars in cash and jewelry, was captured after a stirring fight with French police, there was revealed a real life story which would supply material enough for an entrancing tale of fiction.

Nothing is lacking. Mystery, love, murder, the honor of thieves, the wireless of the underworld, fidelity under stress of poverty and temptation—every one of the strings on which writers of popular crime stories play their little sentimental symphonies is represented. There are even disguised detectives and the inevitable revolver duel with the bold, bad man when he is cornered.

Once Before Imprisoned

Not even the French police know anything very definite about Mourey's career, except that in Barcelona he was called the "Caid of the Crooks" and in Paris the "St. Antoine Kid," he having lived here in the quarter bearing the name of the saint. But the only time they ever "got" him previously was in 1905, when Mourey was sent to Devil's Island, the penal colony off the coast of South America, for his part in the murder of a woman restaurant cashier.

A Perfect Butler

Since that time his life record is mostly in the archives of the police of the United States and Mexico. Banker Shattuck thought he was a perfect butler. So did another American banker in Illinois. Several wealthy people in the Middle West took him at his own valuation as a first-class chef. Mr. Shattuck awoke to a realization of the facts when he found himself and his family locked in the cellar of their Washington Square home and recognized the chief of the hold-up gang as the erstwhile trusted servant.

Beating away from New York after the haul, Mourey found that the life of the international crook was exposed to many pitfalls. In Mexico he learned that there was a reward, offered by the New York banker, of $15,000 for his capture. His own pals he could trust, but what about the others? So, he quickly got what he could for his share of the plunder—there were three others in the game—and took the first boat for Paris.

Safe in Paris

In Paris he was safe. Here, at least, he had a friend. Berthe Mulon, known in her set as "pepe," had met Mourey when he was the exalted leader of the outside-the-law band of a part of Paris which might be compared with the "Gas House" district of New York half a generation ago. Her calling was such that nobody was scandalized at their association. "He had such distinguished manners," Berthe said of the other day. "How could I resist him?"

When "Gabri" Mourey came back to his old haunts, with the police of two continents on his track and more than half of his own world out for a chance to get that $15,000 of which the whole underworld was talking, he decided that for him the only place was in a Parisian suburb, not deep enough in the provinces for the local gendarmes to get suspicious, not too close to Paris itself for the watchful eyes of the police of the capital. He chose Chelles-Gournay on the Marne, and became a fisherman.

Sweetheart Followed

There for seven months he was visited three or four times a week by Berthe Mulon, who brought him money and news. The chief part of the news was that the Paris police knew her and that she was followed each time she went to see him. Her "earnings" amounted to about 60 or 70 francs, possibly three and a half to four dollars, a day. She had only to drop a hint to the Prefecture of Police in Paris and $15,000, or a fortune beyond the dreams of avarice to one of her calling, were hers.

Yet it took the best Paris sleuths several months to find just where it was that Berthe went so often. She changed cars three or four times on her way out, and when she thought she was shadowed, returned home. One evening the detectives were too close to be shaken. Mourey's hiding place was discovered. Then two Paris inspectors also became fishermen and frequented the little restaurant by the name of "L'Ami Emile" at Chelles-Gournay.

Pistol Battle

Two weeks more and one afternoon Mourey, after a pistol battle which scarred all the walls of the picturesque roadhouse, took the road for the central prison at Fresnes, to await trial by the French courts for his escape from Devil's Island or extradition to New York.

Meanwhile, Berthe has gone back to the little village where she was born to get the necessary documents whereby she can marry the bandit. "I'll be able to see him once more anyway," she explained. "And if he goes back to Devil's Island I can join him there some day."

GARDEN OF SHAH IS GOING STRONG

Under the Directorship of M. B. Chenhall.

M. B. Chenhall, director of "The Garden of the Shah," to be produced under Kiwanis auspices at the Grand Opera House on the 20th and 21st of this month, reports much interest taken in the practices, and an excellent turnout of the cast.

"The Garden of the Shah" is an offering in two distinct parts, unrelated in atmosphere and staging, except for the fact that they present in turn a musical revue set in Dixieland and a musical revue set in the Orient, presenting with music and dialogue the colorful life of two distant sections of the globe.

"Away Down South" is the background for the first part, with the Sans Souci sugar plantation on the banks of the Mississippi as the scene of the romance of Rose Farley, played by Miss Ernestine McManus. With it are the songs of the southland, and a chorus of southern planters, their wives, sailors and servants.

The second part is the principal section of the production, staged in Persia, in "The Garden of the Shah," where Canadian mining engineers come to work the Shah's gold mine, and both fall in love with two lovely daughters of the Orient, Zohdah and Lohlah, played by Miss Mathilde Masson and Miss Greta LeBarr. Music of the East dominates this portion of the entertainment, which is staged with an Oriental setting of special scenery.

The music throughout is described as being exceptionally pretty. Choruses, solos and duets, the latter predominating, give life and movement to the dual production.

BANQUET GIVEN TO HON. JAMES LYONS

One of the Greatest Public Demonstrations Ever Given a Public Man in The Province.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Nov. 13.—What Hon. Howard Ferguson, Hon. Dr. Godfrey and Hon. Colonel Price, members of the Cabinet, described as one of the greatest public demonstrations ever given a public man in the Province, took place here last night in the form of a banquet to Hon. James Lyons, Minister of Lands and Forests, and the Soo's representative in the Government. The gathering, numbering eight hundred, was composed of men and women of all political stripes.

Mr. Lyons referred with feeling to the fact that those who had fought him in the last election had now gathered to give him a welcome and encouragement. He spoke of the resources of the North and said that the future of the Province, and in fact the Dominion, depended on its resources. What land was not favorable for farming, he said, abound in timber and mineral wealth. Iron ore should be the greatest producing mineral of the North, but the fact remained that while $800,000,000 in minerals had been produced here last year, not a cent of it resulted from iron.

"Our mission," said Mr. Ferguson, "is to build up the iron and steel industry in the stretch of 1,000 miles of which the Sault is the centre. The Province and the Dominion must create new sources of wealth, and the North, with its raw materials, is the solution. You have low grade iron that must be made to compete with Mesaba iron. This must be worked out. The Province imports $150,000,000 worth of raw material each year that we have untapped in this rich area.

"The Province should and will probe the present conditions, and the Sault will undoubtedly be the centre of this great industry when it is worked out.

"Now we are dependent in the iron and steel industry in imported material. The Province should have, and will have, a trained geologist to make an exhaustive study of Northern Ontario iron ore. Iron is the basis of all industry. I intend to proceed along this line, development in Canada, and the Ottawa Government should supplement an Ontario bounty on iron ore. A move will be made at the next session to provide such bounty. I believe the Dominion Government will look at it in a broad way and supplement to such an extent that a firm foundation will be laid for this great industry."

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

WAFFLES

Who doesn't like waffles? Nobody!

For breakfast, Sunday night lunch or tea waffles will "go like hot cakes" and the maker will be happy in her popularity.

The batter for waffles is much the same as that for hot cakes. More eggs are used if a rich, light waffle is desired, but one egg can be beaten in such a way that a delicious puffy waffle is the result.

Sweet or sour milk is used.

Sour Milk Waffles

One egg, 2 cups sour milk, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon baking powder, 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Mix and sift flour, soda and salt. Add yolk of egg well beaten. Work perfectly smooth and beat in melted butter. Add milk and beat with a slotted spoon or a strong dover beater. Beat white of egg until stiff and dry. Add baking powder to beaten white. Fold into first mixture. Put one tablespoon of the batter in each section of the iron and cover. The iron should be hot enough to turn almost as soon as covered. If an electric iron is used add another tablespoon of melted butter to the rule.

Fill the socket of an ordinary waffle iron with salt and there will be no burning fat while baking the waffles.

Sweet Milk Waffles

Two eggs, 2 cups flour, 2½ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 cups milk, 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add yolks of eggs beaten until thick and lemon colored. Mix thoroughly and beat in melted butter. Add milk and beat well. Fold in whites of eggs beaten stiff and dry. Bake as in preceding recipe.

The secret of tender, crisp waffles lies in the baking rather than in the number of eggs used. The iron should be well heated on both sides and well greased before filling. The heat should be even and evenly distributed. A round iron fits over the flame of a gas range better than a square one.

Some old waffle recipes use as many as seven or eight eggs. This is quite out of the question these days and also unnecessary. Buttermilk was also considered imperative, but sweet milk waffles can be made just as good.

The recipes given are calculated to serve four persons.

DISTINCTIVE BAGS

Initials of marcasite give distinction to bags of black moire, beautifully lined and outfitted with powder puff, lip stick and eyebrow pencil.

CRYSTAL EARRINGS

Smoked crystal is the material from which most unusual looking earrings and necklaces are now made.

OTTOMAN SILK

Ottoman silk, lined and interlined, is made into most attractive suits and three-piece costumes for winter wear.

DECEIVING CAPES

Capes that swing from the shoulder to the hips in the back are very smart and are very becoming to the figure that is a shade too plump.

NORWOOD I.O.D.E. HELD AN AT HOME

Wreaths Presented by the Chapter to Each of the Churches.

NORWOOD, Nov. 13.—The 40th Northumberland Chapter I. O. D. E. held a very successful and enjoyable 'at home' in the government armouries, on Friday eveing last. Guests were present from Hastings, Campbellford, Havelock, Peterborough, Toronto, and other places.

On Saturday a number of the young ladies of the village sold poppies for the local Chapter I. O. D. E. Every poppy available was disposed of. Wreaths were presented by the chapter to each of the churches, to be placed on their respective honor rolls.

Sunday Services

There was no service in the Anglican Church on Sunday morning as Rev. O'Conor Fenton had to be in Campbellford.

Rev. T. M. Wesley, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, delivered a very inspiring Thanksgiving sermon on Sunday morning, taking for his text, Psalm 116:12, "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits."

During the service a solo was rendered by Mr. W. J. Stares and the anthem, "Who Are These," was sung by the choir.

A Fire Alarm

On Sunday evening just as the several congregations were at worship, the fire bell peeled forth and as Norwood has nothing but a volunteer bucket brigade, there was considerable excitement. However, it was soon discovered that the cause of alarm was a chimney fire at Mr. H. G. Buck's residence on Peterborough Street, and very little, if any, damage was done.

The funeral of the late Mr. Robert Stinson was held on Monday afternoon from the family residence in Asphodel to the Norwood cemetery.

On Sunday morning the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Brooks passed away, aged nine days.

There passed away at the familyr esidence, King Street, on Sunday night, November 11th, another of Norwood's old and respected citizens in the person of Mr. W. E. McMillan, who is survived by his wife.

It is expected the Premier will take his stand on the ground that the Governments' policy is based on enforcement of the Treaty of Versailles and will demand a blanket vote of confidence.

Britain Reticent.

Until Premier Poincare has officially advised the British government regarding details of proposed new reparations enquiry, Great Britain will withhold formal expression of its attitude, says a despatch from London.

As suggested, a committee of experts, however, would apparently operate on even narrower basis than that suggested by Great Britain or the United States. It is stated that the government will decline to join it, as there is no indication that Premier Poincare intends to invite the United States' participation.

A later despatch says the Allied Reparations Commission to-day decided to hear representatives of Germany regarding the capacity of the Reich to pay reparation, the date of the hearing will be fixed later.

COURT STANLEY JOLLY MEETING LAST EVENING

Between Sixty and Seventy Members Took Part in the 33rd Anniversary.

A GOOD PROGRAM

The 33rd anniversary of Court Stanley, No. 7680, Ancient Order of Foresters, was fittingly celebrated last evening in a very jolly banquet held at the Empress Hotel, where between sixty and seventy members of the Order and their friends enjoyed a festive evening of song and speech making, along with a sumptuous meal served in the usual excellent style of the Empress management.

Thomas Hendry, P.D.C.R., was the chairman for the occasion, and opened the programme with a brief timely address, followed by the toast to "The King," and the National Anthem. The toast to "Our Empire" was also proposed by the chairman, and replied to in fine style by Bro. D. C. King, M.D. The toast to the "Ancient Order of Foresters," proposed by Bro. R. J. McWilliams, was responded to by Bro. Archie Martin, of Toronto, Secretary of the High Court, who in an able address outlined the aims and objects of the Order of Foresters, and referred to the insurance and juvenile branches.

The toast to "Our City and Provinces," proposed by Bro. H. McWha, in capable fashion, was replied to by W. H. Bradburn, M.L.A., one of the guests of the evening, in a manner that won an enthusiastic response from his hearers. The toast to "Court Stanley," proposed in good form by Bro. G. Record, was replied to by Bro. S. Mason, C.R. A complimentary testimonial to "The Press" and "The Empress Hotel," was tendered by Bro. J. Hendry of Kingston, and the toast to "The Medical Profession," by Bro. A. Day, was acknowledged by Bro. D. C. King, M.D. Bro. D. Hendry voiced the feelings of the assemblage in the toast to "Absent Brethren."

A feature of the banquet and the toast list was the well-worded and eloquent speeches of those taking part, their brief and capable addresses fitting in perfectly with the spirit of the gathering and the anniversary commemoration. The measure of attentive consideration and enthusiastic response accorded the speakers extended also to the delightful musical programme rendered by musicians whose various numbers met with hearty encores in every instance.

Bob Hendry brought down the house with his Lauder impersonations, and Jack Smith's vocal efforts were exceptionally good. Included in his solos, Mr. Smith gave the always popular "Absent," and formed a duet with Bob Hendry, both singers in Scotch costume, for "Two Nips of Scotch," and "A Bit of Scotch." Bob Hendry also gave a vocal solo. The work at the piano of W. H. Barry, accompanist of the evening, was excellent as usual.

The chairman referred with regret to the impending departure of Mr. Barry from the city, and to the generous and whole hearted manner in which he had helped out on many occasions with his musical ability.

Following the banquet, Bro. Archie Martin, H.C.S., of Toronto, presented the retiring District Chief Ranger, Thomas Hendry, with a past district Chief Ranger's Jewel, and proceeded to instal in office the new District Chief Ranger, Bro. A. Day.

Invitations were extended to G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., and to Mayor Taylor, to be present at the banquet, both of whom were unable to attend, owing to absence from the city.

THE WAR VETERANS DANCE LAST NIGHT

The Great War Veterans' Association finished their celebration of Armistice Day by holding a dance in their hall last evening, which was one of the most successful and well attended affairs in the history of the organization's social efforts. Some two hundred people were present in the big hall, which was decorated with flags and pennants, symbolic of the occasion. Comrades Keller and Crowe were in charge of arrangements, and excellent music for dancing was supplied by Taylors' four-piece orchestra. Prizes for the novelty dance were won by Miss Alberta Wilson and Mr. A. J. Arnott.

Owing to the success of last evening's affair, the G.W.V.A. has decided to hold two dances weekly during the season, one on Tuesday evening, when music will be provided by Taylor's orchestra, and one on Saturday evening, with music by Robinson's orchestra.

Sues With Doug.

Evelyn Brent, former leading lady for Douglas Fairbanks, has joined Doug and his wife, Mary Pickford, in the libel suit against an eastern magazine. The publication, their petition contends, asserted Miss Brent had caused a rift in the Fairbanks' marital life. This, all three deny. And what's more, they allege the magazine said Miss Brent was fired by "Doug" because she was "growing fat."

UPTOWN SHOPS

An amusing feature of the chase on Sunday morning was the unwilling participation of two passengers in a taxi which was commandeered by the police. These passengers, it is said, protested vigorously against being landed in the midst of a hold-up, but the police were urgent in their claims that the car carry them.

At Campbellcroft

A report from Campbellcroft, formerly Garden Hill, indicates that shortly after Chief Newhall lost the bandits' car in the fog, the general store of P. C. Hannah was broken into. The burglars made a clean-up of the premises, dry goods, boots and shoes and gents' furnishings being the chief booty. Mr. Hannah estimates his loss at over $1,000.

Chief Newhall's Views

Asked this morning regarding the hold-up, Chief Newhall intimated that such events are to be expected in view of the fact that no outside patrol is available. In the four months previous to Constable Grange's leaving the force there were only 27 minor thefts. During this period the police car patrolled the outlying districts regularly during the night. Since Grange left the force however, and the Chief decided to keep down expense in accord with Council's decree there has not been a man available for the steady outside patrol. In the four months since this patrol has been taken off there have been 87 much more serious thefts and burglaries.

The Chief is satisfied that the men who perpetrated the crime on Saturday will be speedily rounded up.

Persons residing in the vicinity of the scene of the shooting, say the police were speedily on the spot and that Chief Newhall was particularly fearless in his attack on the burglars who had him at a disadvantage he being in the light while they crouched in the shadows of the house.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13. — (United Press).—Prices were unsettled in the early dealings on the Stock Exchange, some observers attributing the irregularity to apprehension over the troubled situation in Germany, which was heightened by the threatened restoration of the Hohenzollern Monarchy, but sterling showed no disturbance over the developments abroad; instead, the rate on London recovered more than a cent in the early dealings, hence the condition was inevitable that stocks were continuing the re-action which started in the previous session rather than reflecting concern over European affairs. But there were no wide breaks. Consolidated Gas displayed a steadier tone, recovering fractionally to 59, but slight recessions were experienced by Baldwin, Bethlehem, General Motors, Dupont and other industrial leaders.

The re-actionary tendencies were eliminated from the general list before the close of the first hour, and many sections swung to the renewal of the forward movement. The low-priced rails developed special strength, activity being pronounced in Southern Railway, Rock Island and Erie. Among the industrial specialties the lead was taken by Jones Tea, which spurred 2½ points to 32 in response to the splendid showing of the October sales, which scored a gain of practically forty per cent. over the corresponding month last year. This improvement was interpreted to indicate that no difficulty would be encountered in maintaining the present $4 dividend. Air Reduction was another feature. This stock sold at 68 7-8, against Monday's low of 58¾, reflecting the intimation that earnings this year would approximate $16 a share, compared with the $4 dividend rate. Rail stocks continued active and higher.

SYNOPSIS.

At a first night performance in New York Lee Clavering newspaper columnist is attracted by a woman a few rows ahead of him who rises during the entr'acte turns her back to the stage and leisurely surveys the audience through her glasses. She is beautiful in an unusual way and Clavering stares at her fascinated. In fact the whole house is staring. Clavering encounters his relative Dinwiddie who declares that the woman is the image of Mary Ogden a society belle of thirty years ago who had married a Count Zattiany and lived abroad. They conclude this must be a daughter and Dinwiddie promises to question Judge Trent Mary Ogedn's attorney.

Trent's lips are sealed whereupon Dinwiddie enlists the services of Mrs. Oglethorpe a close friend of Mary Ogden's in her youth who begins investigations by boldly calling upon the fair unknown at the old Ogden home.

V. (Continued)

Mr. Dinwiddie to his surprise had found no difficulty in persuading her to investigate the mysteries of the Ogden mansion for she had leapt at once to the conclusion that the friend of her youth was in some way menaced by this presumptuous stranger of the fantastic resemblance. There had been a time when while indignantly repudiating the stories so prevalent for many years after Mary Ogden's marriage to Count Zattiany she had secretly believed and condoned them; not only because she had loved her devotedly and known something of her heavy disillusionment but because the wild secret life the exalted Countess Zittiany was believed to be leading fed her own suppressed longing s for romance and adventure. With the passage of years which had taken their toll of Mary's beauty and fascination and brought complete disillusionment to herself she had almost forgotten that old phrase; moreover it was many years since she had visited Europe and correspondence between the two friends once so intimate had almost ceased before the war. During that long interval she had heard nothing of her except that she was running a hospital in Buda Pesth but shortly after the close of the war she had been distressed to learn from a member of one of the various commissions to Vienna that Countess Zattiany was ill in a sanitarium. She had written at once but received no reply. Now she feared that some adventuress had taken advantage of a superficial resemblance —she dismissed Mr. Dinwiddie's protestations of the exactness of that resemblance as the maunderings of a weakened memory playing about among the ghosts of its youth—to scheme for the Ogden fortune. When told that Judge Trent was evidently shielding the woman her suspicions were redoubled. She had consistently hated Judge Trent for fifty years.

If on the other hand the creature.... were really Mary's daughter—and could prove it—well she would make up her mind what course to take when she met her.

"I'll wait in the library" she announced, and moved majestically down the hall. Then at a sound she paused and glanced toward the stair which rose on the left, opposite the library. A woman was descending, a woman only an inch or two shorter than herself and no less stately, with ashen

"'Good Day,' she said. 'Your pardon for the intrusion.'" blonde hair coiled low on her graceful neck and wearing a loose gown of pale green crepe with a silver girdle.

"My God!" exclaimed Mrs. Oglethorpe in a loud imperious voice, as if commanding the Almighty to leap from his throne and fly to her assistance. Then she leaned heavily on her cane.

The lady came quickly down the stairs and made a peremptory signal to the butler. As he disappeared she walked forward more slowly and paused within a few feet of her agitated guest. Her eyebrows were slightly raised, her face impassive. Not even those sharp old eyes staring at her guessed that she had been completely taken by surprise and was inwardly quaking.

Mrs. Oglethorpe could not speak for a moment. The years had dropped from her. She was once more a young woman come to spend the day with her favorite friend . . . or to attend a reception in the stately formal house on Murray Hill . . . high rooms filled with women wearing tight basques, bustles, full sweeping skirts, small hats or bonnets perched on puffs and braids. . . . Mary, the most radiant and beautiful and enchanting girl in the world, coming forward with hands outstretched, while her more formal mother frowned a little at her enthusiasm . . . or were they both risen to haunt the old house?

But confusion could reign for only a few seconds in Mrs. Oglethorpe's indomitable soul. She threw herself up to her imposing height, and her voice was harsher than usual as she addressed the vision that had confounded her.

"Pardon me. Your likeness to my old friend, Countess Zattiany, startled me. Who are you, may I ask?"

"Does it really matter?" And once more Mrs. Oglethorpe started, although the accent was foreign.

"Yes, it does matter," she said grimly. "That is what I have come to find out."

"Oh!" Again there was a slight lift of the eyebrows. "I had always heard that Americans were unconventional, but hardly that they carried their independence of the conventions so far as to invade the house of a stranger."

"I'll not be put off. Are you Mary Zattiany's daughter?"

For a second there was an expression of broad amusement on the beautiful cold face opposite, but it passed with a slight shrug of the shoulders. "No," she said evenly.

"Then you are you?"

"I do not choose to say—at present." Her tone was as arrogant as her interlocutor's and Mrs. Ogle thorpe bristled.

"What does Trent mean by lying about your presence in this house?"

"Judge Trent respects my wishes."

"Your wishes! You've made a fool of him. But I am Countess Zattiany's oldest friend, and if she has been imposed upon, if she has come to any harm, if you are after her fortune by pretending on the strength of your singular likeness to be her heir, I shall know how to put a stop to it in spite of Judge Trent. I suppose you have never heard of me. My name is Oglethorpe."

"I have heard of Mrs. Oglethorpe—from Countess Zattiany. But she failed to prepare me for your excessively bad manners."

"Manners be damned. I use what manners I choose and I've never done anything else. I repeat to you that Countess Zattiany was the most intimate friend of my youth and for many years after. If she has no one to protect her interests in this country, I shall protect them myself. Don't you suppose I am well aware that if you were in her confidence she would have sent you direct to me. It is the first thing she would have thought of. If you are not an imposter and an adventuress present your credentials and I will ask your pardon."

"Judge Trent has my credentials. Now, if you will excuse ms——"

"I will not excuse you. I will get to the depth of all this mystery. I abominate mystery. It is vulgar and stupid. You will tell me who you are, or I will set the newspapers on your track. They'll soon ferret it out. I've only to say the word."

"Ah!" The lady seemed to falter for a moment. She looked speculatively at the indignant old face opposite, then made a vague little gesture toward her hair, and dropped her eyes. "No," she said softly. "Don't—please." She raised her eyes once more and looked straight into Mrs. Oglethorpe's. The two women stood staring at each other for several seconds. Mrs. Oglethorpe's eyes blinked, her jaw fell. Then she drew herself up in her jmost impressive manner.

"Good day," she said. "Your pardon for the intrusion," and although her voice had trembled, she swept majestically down the hall. The unwilling hostess touched a bell and a footman opened the door.

VI.

Three weeks passed. There were almost twice as many first-nights. "Mary Ogden," as Clavering called her for want of the truth, was at each. She never rose in her seat again, and, indeed, seemed to seek inconspicuousness, but she was always in the second or third row of the orchestra, and she wore a different gown on each occasion. As she entered after the curtain rose and stole out before it went down for the last time, few but those in the adjacent seats and boxes were edified by any details of those charming creations, although it was noticeable that the visiting of both sexes was most active in her neighborhood.

For by this time she was "the talk of the town," or of that important and excessively active minded section of Greater New York represented at first-nights. The columnists had commented on her. One had indited ten lines of free verse in her honor, another had soared on the wings of seventeenth century English into a panegyric on her beauty and her halo of mystery. A poet-editor-wit had cleped her "The Silent Drama." Had it been wartime she would inevitably have been set down as a spy, and as it was there were dark inferences that she was a Bolshevik agent who had smuggled vast sums of money into the country and passed it on to the Reds. There were those who opined she was some rich man's mistress, recently imported, snatched from some victim of the revolution who could no longer afford her. Blonde madonnas were always under suspicion unless you knew all about them. Others, more practical, scoffed at these fancy theories and asserted roundly that she was either a Russian refugee who had sound American or English investments, or some American woman, educated abroad, who knew no one in New York and amused herself at the theatre. Indeed? Why then should an obviously wealhy young woman of as obviously good birth and breeding bring no letters? Something crooked not a doubt of it. A European girl or young widow of position would never come to America without a chaperon; nor an American brought up abroad. A woman with that "air" knows what's what. She's simply put herself beyond the pale and doesn't care. Some impoverished woman of the noblesse who has taken up with a rich man.

"Jumping on the running board of a taxi he told the man to drive like h——l."

The men would have liked to put a detective on the track of every millionaire in town.

Clavering had confided in no one and Mr. Dinwiddie although he had attended a party given by one of the most hospitable of the Sophisticates where the unknown was discussed from cocktail to cocktail and where forgetting his arteries he had befuddled himself at the generous fount had guarded his tongue. To Clavering he had been unable to extend either hope or information. Mrs. Oglethorpe had turned a bleak and rigid countenance upon the friend of her youth when he had called with an eager ear and forbidden him tartly ever to mention the subject to her again.

"Interview must have been devilish unpleasant to curdle poor old Jane like that" he had commented. "No doubt the girl showed her the door. Gad! Jane! But Mary's daughter could do it. None better."

Clavering was deeply disappointed. He turned a scowling back on the gossips rending The Topic to tatters. New York must have a new Topic every season. This girl had arrived in a season of dearth. And unless she were discovered to be living in absolute flagrancy they would throw down the carpet. Some went even further. After all what about . . .

But there seemed to be not the remotest prospect of meeting her nor even of solving the mystery. She had been seen striding around the reservoir in a short skirt and high laced boots of soft pale leather. One triumphant woman had stood next to her at a glove counter and overheard her observe to the clerk in a sweet and rather deep voice with an ineluctably refined —and foreign—accent that gloves were cheaper in New York than in Paris. She had been passed several times in her smart little car and once she had been seen going into the Public Library. Evidently she was no hermit. Several of the Sophisticates had friends in Society and questioned them eagerly but were rewarded only by questions as eager in return.

On the sixth of these first-nights when the unknown slipped quietly from her seat at the end of the last act she saw the aisle in front of her almost blocked. One after another the rows of seats were hurriedly deserted. Clavering as usual was directly behind her but Mr. Dinwiddie forced from his chair many aisles back was swept out with the crowd.

When she reached the foyer she found herself surrounded with men and women whose frank interest was of the same well-bred but artless essence as that afforded a famous actress or prima donna exhibiting herself before the footlights. It was evident that she had a sense of humor for as she made her way slowly toward the entrance a smile twitched her mouth more than once. Clavering thought that she was on the point of laughing outright. But he fumed. "Damn them! They'll scare her off. She'll never come again."

One or two women had vowed they'd speak to her. After all a first-night was a club of sorts. But their courage failed them. The crowd made way for her and she crossed the pavement to wait for her car. Clavering always hoping that some drunken brute would give him the opportunity to succor her followed and stood as close as he dared. Her car drove up and she entered. As it started she turned her head and looked straight at him. And then Clavering was sure that she laughed outright.

He started recklessly after the car plunging between automobiles going in four different directions and jumping on the running board of a taxi told the man to drive like hell toward Park avenue. There was amused recognition in that glance! She had must have noticed him before tonight!

And then he had his chance. To the brave belong the fair.

VII.

He dismissed the taxi at the corner of her street and walked rapidly toward the house. He had no definite object but with the blood of romantic ancestors who had serenaded beneath magnolia trees pounding in his veins he thought it likely he would take up his stand under the opposite lamp-post and remain there all night. The reportorial news-sense died painlessly.

Suddenly to his amazement he saw her run down the steps of her house and disappear into the area. She was once more at the gate when he hurried up to her.

"May I—am I——" he stammered. "Is anything the matter?"

For a moment she had shrunk back in alarm but the narrow silent street between its ramparts of brown stone was bright with moonlight and she recognized him.

"Oh, is it you," she said with a faint smile. "I forgot my key and I cannot make any one hear the bell. The servants sleep on the top floor, and of course like logs. Yes, you can do something. Are you willing to break a window, crawl in, and find your way up to the front door?"

"Watch me!" Clavering forgot that he was saturnine and remote and turning thirty-four. He took the area steps at a bound. Iron gates guarded the basement doors, but the old bars on the windows were easily wrenched out. He lifted his foot, kicked out a pane, found the catch, opened the window and ran up the narrow dark stairs. There was a light in the spacious hall and in another moment he had opened the door. He expected to be dismissed with a word of lofty thanks, but she said in a tone of casual hospitality:

"There are sandwiches in the library and I can give you a whiskey and soda."

She walked with a light swift step down the hall, the narrow tail of her black velvet gown wriggling after her. Clavering followed in a daze, but his trained eye took note of the fine old rugs and carved Italian furniture, two splendid tapestries, and great vases of flowers that filled the air with a drowsy perfume. He had heard of the Ogden house, built and furnished fifty years ago. The couple that had leased it had been childless and it showed little wear. The stairs curving on the left had evidently been recarpeted, but in a very dull red that harmonized with the mellow tints of the old house.

She opened a door at the end of the hall on the right and he found himself in a large library whose walls were covered with books to the ceiling. Dinwiddie had told him that the Ogdens were bookish people and that "Mary's" grandfather had been an eminent jurist. The room was as dark in tone as the hall, but the worn chairs and sofas looked very comfortable. A log was burning on the hearth.

She took a key from a drawer and handed it to him.

"You will find whiskey and a syphon in that cabinet, Mr. Clavering.z I keep them for Judge Trent."

"Mr. Cla——" He came out of his daze. "You know who I am then?"

"But certainly. I am not as reckless as all that."

Her accent was slight but indubious, yet impossible to place. It might be that of a European who spoke many languages, or of an American with a susceptible ear who had lived the greater part of her life abroad. "I was driving one day with Judge Trent and saw you walking with Mr. Dinwiddie."

"Trent—ah!"

He had his first full look into those wise unfathomable eyes. Standing close to her, she seemed somewhat older than he had guessed her to be, although her face was unlined. Probably it was her remarkable poise, her air of power and security—and those eyes! What had they not looked upon? She smiled and poured broth from a thermos bottle.

"You are forgetting your whiskey and soda," she reminded him.

He filled his glass, took a sandwich, and sank into the depths of a leather chair. She had seated herself on an upright throne-like chair opposite. Her black velvet gown was like a vase supporting a subtly moulded flower of dazzling fairness. She wore the three rows of pearls that had excited almost as much speculation as her mysterious self. As she drank her mild beverage she looked at him over the brim of her cup and once more appeared to be on the verge of laughter.

"Will you tell me who you are?" asked Clavering bluntly. "This is hardly fair, you know."

"Mr. Dinwiddie really managed to coax nothing from Judge Trent? He called three times, I understand."

"Not a word."

PUBLIC MEMORIAL SERVICE CROWDED IN CAMPBELLFORD

Major Belford Made An Eloquent Plea For Remembrance of Soldiers and For Unselfishness in Life.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 12. — A memorial public meeting was held in the Regent theatre on Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the Northumberland regimental band. Major Bygott acted as chairman. The programme was opened by singing "Onward Christian Soldiers. Rev. Bennett announced the hymns. Captain Troud, of the Salvation Army, made an excellent prayer, full of sympathy and tenderness for the friends of the fallen heroes, after which Mr. Jamieson, of the Irish Rifles, rendered a solo, "The Tempter." The scripture reading was taken by Rev. Elliot, who read the 46th Psalm. Then the band played "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," after which Major Belford, of Codrington, gave an excellent addressed. He impressed upon the minds of the audience that the souls of those who sacrificed themselves are in the hands of God. They went through pain and trials and troubles. "You mothers and wives that have lost sons and husbands, they are not dead. We die when we don't accomplish something for God. They have done their part for God. Think of those who returned almost disabled, men who were gassed, men who went through shell fire. Those who were men."

Major Belford said he had heard too much sneering about returned men. They sacrificed and thus had as bright a future as we had. "Be tender in your judgment for these men. Things are in a more upset condition today than they were in 1914. We are living over a powder magazine. The German emperor decried that he was emporer of the nations. The world for the Germans was their thought. The world now is selfishness. Try to banish selfishness out of our nation. Let us try to show the world that the spirit of Christianity is still love. God is an ever-present help in time of trouble. We believe that somewhere there is a great supreme power. Trouble is all around us today. Everywhere the red propaganda is being spread. Put yourself under the personal help of God. The minute you try to put something else in the place of God your nation goes to pieces. If we forget God we will be forgotten by God."

Major Bygott thanked Major Belford very kindly for his excellent address. Mr. Parish and Mr. Collinson then sang a duet, "The Battle Eve." Both men have excellent voices. Mr. Parish is a veteran of the Kitchener army.

Mr. C. L. Owen, ex-M. P., thanked those who took part in the programme. The meeting closed by singing "Nearer My God to Thee."

DYSPEPSIA WAS SO BAD

Could Hardly Eat Anything

Mrs. C. Stone, Nanticoke, Ont., writes:—"Some time ago I had a very serious attack of dyspepsia, and was also troubled with gas on my stomach. I could hardly eat anything, and very often had pains after meals. I had used different medicine, but they didn't seem to do me any good. At last I happened to run on the track of Burdock Blood Bitters, and after using it for a short time I felt a lot better. I continued its use until I was completely relieved and now I am ready to recommend it to anyone troubled as I was."

SPORTSMEN START DRIVE FOR BIG GAME PRESERVE

CHICAGO Nov. 13 (Associated Press) —If a national bird game and fish preserve is made of approximately 14 000 acres of bottom marsh lands of the upper Mississippi now advocated by business men conservationists sportsmen and the Izaak Walton League of America one of the greatest breeding grounds in the United States will be founded according to Will H. Dilg president of the league.

The 300 miles of land stretching from Lake Pepin Minnesota to Rock Island Illinois on the south constitute the most prolific spawning grounds for all warm water game and food fishes Mr. Dilg said as well as an exceptional breeding section for small game mammals and the greatest hatchery for birds in the country. He asserted that in 1921 nearly 24 000 000 fish were rescued from the land-locked waters of the lands of this region which the biological survey estimated at a value of $1 200 000.

Agitation toward setting aside this section as a preserve began after a group of real estate operators proposed to dyke and drain the Winneshiek bottoms of the Mississippi river lying on the Wisconsin side between De Soto and Lynxville The former department had granted permission to drain the land when it came to the attention of the league and an appeal to the supreme court of Wisconsin temporarily held up the plan according to Mr. Dilg.

Cobourg and District

COBOURG, Nov. 10.—There is a very long docket at the sessions of the Supreme Court here still in session before Mr. Justice Kelly. An action was brought by Mr. Wm. Stewart, a man who came to this locality from British Guiana with his wife to take up farming, and who purchased a farm in Clarke Township from Mr. Robinson, through a real estate agent, Mr. Thos. Patterson, of Orono, it is alleged. Plaintiff brought suit against the defendant, Robinson, to recover damages alleging that the farm had been misrepresented to him in various ways. This case occupied the three first days of the court and a number of witnesses were called. Plaintiff alleged that he told the man he bought the farm from, and the agent, that he knew nothing of farms or farming. However, he purchased the place, paid $2,000 down, and had given a mortgagefor $4,000. His crops did not materialize as he expected, it is further alleged, and plaintiff claims that some of the ground was stony and that there were other disadvantages. The orchard did not bear either. The first payment on the mortgage became due, it is alleged, and having got such poor returns from his crop, and there being about 15 acres of bush on the farm, he is stated to have advertised wood lots for sale. Shortly afterwards, it is alleged, an injunction was served on him to stop him from selling the wood, and shortly after this the mortgage was foreclosed. He claimed damages amounting to over $4,000, including the cash payment of $2,000.

Mr. Robinson and the agent, Mr. Thomas Patterson, claimed there had been no misrepresentation. The jury, after being out about two hours, returned a verdict for the plaintiff of $2,200 damages.

Judge Kelly granted a 15 days' stay of proceedings.

McCubbin vs. McCubbin.—An action for alimony was settled between the parties. Anderson and McMaster, counsel for plaintiff, G. A. Payne for defendant.

The plaintiff claimed that apples were not graded according to samples supplied. This case was postponed until the spring assizes. W. A. Campbell for plaintiff, D. H. Chisholm, K.C., for Mr. Brown.

Plan Your Home

CLEVELAND, Nov. 13. — Leaving the lighting more or less to chance does not make for a well planned home, says Mrs. Margaret S. Fullerton, lighting engineer at the Nela research laboratories for the General Electric Company here.

"We give a great deal of thought to the architectural plans for our homes, but we leave the lighting more or less to chance," she comments.

Therefore, Mrs. Fullerton offers housewives these helpful suggestions:

"For practical lighting in the living-room there is nothing like lamps. They can be easily transported, and they are decorative. With the inverted globe all glare which is so trying to the eyes can be avoided, yet the light can be thrown directly on your work or book. Colored shades will diffuse a pleasant light in the room, though only flame-tinted bulbs should be usee.

Diffused Light

"There are many forms of diffused lights, such as vases, urns, floor standards, cornices and wall boxes, but ethey must always be supplemented by localized lights in lamps or wall brackets. Candles, except on either side of a dressing-room mirror, are merely for decoration.

"Lamps in various parts of the room have the added advantage of being turned on and off at will and thus making fanciful lights and shadows.

"For the dining-room, a light over the table is the most satisfactory means of illumination, as the table should be the most highly illuminated part of the room. There is something conducive to cheerfulness in the distribution of light that hems the diners with semi-darkness, for this concentrates their attention upon one another. Such illumination possesses the elemental virtue which goes back to the primitive joys of the camp fire.

Soft Shadows

"This light may be direct or indirect, for the frosted bulb, or inverted bowl protects the eyes from the annoying glare of the old-time dome. Indirect lighting should always be supplemented by some direct lighting in the room, as it produces no shadows and leaves the faces of the diners without character. Modeling requires direct light. You will find that jewels do not sprakle, nor evening dresses show to advantage if there are no high lights.

"Beautiful pictures are a luxury," continued this young lighting expert, "but almost anyone can afford a plaster figure in a rounded niche in the wall which may be brought into relief by means of light. An inexpensive statuette or bust will look like choice marble when flooded with rose or violet rays.

"For all of these effects the home builder must learn that the initial cost of plenty of outlets and switches well repays the expenditure."

Air Mail Train.—A "flying mail train" has just been developed by English aviation experts. It is capable of staying in the air 24 hours. In its mail chambers, sorters will be able to carry on their work just as the clerks on railway postal cars do.

JUST A HINT IF YOU INTEND VISITING PARIS

By JOHN O'BRIEN.

PARIS (By Mail to United Press).—When you visit a Montmartre cabaret or dance hall, cafe, restaurant, and watch the ultra rouged and powdered blondes and brunettes gently but firmly urging their gallant cavaliers to the purchase of champagne, don't imagine for a moment the ladies are doing it for love of the wine or even to be on good terms with the owner of the establishment. They are doing it because they have to. If they don't succeed they lose out.

All the places where tourists amuse themselves in the unstilly night have a fixed rule governing the admission of girls who come there unaccompanied, but hope to leave on the arm of some generous soul. At Maxim's, for instance, the manager must get three thousand francs, or about $200, before a "dancing girl" can frequent the place. The price varies from that amount to a thousand francs or as low as 500 for places in Montmartre.

This is not all. Two bottles of champagne, at $5 to $10, must be consumed at her table every evening. If she can induce a customer to pay for them—and she usually does—so much the better for her. In that case these two bottles are charged to her at about $1.50 each and she gets the profit between that and the amount paid by the customer. The "house" depends on the champagne sold after that for its profit. In many places the girls must also watch out for the sale of cigarettes. That is why they all smoke or pretend to smoke the most expensive brands of imported cigarettes at anywhere from a dollar to two dollars a package.

Business is business in Montmartre.

SHOULD WOMEN KNOW.

Should women know the whole races now living have never seen a case of cancer, tuberculosis, goitre, heart, liver or kidney disease and that science attributes their immunity to the foods they eat? Surely yes, since women know that these diseases are rampant among civilized races whose foods differ radically.

Races who know nothing of "denatured" white flour, polished rice, refined cereals, white sugar, etc., but who live upon nature's whole grains, milk, eggs, nuts, beans, vegetables and fruits are free from the above "denatured" foods, they soon die out with our dread diseases.

The greatest curse of civilized man is the refining of the "Protective Substances" out of his grain foods.

Roman Meal contains three whole grains. It is rich in the "Protective Substances" refined out of flour, other cereals, rice, sugar, etc. It keeps the blood non-acid, "cool," and invigorating, being the only alkaline cereal.

Blood should be kept naturally alkaline by using alkaline foods, but flour, other cereals, meats, fats and sweets are "Excess Acid" and largely consumed by civilized races. Might they not cause disease? Science says they do, because they are acid-formers and "Deficient" in "Protective growth and repair substances." Acid foods heat the blood. Roman Meal is alkaline enough to correct the acids in flour, other cereals, meats, and sweets. Use it as porridge, muffins, pancakes, johnny cake, etc., or mix with white flour in the proportion of 25% in all domestic baking. Roman Meal is sold by your grocer.

MARMORA VILLAGE AND THE DISTRICT

MARMORA, Nov. 13.—On Saturday, the ladies of the Anglican churches of Marmora and Trinity, held a very successful sale of home-made cooking in the council chamber. There was a quick sale for the cooking and fowl. The ladies made over $50.

On Sunday afternoon a mass meeting was held in the town hall to commemorate Armistice Day. The service followed the programme of one of the services in England, held on one of the first anniversaries of Armistice Day. The Rev. P. C. Watson had charge of the meeting. A choir of volunteers from the different churches of Marmora and Deloro led in the singing.

The reeve, Mr. Airhart, spoke for a few moments very fittingly on the significance of the day, being both Thanksgiving and Armistice Day. He also spoke of the nearness of the spirits of the boys who had sacrificed their lives overseas for us. Mr. Watson took as his text the words, "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable," I. Corinthians, 15:19. Mr. Watson spoke of our belief in eternal life and explained that if we believed in the Christ without the resurrection we would be more unhappy than the man who believed in no God. He gave the arguments for and against the resurrection of Christ.

In the first place we have all the instances where Jesus returned after his burial to different people. To Mary Magdalene at the tomb, to the disciples when Thomas was absent, again when Thomas was present, and on the road to Emmaus he appeared to two of the disciples.

Then again we have the evidence of the empty tomb. If the body of Christ had just been taken who would have done it? Neither friends nor enemies. If enemies had done it they would have produced the body when the disciples had begun teaching the gospel of resurrection. There was no reason why his friends should take away the body because they, themselves, had placed it there and had performed the first part of the preparations for burial. Then, too, they came again to finish these preparations so evidently they had not stolen away the body.

St. Paul started out to Damascus to persecute the Christians but on the way there something happened and he no longer persecuted them but rather cast in his lot with them and from that time on gave up everything for his new religion. Now Paul was an educated man and he must have had a reason for doing this. A Christ with no hope of future life would have been no reason so he must have believed in the risen Christ.

St. Peter, who had been always a trifle afraid of criticism or punishment, stood up at the Pentecost and preached to those who had cried, "Crucify Him" at Christ's trial. He was a changed man for he had a different idea of Christ.

There are many more proofs for belief in the resurrection of Christ but against it there has been formed what is called the "Swooning theory," that is that Christ swooned on the cross and when put in the tomb he regained consciousness and disappeared. However, the soldiers had pierced his side and would have broken his legs but they were sure that he was dead. They had to give their own lives if a prisoner was not dead when he was taken from the cross so there was no chance of them allowing him to live.

Then there is the theory that the story of the resurrection of Jesus was all a myth. However, the disciples would have given their lives to teach a myth which they had formed themselves.

As we review these arguments for and against, we feel that we are right in standing for the resurrection. If such is the case we shall meet these soldier boys of ours in a time not so very far distant.

Our land must be Christian if it is to be the best kind of a nation. These boys gave their lives to defend their country and we also must defend our country that it may be a Christian land.

This is Thanksgiving Day. We have received great material benefits and for these we are thankful. We are thankful also for the spiritual benefits we have received. We are thankful for and proud of the history of our land but we should also be more thankful for the fact that we believe in eternal life. The meeting was closed by the singing of Kipling's "Recessional," during which the veterans marched out, followed by the relatives of the soldiers who had paid the supreme sacrifice. They then marched to the Roman Catholic cemetery where the graves of the soldiers were decorated. Then they went to the Protestant cemetery.

The large crowds showed the feeling of the people with regard for Armistice Day and the whole service was one which will not be forgotten for some time.

The Rev. Herrington, of Cordova, preached in the Methodist Church on Sunday evening. His subject was, "How Can We Help Missions?"

In introduction he spoke of Christ's life and teachings as the best example of a true Christian life. His teaching was, "Go yet into all the world and preach the gospel."

A few years ago we had this slogan, "The world for Christ in this generation." We now see the impossibility of so speedy an accomplishment of this task but we can help in three ways, first by giving, second by praying, specific prayers are more effectual than general prayers. Third, by living the Christian life. The misfortune of the present day is that our religion is separated from our everyday life. The foreigners coming to our shores learn our educational systems, our business methods, our national life, but they do not find the religious life of our nation so effective.

To help our foreign brothers we must live the "Jesus life." Mr. Herrington gave in conclusion some very forceful illustrations from addresses heard at the convention recently held in Napanee.

There was a great deal of competition on Saturday amongst the public school children as to who would sell the greatest number of poppies. Everyone in town was tagged and some of the more ambitious youngsters even went out to Deloro that they might be first on the list.

POPPIES GLOW IN LAKEFIELD

More Than $80 Collected on Saturday — Walton-Moore Nuptials on Holiday.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 13—The annual Poppy day was held on Saturday in Lakefield and a bevy of bright young girls worked very hard ot their volutary service of distibuting poppies. So well did they succeed, that only rarely did one meet a man woman or child not wearing the scarlet flower of remembrance. For nearly twelve hours most of these girls worked with a cheery spirit not at all unlike that of the soldier, in the trenches. There was a much greater demand in the village for the large poppies than the small ones which speaks well for the generous spirit of the people.

The young girls who sold poppies were: Misses Robeen Darcy, Margaret Bissonette Constance Stuart. Lileon Stuart, Grace Watson, Inze Johnson, Fern Bolton, Helen Simpson and Ida Webster.

The financial returns were very gratifying amounting to well over $800, the winning team were Misses Roleen Darcy and Margaret Bissonette with $29.08 in their box. This is the fourth time that these young ladies have headed the list on tag day and they are the recipients of congratulations from their friends.

Dance on Nov. 22

The social event of this month will undoubtedly be the Fireman's Masquerade Dance and already the young people are planning for new and striking costumes. There is nothing which affords as much amusement as a Masquerade as the onlookers can have quite as much fun as those in costume. It is to be held on November 22nd and there is no doubt that there will be a splendid crowd.

Well Known Athlete Wins a Real Victory

"Tanlac built me up ten pounds and put me to feeling like an athlete in perfect training," declared James Gates, 101 Auburn St., Peterboro, Ont., recently. Mr. Gates or 'Jimmy' as he is familiarly known to nearly everybody in Peterboro, is athletic and swimming instructor at the popular summer resort, Inverlea Park.

"I had begun to think Old Father Time was creeping up on me, for my stomach was disordered, my appetite was gone and what little food I forced down disagreed with me. I lost a good many nights' sleep from nervousness and got so run-down I felt weak and short of breath every time I went swimming.

"But, sir, I haven't had a touch of indigestion or lost an hour's sleep since taking Tanlac, I eat hearty, feel strong as an ox and when I finish a long swim, I feel fresh as a dairy. I always keep a bottle of Tanlac handy."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37-million bottle sold.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

Sleep is nature's great medicine for rest and rejuvenation of the body.

There are a number of hygienic principles and psychological facts involved if one wishes to make sleep a profound study. But for the laymen, the facts are easy to state and to understand.

The body's condition approaching sleep is a most important factor. Try to relax completely, throw aside care and make up your mind to repose. Avoid excitement before the regular scheduled sleep hour.

It is best to be regular in sleep and eight hours should be the minimum.

Seek sleep preferably with a stomach practically empty. If you have to induce sleep by eating, it is like putting off a task which only waits to bother you later. Food taken in this way diverts the blood supply from the head to the stomach, which may break your rest later.

Cleanliness is a great factor in inducing sleep. A warm bath of only a few minutes' duration is a wonderful aid.

Worry and fear must be cast aside if sleep is to be deep and refreshing. They cause dreams which disturb with frequent awakenings and often leave a headache in the morning.

Do not sleep on your back with arms extended above your head. The nerve centres in the back and spinal cord often become tired or cause restlessness in this position. Another bad effect of sleeping on the back is that it seems to induce mouth breathing, producing dryness of the mucous lining of the mouth and throat, hence restlessness, coughing and broken rest.

The best position is on the right side or prone, with the right arm at your side and the left arm resting easily and slightly above the head. Keep the legs and spine straight.

Remember that one-third of your life should be spent in sleep.

A hard mattress is much better than a soft bed.

Do not sleep with too much covering; on the other hand avoid sleeping cold, as this causes restlessness and light, unhealthy sleep.

Leave the windows open winter and summer.

Why Stay Fat? You Can Reduce

The answer of most fat people is that it is too hard, too troublesome and too dangerous to force the weight down. Marmola Prescription Tablets overcome all these difficulties. They are absolutely harmless, entail no dieting or exercise, and have the added advantage of cheapness. A box is sold at one dollar by all druggists the world over, or send the price direct to the Marmola Co., 4612 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. Now that you know this, you have no excuse for being fat, but can reduce steadily and easily without going through long sieges of tiresome exercise and starvation diet or fear of bad effects.

BLAMES TREATY FOR BERLIN GAS PRICES

By CARL D. GROAT.

BERLIN (By Mail to United Press).—Anry patrons of the Berlin municipal gasworks have lodged so many complaints of "black-mail extortion and profiteering" against the institution that the State Attorney is now considering an action against the company.

The complaints arise from the fact that the gas works demanding a price vastly above American figures adds insult to injury by demanding at the time of reading the then current price instead of taking the price prevalen when the gas was used.

The gas works maintains that with coal far over the world market price of 22 gold marks a ton and with an acrobatic mark they must take into consideration the devaluation occurring between the time of consumption and payment.

In any event gas for an ordinary household now costs anywhere from $10 to $20 a month—a figure which most Berlin families are utterly unable to meet.

Berlin residents now unable to heat a little water for bathing are sorer at the gasworks than at the Versailles treaty if such a thing is possible in German psychology.

Incidentally the Versailles treaty gets part of the blame for the gasprice.

PACKINGHOUSE OFFICIAL DELIGHTED WITH DRECO

Manager of Canadian Packing Company's Store at George and Brock Streets, Peterborough, Speaks Highly of New Remedy. Found it Splendidly Effective as a System Builder and Recommends Its Use.

Mr. James Jackson, of 504 Bolivar St., Peterboro, Ont., who occupies a prominent position in the business circles of that city, achieved such splendid result with one bottle of Dreco that he volunteers the following statement:

"For some time past," says Mr. Jackson, "my system has been in a run-down condition and while there was nothing seriously wrong with me, I continually had a tired, worn-out feeling that I couldn't rid myself of. I didn't have any energy to go about my work. My appetite was very poor and the food that I ate fermented in my stomach, causing gas risings and belching. After work, I had no energy left, not even to get ready to go out of an evening.

"I was also greatly troubled by constipation, which disappeared with my first bottle of Dreco. This one bottle has made a wonderful difference in me altogether. My appetite is splendid. I eat and enjoy three hearty meals a day and am never troubled with indigestion afterwards. That tired, worn-out feeling has left me entirely and in its place I have renewed vigor and energy. My bowels are regular every day.

"I am firmly convinced that Dreco is a great health builder and I have already recommended it to several of my friends."

Put your digestive system in proper working order and all is well. The safest and most reliable method of doing this is by taking Dreco, the famous herbal remedy that has won the approbation of thousands of responsible Canadians, many of them right here in Peterboro. Dreco contains no mercury, potash or habit forming drugs, being prepared solely from herbs, roots, bark and leaves of field and forest.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterborough by Bond's Drug Store. Go there to-day and ask for Mr. Vaughn, the Dreco Expert, and let him explain the merits of this great remedy. There is no charge and he will tell you honestly if he believes Dreco will benefit you. Dreco is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, in Campbellford, by J. E. Birks, and by a good druggist everywhere.

OPENING OF THE NEW ARMY TEMPLE

Saturday Evening the Salvation Army Temple Was Officially Opened

Saturday evening at 7.45 the new Salvation Army Temple was officially opened up. The key was turned by Commissioner Charles Sowton of Toronto who gave a short address in which he said it was a great honour to him to be chosen to open the doors to the new temple. He also thanked God with a short prayer and said that he was opening the doors to a place where everybody was welcome to pass through.

Mr. G. N. Gordon presided.

Brigadier Moore who gave a short address said the Salvation Army has always appreciated its many supporters and are now very grateful to them for this new temple. The greatest crisis that ever happened here was a year ago when the local temple was completely destroyed by fire.

After the fire Mr. Gordon was one of the first to help the Army followers. We are delighted to have him with us to-night, said the speaker.

Mr. Gordon followed with an address in which he stated that this was a night of thanks giving and that everybody in Peterborough should be very thankful that the Army is once more on its feet and in a position to do more good in the city. After the fire, Mr. Braund came to me with tears in his eyes, said Mr. Gordon. As soon as I saw him I knew that he felt very bad, about it and so did many others who are not members of the Army. I congratulate the army on what they have done and what they are doing. The first conference held to arrange to raise money to build a new temple was held in the Mission at which it was decided to hold a banquet at which all the leading citizens were to be invited. This was done and it proved very successful The army has helped all of us and when it comes time again to support them I think we all should take the burden on our shoulders equally and help them. This is the fifth anniversary of the World War and the first anniversary of the constuction of this temple.

Brigadeer Jennings property secretary in a short addres, said that though the goodness of God and the support of the people of Peterboro, we have this beautiful edifice. He also gave the financial report. At the time of the fire not only was the building destroyed but about $8,000 worth of band instruments. The band were soon taken care of and they have a new set of instruments. About thirty thousand dollars has been expended on building and there is about seven or eight thousand yet to be paid. There is about seven thousand dolars promised which has not been received by the army. He felt sure the citizens would live up to their promise and he thanked the many supporters.

Judge E. C. S. Huycke congratulated the army on the showing they have made during the past year. He stated that everybody took the fire as a sad catastrophe. The army has done great work in Peterboro, principally among the downfallen. He stated that their past was good, the present better and future will be best of all. The speaker congratulated the members on their past work and expected the present to be better still.

Brigadeer Walton, said fourteen years ago Mrs. Walton and I were stationed at Peterboro and at the hands of the comrades received nothing but kindness for two years while we were here. At that time we lived in the Army temple which was not much like the one that I am now in. I congratulate the Peterboro army on their new temple.

"I stand here on this platform with my heart and soul full of thankfulness to God," said Adjutant A. Smith. After the fire one year ago we came, "bandsmen and comrades" and knelt in the ashes and water and prayed to God to re-establish us again." Adjutant Smith thanked citizens and Salvation comrades for their support and Commissioner Sowton for the five thousand dollars he contributed to the army. We want to prove ourselves worthy to the citizens of Peterboro, said the Adjutant.

"Thank God and take courage," said Commissioner C. Sowton. In all conditions of life we will find something to thank God for, When we saw the building go down our hearts were full of despair but now we are all happy and thankful again. We thank God here to-night. In one of our missions we had a real good evening. A large crowd were present and there was not a person kneeling at the Mercy Seat, I got up on the platform and sang over and over again, "Higher than the Heavens" till the Mercy Seat was full of men and women.

Major R. C. Braund, said the commissioner gave five thousand dollars fir which we are very thankful but we must not forget the many other people who helped us very generously. When you help the Army you are helping a corps that is trying to lift up. We try to put the spirit of Christ in all our work. When the building was burned down we were broken-hearted and we prayed to God for a new temple now we have not only what we asked for, but a far greater one than we expected. We now thank Him for this beautiful edifice.

Commissioner Sowton then expressed many thanks to Mr. Gordon Judge Huycke and other speakers and also the many friends and supporters of the Salvation Army.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—In these days when times have so changed and ministers are preaching so much from the book of human life instead of from the Bible, which the scholars have condemned, it is a lovely thing to go to an old-fashioned tea-meeting like that at Mark Street. The pastor, Rev. Bamforth, said that when ministers ceased preaching from the Bible he was willing to be called home. The signs of a big revival of the good old faith are showing. Halleluiah!

Washington, D.C.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation which a physician said I would have to have for a very bad case of female trouble. My system was all run-down for two years after my little girl was born. Then I read of your wonderful medicine and decided to try it. I could hardly drag one foot after the other, and after taking six bottles of the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I now do all my housework, also washing and ironing, and do not know what real trouble is. My health is fine, and I weigh 140 pounds. When I started taking it I weighed 97 pounds. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any one who is suffering from female trouble or is run down. You may use this testimonial for I am only too glad to let suffering women know what the Vegetable Compound did for me."—Mrs. IDA HEWITT, 1529 Penna. Ave. S.E., Washington, D.C.

Such letters from women in every section of this country prove beyond question the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

PETERBORO RACES WON BY DISTRICT RUNNERS FOR THE FIRST TIME

Ernest Edgell of Cobourg and James Larmer of Millbrook Respective Winners of Senior and Junior Road Races — Ding - Dong Battle in Senior.

H. TRANTER SECOND.

Road Race Results.

Senior—(ten miles).
1st—Ernest Edgell, Cobourg.
2nd—Herbert Tranter.
3rd—Alf. Edgell, Cobourg.
4th—Percy Luther.
5th—Ira Dundas.
6th—Dick Bates.
7th—W. H. Campion, Norwood.
8th—Fiiman Holland.
Time—57 minutes 31 2-5 seconds.

Juniors—(five miles).
1st—Jas Larmer, Millbrook.
2nd—John Holland.
3rd—Roy Lewis.
4th—Bob Sturgeon.
5th—Johnny Marchen.
Time—30 minutes 25 2-5 seconds.

For the first time in the history of Peterboro's Thanksgiving Day road races invading runners from the district made a big hole in the prizes.

Ernest Edgell of Cobourg won the senior event over the ten mile course from Lakefield defeating Herb Tranter, the 1921 senior victor, by a few feet, while his brother Alfie Edgell, several minutes behind the leaders, was an easy third.

James Larmer of Millbrook breezed home in front of the junior field a block or more ahead of John Holland, the nearest contender.

The senior race was a heart-breaking struggle between two of the gamest runners who have ever paced the road from Lakefield in all the years of the Examiner races down to the present management and auspices of the Peterboro Amateur Athletic Association. Elbow to elbow practically the whole way Ernie Edgell and Herb. Tranter fought it out through the swift, killing sprint of the last two blocks and were still even at the Murray Street corner, a few feet from the tape. And then, halt away over the crossing Tranter cracked under the strain and yielded the victory to Edgell who shot across the line about twenty feet in front. His time for the flat ten miles was 57 minutes 31 2-5 seconds.

"Excellent time and a great race", said Charlie Thorpe, who knew the route well of old, except that as the P.A.A.A. official he lengthened it nearly 300 yards to a full ten miles.

"Edgell's time comes very close to Albert Smoke's record of 54 minutes 59 seconds for the old course," said Mr. Thorpe who roughly estimated that for the slightly shorter distance Edgell's time would have been 55 minutes, 30 seconds, or a little more than half a minute less than Smoke's performance.

Edgell has had considerable experience in Hamilton and Toronto where he ran at the Exhibition and also in the Ward marathon. Tranter gave him a battle all the way down the long road, refusing to be shaken off by Edgell's early sprints, and in turn shooting out in front as he carried the pace to the visitor.

Last year's race over a ten mile course on the Gravel road was 1 hour, 2 minutes, 42 seconds. Both Bates and Johnny Ward were regarded as strong favorites with Tranter, but Ward couldn't work up speed and Bates traveled along for miles with a cramp that would have justified his quitting. He revived a few miles up the road and passed several runners including Ward.

The juniors started slowly and Larmer wasn't pressed to win when he finally drew away from the bunch. At that his time of 30 minutes 25 2-5 seconds was better than Stan Stacey's 31 minutes 40 seconds last year.

With the Seniors.

In the first stage of the senior race, down through Lakefield and past the House of Refuge to Whelan's corners, the pack was still fairly close together although it was beginning to break and string out with several stragglers several hundred yards down the road. A cramp in the side caught John Murphy within the first mile, and for him the rest of the race was a motor ride.

Turning south the Edgell brothers and Tranter were out in front, and in the long stretch down to the "gooseneck turn" and further on to Nassau the order of the finish was gradually determined. Ernie Edgell and Tranter opened up a lead which was gradually extended as they hit up a pace that, according to the speedometer of the official automobile, reached twelve miles an hour and a little better.

Half way home, at the five-mile post Ernie Edgell was thirty yards ahead of Tranter, and Alf Edgell was two hundred yards down the road with Dick Bates another two hundred yards farther on and going badly with a cramp. He was in pain, and seemed to be on the verge of quitting; but he plugged along, dropping back in the ruck, until he got down near the filtration plant where his distress left, and he recovered approximately half a mile.

Behind Bates at the five mile post was Percy Luther, running strong but finding the pace geared up too high for him. Ira Dundas was a hundred yards behind Luther and Johnny Ward was trailing Dundas.

Sporting Spirit.

Down the long stretch to Nassau Alfie Edgell steadily lost ground as Tranter and Ernie Edgell breezed along the road both of them apparently fresh and with plenty of reserve power. Several times Jack Pilling was waiting with refreshment for Tranter, but Herb declined it until nearing Nassau he took half an orange from Pilling and passed it over to Edgell who was running beside him. The Cobourg man sucked up some of the mild stimulant, and handed the half portion back to Tranter who finished it.

These two clocked off mile after mile almost in step, except that Edgell ran with short, easy, almost pattering steps, while Tranter used a longer stride. He responded to every spurt, and occasionally moved out in front, testing the Cobourg man's staying power, but failing to shake him off.

At Nassau the road was lined with several hundred spectators, and down the rest of the course of the city the flock of bicyclists and motor cars steadily increased. Edgell and Tranter maintained their pace without a falter as they followed the street car track.

At Edinburgh street came the first spurt with both still brushing elbows. George street was lined with spectators from Antrim street down to the Y.M.C.A., crowding out on to the boulevards and pavement in the last block.

The Finish.

At London street they started the final sprint. Edgell broke away, and in a stride Tranter overtook him, and for two blocks they were abreast, running with the last wraps off in one of the most strenuous finishes ever seen in Peterboro. At Murray street, twenty feet away from the tape, Tranter eased up, exhausted, and Edgell dashed into the group of judges, Tranter following a few feet behind. He fell into outstretched arms as he finished the race he had fought out over the whole course of ten miles right up to the Murray street crossing. The Cobourg man, after the spurt from London street, had the final punch that carried him through the gruelling, driving finish, with barely enough reserve power to grasp victory from his plucky competitor a scant twenty feet from the tape.

The rest of the race was a procession of Alf Edgell, Luther, Ira Dundas, Bates, Campion and Holland filing in, most of them apparently fresh, but many blocks and minutes behind the leaders.

Doug. Loomis handled the junior race and all the contestants were given full use of the Y.M.C.A. facilities.

Larmer's Victory.

Out of the dozen runners in the junior event to be sent away from Nassau by Starter D. Loomis, five finished and the honors went to Jim Larmer, the big seventeen-year-old youngster from Millbrook. Larmer turned in a decisive victory, finding the tape a block in advance of Johnny Holland who took second place well in advance of Roy Lewis, who ran under the colors of All Saints A.A. Next came Bob Sturgeon one of Peterboro's youngest athletes. Johnny Marchen was the last runner to get home. Cripps and Marchen came down George street abreat but the former fell out approaching McDonnell street.

Lewis led the field to Argyle street, when Holland sprinted to the front with Larmer and the other runners well bunched. Larmer who had taken plenty of time to size up the opposition decided to forge ahead and quickly overtaking Lewis and Holland, went into the lead and gradually drew away to win his first big race. The Millbrook lad showed a nice style and he finished strong.

LAKEFIELD HOCKEY PLANS UNSETTLED

May Not Enter Junior Team in O.H.A. Group, Confining Interest to Intermediates.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 13.—The baseball season closed just as the hunting season opened, and when the local nimrods come home laden with game and many new stories, the next month will be spent in lining up the winter sports. The Curling Club will probably meet early in December to make plans for the season, and the local hockey enthusiasts are already planning for big doings. There appears to be a doubt as to whether the village will enter two teams in the O.H.A., as it has not proved very satisfactory during the past two seasons. Local players appear to believe that there will be an intermediate team and no junior team this year. Two O.H.A. teams are rather a large undertaking for the village, and one good team with lots of "punch" could probably do more than two teams, which would strain the resources to the limit. However, time will tell.

There appears to be no doubt at all that the Lakefield District Hockey League, which was under the management of Rev. A. W. MacKenzie and Dr. M. P. Kennedy, will be a strong feature of the winter's sport. The W. H. Casement trophy was won last year by Warsaw in a game which was attended by a record crowd of cheering fans. The interest in the league never lagged and many outsiders came to the games, as eight towns entered.

The junior championship and the MacKenzie trophy went last year to "Dad" Morin's own team, "Rink Rats," and this league will probably be enlarged somewhat this season. There is a prospect of having plenty of hockey matches.
